Slayer Victim Identified As New York Girl

College Coed Thought To Have Been Hitching

The girl whose naked body was found shot through the head and stomach in a motor home on Highway 101 in Novato yesterday has been identified as Patricia Dollinger, 21, of Pittsford, N.Y.

Identification was made through papers found in her wallet in the mobile home of Donald E. Wagner, 39, of Redwood City, who was being held in Marin County Jail on suspicion of murder. He is to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

The dead girl was a student at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio where she had just completed her junior year.

Novato police theorized she had been hitchhiking, since a cardboard sign lettered "Portland" also was found in the vehicle.

Sources in Rochester, N.Y., said Miss Dollinger was a "quiet pleasant girl, not at all the hippie type."

According to neighbors, she and her brother, Lewis Dollinger III, drove to Colorado last month, where she attended an "Outward Bound" leadership and survival course near Denver.

Then Miss Dollinger came to California to visit friends in Berkeley. Apparently she was hitchhiking from the East Bay to visit more friends in Portland, Ore., when the fatal attack happened.

The coed was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dollinger of Pittsford, N.Y., a suburb of Rochester. Her father is a director and consultant in a family firm called the Dollinger Corp., manufacturers of commercial and industrial filters.

She also is survived by a younger sister.

The family was not expected to come to California, and funeral will be held in Pittsford.

An autopsy was conducted yesterday at Redwood Chapel in Novato, and Marin County coroner's officers said she had been dead for 36 to 48 hours when her body was discovered at 8 a.m. yesterday.

She apparently died of gunshot wounds to the head, although she was also shot in the stomach. The coroner's office said the young woman had not been sexually molested.

Miss Dollinger's body was nude, except for a sweater rolled round her head, stuffed under a sofa bunk in Wagner's motor home, which was abandoned on the shoulder of Highway 101 near Novato Creek. A .45 caliber gun was nearby.

Wagner, who was being held in jail in lieu of $250,000 bail gave a Redwood City address. Redwood City police said today they have no records on him.

His arrest came after a bizarre chain of events yesterday morning. According to Novato police Lt. Tony Stoutt, a man phoned the crisis unit of San Francisco General Hospital at about 8 a.m., and said police would find a body hidden in a motor home on Highway 101 in Novato.

Attendants at the crisis center kept him talking while another employee called Novato police, who traced the call to a pay phone at the Berkeley Farms restaurant in Novato.

By the time police arrived at the restaurant, Wagner had called a cab and gone to the Community Mental Health Center at Marin General Hospital.

Officers dressed in hospital gowns arrested Wagner at the center, where he was reportedly suffering from an overdose of Thorazine, a tranquilizer.

A spokesman for the crisis center at the Community Mental Health Center said today that Wagner had never been a patient there and that a report that he had which appeared in yesterday's Independent-Journal was in error.

He said that officials of the center yesterday had refused to comment on whether Wagner had been treated at the center because of the confidentiality required by state law.

Wagner was apparently a war veteran, according to Lieutenant Stoutt. The motor home had Kansas license plates, but he said his last address was listed as 868 Maine Street, Redwood City.

Novato police said today they are still putting their investigation of the grisly murder together, "and it's not complete by any stretch of the imagination."

Sausalito Picks A New Manager

By PATRICIA ANGLE

A former San Francisco police officer has been hired as Sausalito's new city manager, replacing Albert St. Cyr, whose resignation was accepted last night at a special meeting of the city council.

Thomas McKenzie, also former city manager for South San Francisco and Turlock, was selected for the $22,906-a-year post from among three candidates who had been considered, according to Mayor Robin Sweeny.

The mayor said the council did not advertise the post or actively seek applications because "we didn't want to go three to six months without a manager".

She said McKenzie had been the council's second choice when former City Mgr. George Patterson was hired from a field of 75 candidates in November of 1966. In addition, McKenzie was one of 150 persons who applied for the job in August, 1970 when St. Cyr was hired and "was among the top three or four," Mrs. Sweeny said.

"Since he was still available, we reinterviewed him and decided he was the man we wanted," she added.

The 41-year-old administrator is currently assistant to the assistant director of the San Francisco Health Department in charge of hospitals.

He left the San Francisco police department to go into administrative work and first served as purchasing agent for Mountain View and then as that city's assistant city manager.

McKenzie was fired from the city manager jobs in South San Francisco and Turlock, according to Mrs. Sweeny who said the Sausalito council was not concerned with the dismissals.

"South San Francisco was going through an incredible political upheaval when McKenzie was fired and they had eight city managers or acting city managers in a year and a half around 1969 and 1970," the mayor said.

"There was similar upheaval and conflict in Turlock, and so we do not believe that these dismissals reflect in any way on his capabilities."

She said a newspaper clipping on the South San Francisco firing said that McKenzie had been dismissed in a struggle resulting from the fact that the manager's "traditional professional control had been usurped by a council majority."

McKenzie lives in South San Francisco with his wife and three children. He could not be reached today to comment on his new post.

St. Cyr, who had been denying rumors that he planned to resign as late Wednesday, was also unavailable to discuss his plans. He will leave Sausalito Wednesday and McKenzie will assume the duties Aug. 1.

Nixon Will Stop Taping Of Talks

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon is discontinuing the secret taping of his phone calls and office conversations, his aides report. Meanwhile, the President is preparing a strong fight to prevent the Senate Watergate committee from obtaining tapes already made.

White House sources say Nixon plans to inform committee chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., Monday of his "irrevocable" decision not to give the committee the tapes of presidential conversations with Watergate figures which the committee wants.

If the committee issues a subpoena for the recordings, the President will refuse, according to aides, setting the stage for a constitutional test which might have to be settled by the Supreme Court.

Help Sought In Blocking Redevelop

A Marin County human rights commissioner will seek support from his colleagues Tuesday in his one-man fight to block San Rafael's multi-million dollar redevelopment project.

The commission set a special meeting, to be held at 8 p.m. at the College of Marin, after Commissioner Joaquin P. Gallardo and others questioned the social effects of redevelopment.

Gallardo signed a suit challenging the city's redevelopment plan months ago, along with the county board of supervisors, community college district and two college trustees.

While the others have indicated a willingness to drop the suits, Gallardo has remained solid in opposition, saying redevelopment is oriented toward the business community "and not the people."

Among his concerns are the lack of provision for low and moderate income housing in the redevelopment plan and the lack of a relocation program for those forced to move because of redevelopment.

Douglas H. Bosco, director of the county's human relations department, said his commission must first decide "if it is appropriate for it to take a position."

The commission is an advisory body to the board of supervisors which has agreed to drop its suit against the redevelopment agency provided certain conditions are met.

Bosco said the commission agreed to consider the matter after several persons complained that educational and social programs would suffer because of tax funds siphoned off from the county and school districts to finance the redevelopment agency.

The commission's special meeting will be held in Room 160 of the portable office buildings across College Avenue from the King Henry VIII restaurant.

Patrick's Widow Is Named Principal Heir To Estate

The bulk of cosmetics millionaire William Penn Patrick's estate will pass to his widow, Marie, under the terms of Patrick's will filed yesterday in the Marin County Clerk's office.

The eight-page document bequeaths to her all of Patrick's personal effects plus half of other property he owns, including his shares of Holiday Magic firm in San Rafael. The couple was estranged at the time of Patrick's death. Mrs. Patrick lives in Tiburon.

Patrick, who died June 9 in the crash of a vintage airplane on his Lake County ranch, last year estimated his financial empire to be in the neighborhood of $150 million.

The 43-year-old businessman left the other half of his property to the William Penn Patrick Trust, a tax shelter created Aug. 4, 1974, 14 days before the will filed yesterday was prepared.

The will does not list Patrick's property and its worth, but documents with that information will be filed with the county clerk next week, clerks said.

The will makes no specific provision for Patrick's two children, Lisa, 16, and William II, 12, and in fact says they won't receive anything at all if they attempt to contest the will.

Mrs. Patrick is to serve as executrix of the estate, and if she is unwilling or unable, the job passes to her brother, Sam Olivo, and then to another brother, Paul Olivo.

At the time of Patrick's death, Mrs. Patrick indicated to friends she intended to play a major role in the family business, although she had stayed in the background during her husband's lifetime.

Sources close to the Holiday Magic empire have said recently that she is now the dominant figure in setting policies for the San Rafael-based empire which started with the parent firm, Holiday Magic.

Sources also said that Holiday Magic and the other firms, under heavy legal fire in California and other states for alleged illegal pyramiding of distributorships, plan to shift to more emphasis on retailing of products.

Golden Gate Barrier Receives No Backing

A controversial proposal to add a suicide barrier to the Golden Gate Bridge may be headed back to the same shelf it already sat on for more than 20 years.

A citizens group promoting the barrier recently won strong backing by bridge district directors for a $67,000 study to complete design of the barrier.

Their campaign appeared to have built up enough board support for construction of the barrier itself, but a key board committee yesterday refused to recommend any funds for the construction over the next five years.

The issue came before the building and operating committee as it reviewed more than $12 million in projects recommended by the staff. The staff had no recommendation, however, on the $800,000 estimated by consultants as the cost of the barrier itself.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring acknowledged the staff had "side stepped" the issue.

Other district officials have conceded private doubts about the barrier. Mail from area residents overwhelmingly has been opposed to it.

Only Director William Moskovitz of San Francisco argued for the barrier, and could not even get a second from the other four committee members for his motion to assign it a high priority.

The committee's nonrecommendation thus will go to the full board, where a new fight over the barrier presumably will be fought. The board's next meeting is at 10 a.m. on Friday in Santa Rosa in county planning department offices, 2555 Mendocino Avenue.

The board traditionally meets in Santa Rosa during the annual county fair so members can attend the horse races.

The committee also recommended a staff proposal that the hazardous Sausalito lateral exit to the Army forts be widened at a cost of $6,500.

Senate Votes A 30-Day Limit On Presidential War Powers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has voted to limit to 30 days the President's authority to wage foreign wars without congressional consent.

Meanwhile, the Senate Armed Services Committee probed further into the Nixon administration's concealment of bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 and 1970 from the American public and from most members of Congress.

The Senate vote yesterday to limit the President's war powers was 71 to 18. The measure would allow the chief executive to dispatch troops overseas only for 30 days in an emergency. Then he would have to obtain congressional approval to continue a war.

The Senate measure and one passed Wednesday by the House, setting a 120-day limit, now go to a House-Senate conference to iron out the differences.

But the resulting bill faces presidential veto, and there is little prospect that war critics in the House can muster the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

An Eastern liberal, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and a Southern conservative, Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., joined in writing the Senate bill. They said the nation must never again, as in Vietnam, slip into a major foreign war without express consent of the elected representatives of the people.

Opponents of the bill charged that it unconstitutionally crimps the President's ability to meet global responsibilities. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., offered an amendment to change the title to read: "A bill to...reduce the United States of America to the status of a second rate power."

Meanwhile, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, met yesterday with Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, to begin spelling out to that committee how the administration covered up the bombing of Cambodia.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim yesterday termed that cover-up "a blunder of some magnitude" and said it resulted from pressure by another section of government. He did not name this source of pressure but said it was not the State Department.

The Armed Services Committee wants details of how the administration conducted 3,630 bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 and 1970, dropping nearly 104,000 tons of explosives, while keeping two sets of records—one falsely showing the raids as occurring in South Vietnam, the other reporting the true facts to a handful of officials.

Hijackers Make Threat To Blow Up Jet Plane

BEIRUT (UPI) — Five airline hijackers who forced the crew of a Japan Air Lines (JAL) jumbo jet to fly them from the Netherlands to the Persian Gulf threatened today to blow up the plane and its passengers if police tried to disarm them.

A Dubai spokesman said the hijackers refused to let the passengers leave.

"Our police surround the aircraft," said a police spokesman in the Persian Gulf sheikhdom of Dubai, where the Boeing 747 landed. "The authorities are negotiating with the hijackers."

They did not say what the negotiations were about and the goals of the five hijackers were still not clear.

On board, officials in Dubai said, were about 135 persons. In Tokyo, the airline said the plane carried 144 persons—two Germans, one Swiss, one Dutchman and 119 Japanese, plus the 22-man Japanese crew.

The first cousin of Japanese Crown Princess Michiko is believed to be a passenger aboard the hijacked jumbo jet parked in Dubai.

Meanwhile, the Senate Armed Services Committee probed further into the Nixon administration's concealment of bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 and 1970 from the American public and from most members of Congress.

The Senate vote yesterday to limit the President's war powers was 71 to 18. The measure would allow the chief executive to dispatch troops overseas only for 30 days in an emergency. Then he would have to obtain congressional approval to continue a war.

The Senate measure and one passed Wednesday by the House, setting a 120-day limit, now go to a House-Senate conference to iron out the differences.

But the resulting bill faces presidential veto, and there is little prospect that war critics in the House can muster the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

An Eastern liberal, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and a Southern conservative, Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., joined in writing the Senate bill. They said the nation must never again, as in Vietnam, slip into a major foreign war without express consent of the elected representatives of the people.

Opponents of the bill charged that it unconstitutionally crimps the President's ability to meet global responsibilities. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., offered an amendment to change the title to read: "A bill to...reduce the United States of America to the status of a second rate power."

Meanwhile, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, met yesterday with Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, to begin spelling out to that committee how the administration covered up the bombing of Cambodia.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim yesterday termed that cover-up "a blunder of some magnitude" and said it resulted from pressure by another section of government. He did not name this source of pressure but said it was not the State Department.

The Armed Services Committee wants details of how the administration conducted 3,630 bombing raids in Cambodia in 1969 and 1970, dropping nearly 104,000 tons of explosives, while keeping two sets of records—one falsely showing the raids as occurring in South Vietnam, the other reporting the true facts to a handful of officials.

Missing Hunt

HONOLULU (UPI) — The head of the military organization whose mission is to locate and investigate crash and grave sites of missing American servicemen in Indochina said yesterday there was no indication of finding any of them alive.

Brig. Gen. Robert C. Kingston, who assumed command of the Joint Casualty Resolution Center on Jan 23 at Nakhon Phanom, Thailand, said during a news briefing "there is no indication I have of finding any live Americans, but we hope we will," he said.

The Pentagon has listed 1,300 Americans missing in action and has declared another 1,100 dead although their bodies have not been recovered. There are more than 1,000 known crash sites in Southeast Asia.

Ireland Warning

BELFAST (UPI) — The British army imposed restrictions on all movement in Northern Ireland's capital and issued public warnings today in anticipation of a possible weekend campaign of bombings by the underground Irish Republican Army (IRA).

The restrictions changed the city to a ghost town with the streets almost deserted and traffic reduced to a minimum. The people seem to be following the army's "stay at home" warning, a police source said.

"The security forces believe it is possible that quantities of explosives may have been moved into the Belfast city area prior to the start of today's operation," the army said in statements broadcast repeatedly on radio and television.

The army urged the public, "in the interests of their own safety," to report anything suspicious. An army spokesman declined to elaborate on the warning.

Space Effort

HOUSTON (UPI) — The head of the Soviet group of technicians and cosmonauts planning the first international space flight for 1975 said the work with their American counterparts has been successful.

The Soviet official, Professor Konstantin D. Bushuyev, said yesterday the discussions which end today with the Russians' departure took only two weeks of a planned three. The original schedule would have had the Soviets in this country to witness the launch of the second manned Skylab flight July 28.

Bushuyev said American specialists will visit and train in a Russian flight control center for the July, 1975, joint flight of an Apollo and Soyuz spacecraft. The Soviets are to launch seven hours before the Apollo craft and the two ships will rendezvous in orbit for two days of joint work.

Heavy Fighting

SAIGON (UPI) — The South Vietnamese military command said today 65 Communists and 12 government soldiers died yesterday in scattered battles across the country.

The heaviest fighting was reported near Cai Lay, 46 miles southwest of Saigon in the Mekong Delta. Officials said 35 Communist and 10 government troops died in the clash and 30 government soldiers were wounded.

Other fighting was reported near Kontum in the Central Highlands, about 260 miles north of Saigon, near Giong Thom, in the delta about 40 miles southeast of the capital and near Phu Giao, about 35 miles north of Saigon.

Peron March

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Leftwing supporters of former President Juan D. Peron organized mass demonstrations today to demand he assume the presidency now instead of waiting for elections Sept. 23.

The demonstrators, members of the Peronist youth organization, said they would march to the former strongman's home under a "President Peron Now" banner.

Valley Overrun

VIENTIANE (UPI) — Communist Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese troops overran a valley sector 115 miles southeast of Vientaine, military sources said today, leaving thousands of refugees in Communist hands.

The sources said the Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese in a stepped-up land grabbing offensive in central and southern Laos has captured six government positions or refugee settlements in the past week.

The Communists overran the Phra Hom valley area 115 miles southeast of Vientiane, the sources said, killing several government soldiers killed and leaving thousands of refugees under Communist control.

MOAMMAR KHADAFY
Resignation refused

Khadafy's Resignation Is Rejected

CAIRO (UPI) — The ruling Revolution Command Council said today it rejected the resignation of its chairman, Col. Moammar Khadafy, who said hours earlier he was quitting to speed a merger between Egypt and his own oil-rich country.

Libyan radio said the governing junta rejected Khadafy's resignation after popular demonstrations broke out in Tripoli urging him to stay in power.

The radio broadcast the demonstrations, punctuated with shouts of "With our souls and blood, we defend you Khadafy"—the chant Egyptians used to greet the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

At the same time, about 40,000 Libyans marching from their homes to Cairo to demand the complete immediate merger of the two North African neighbors camped beside a road 50 miles inside Eygpt.

They were awaiting President Anwar Sadat's response to a petition signed in blood asking him to go ahead with the merger.

The two countries originally planed to merge Sept. 1, but Sadat said earlier this week that the idea was in effect postponed for one year by agreement with Khadafy.

Khadafy's resignation, which he said would pave the way to unity because it removed the biggest obstacle —himself—was announced Friday by Cairo Radio.

Storm Warning Threatens Test

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Storm warnings near its South Pacific nuclear testing site today threatened to force France to put off for perhaps 48 hours the first explosion of its 1973 test series.

In Wellington, a New Zealand defense ministry spokesman said that clouds and high winds could force postponment for another two days.

On Tahiti, about 720 miles from the Mururoa atoll testing site, radio reports said bad weather forced postponement, but did not say for how long.

French officials earlier said the tests were imminent.

But scientists said on Tahiti that "perfect" weather is required for the test to protect against the threat of fall-out over populated areas.

That threat led to an international protest against the tests, with Australia, New Zealand, Japan and other countries calling on France to stop all tests. The French refused.

France has used the South Pacific for tests since 1966 but not until this year did the protests grow so noisy or widespread.

France declared a 72-mile danger zone Tuesday around Mururoa and ordered ships and airplanes to stay clear. The skipper of an American-owned schooner ignored the order and French warships towed it away.

Good weather lasted until yesterday around Mururoa, but there was no indication why the French did not take advantage of it to start the test series.

However, a New Zealand warship sailing near the test site to protest the tests reported earlier that something may have gone wrong with a balloon intended for use in the tests. The balloon, designed to hold the testing device above ground level, apparently changed shape.

Reports from the warship Otago, which has a cabinet minister among its crew, said French navy ships standing offshore from Mururoa began steaming back to the island. This was another sign that the tests might not come immediately.

The French government has said it will not interfere with the Otago because it is a warship and the crew of such a vessel knows how to handle an emergency.

In its report today, the New Zealand defense ministry said the Otago reported winds measuring 26 miles an hour and cloudiness over the test area.

Japanese Sailor Wants To Be Philippine Citizen

DAVAO CITY, Philippines (UPI) — A World War II Japanese sailor emerged from more than 30 years of hiding today, saying he wants to stay in his adopted country with his Filipino wife and 14 children and become a Filipino citizen.

He identified himself as Ryoji Miki, 50, a seaman in the defunct Imperial Navy who fled to a mountainous island during the war when American troops surrounded his outfit

He later settled down, he said, to a farm life with the local Bilaan tribe.

Speaking English, Miki told newsmen he was happy about his reunion with other members of the Miki family who came to the Philippines to find him.

"However," he said, "I prefer to stay here because I have been here for more than 30 years."

Miki said he hopes to apply for Filipino citizenship and stay in the country with his wife, a 45-year-old Bilaan tribeswoman and their 14 children—seven boys and seven girls.

"I plan to go to Japan in the near future for a visit but not now," he said.

Miki flew to Davao, about 600 miles south of Manila, from General Santos City, where he was reunited Friday with his three brothers, one his twin, a sister and a sister-in-law.

Wearing a Japanese-made watch on his right wrist, Miki appeared tired, walked with a slight stoop and smiled only once when photographers asked him to do so.

Film Actor Bruce Lee Dies At 32

HONG KONG (UPI) — American-born actor Bruce Lee, who became a box office star by turning the ancient, unarmed Chinese fighting techniques of kung fu into a film fad, died yesterday. He was 32.

The San Francisco native died of an undisclosed illness shortly after he was admitted to a Hong Kong hospital.

Lee starred in the American television series, "The Green Hornet," and taught such actors as James Garner, Steve McQueen and James Coburn the arts of karate and kung fu before returning home to Hong Kong to pioneer a fad that made him an Asian and European box office star.

He appeared in such films as "The Fist of Fury," "The Big Boss" and "The Way of the Dragon"—all rock 'em, sock 'em hits that set box office records at home and started a kung fu movie trend in the United States.

He is survived by his wife Linda, whom he met while attending Washington State University at Seattle, and two children, aged 8 and 5.

Singer Divorced

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Singer Diahann Carroll and Freddie Glusman, a Las Vegas dress shop operator, were divorced yesterday. They were married only four months ago.

Cancer Dangers Seen From Sex

SALZBURG, Austria (UPI) — A Finnish scientist said today sexual intercourse may make some women susceptible to cervical cancer.

Dr. Pentti Leppaluoto of the Laboratory of Cancer Society at Tampere, Finaldn, said a post-intercourse mix of sperm and vaginal fluid can alter the nature of the bacteria normally in the vagina.

"The new form of bacterial flora may have associated with it an organism that can infiltrate cervical cells and take over the genetic machinery of the cells to make them malignant," he said.

Leppaluoto said he hoped scientists can build into future contraceptives a way to prevent this bacterial switchover.

He made his remarks at a European conference on cytology and cancer prevention that began today.

More than 300 scientists from 38 nations are attending the three-day assembly to discuss latest advances in cancer detection, treatment and prevention.

Leppaluoto described a study in which he took "Pap" smears of 1,000 women at various times after intercourse.

He reported finding altered bacteria—known as haemophilus — present more often in smears taken soon after intercourse than smears taken later.

Frequently linked with haemophilus, Leppaluoto said, are organisms called mycoplasmas, which can invade cervical cells and induce genetic changes that spur malignant growth.

Leppaluoto said the alterations in vaginal bacteria were not caused by infection from the male.

Bacterial changes, he said, did not always take place after intercourse and the switchover was only temporary.

"But during the altered state women may be more vulnerable," he said.

Leppaluoto said this could explain why virgins appear much better protected against cervical cancer than other women.

ROME (UPI) — They met with a cuddle and a kiss, then disappeared in a green Rolls-Royce for what they said they hoped was a reconcilation.

And where Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor were hiding today was anyone's guess.

Some friends said they may have gone to a villa owned by actress Sophia Loren in the cool Alban hills near Rome.

Highway Funds Freed For Transit Use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators have broken a lengthy stalemate and approved a $19 billion, three year federal aid highway bill which would for the first time grant urban areas permission to use trust fund money for mass transit instead of highways.

The conferees reported out the compromise bill yesterday after more than two months of meetings.

The major roadblock between the conferees was use of the highway trust fund for subways and express bus systems in traffic-clogged urban areas. The fund is supported by gas, tire and highway user taxes and was established 16 years ago to build the now nearly complete interstate highway system.

The agreement, if sustained as expected by both Houses and signed by President Nixon, would allow cities to spend their share of the fund on mass transit beginning July 1, 1975.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., the conference chairman, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., head of the Senate conferees, hailed the agreement as a "significant breakthrough."

Wright called it a "good, basic compromise" and said the eventual breakthrough came with "a mutual realization that neither side could get its way wholly."

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., a leading proponent of mass transit, said he was "pleased" with the compromise.

"I feel urban transportation problems can only be adequately addressed when all modes of transportation can compete equally for funding and when local officials are allowed to consider important community and environmental problems in determining the best way to meet urban transportation needs," Baker said.

The original Senate versions of the measure would have allowed cities to use their $850 million portion of the fund for mass transit.

The House version, however, would allow none of the trust fund money to be spent for anything but highways.

The agreement would set the urban allocation of trust funds at $780 million the first year and $800 million annually for each of the next two years; would allow no transit money from the fund to be spent in the current fiscal year, and grant up to $200 million for express bus systems in fiscal 1975. In 1976, cities may divert all of their share from the fund to any mass transit use.

Other parts of the bill agreed to on Friday included:

—$2 billion over the three-year period for highway safety programs such as eliminating hazardous intersections, rebuilding narrow bridges and establishing better warning systems.

—$2 billion over the period for non-interstate superhighways outside the cities.

—Nearly $900 million for urban extensions of those roads.

—Nearly $1.2 billion for secondary road systems outside the cities.

Company Bares Illegal Donation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Archibald Cox, head of the special Watergate investigation team, has revealed that Ashland Oil, Inc. voluntarily acknowledged an illegal $100,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's re-election campagn in April, 1972.

The Ashland, Ky., firm said the gift came from corporate funds but added the money was returned by the campaign finance committee "a few days ago."

Ashland was the second firm in the past two weeks to admit to an illegal donation of corporate funds. American Airlines was the first.

Cox pointed out yesterday that a corporate contribution to political campaigns is a violation of the 1972 election reform laws.

"We are in no position to make any determination concerning the likely disposition of the matter until the details of the contributions and surrounding circumstances have been fully investigated," he said.

Orin E. Atkins, chairman of Ashland's board, said the contribution to Finance Committee Chairman Maurice H. Stans was made without the knowledge of the firm's board and was "extremely regrettable." He added that the company intends to fully cooperate with any investigations.

Although Cox said the "facts" indicate that Stans solicited the contribution, Atkins said the finance committee "was not told that corporate funds were involved. When advised of this fact, the ... committee returned the contribution to the company."

Traffic Volume Is Down But Not Accident Rate

Although late night traffic on Marin highways has been reduced markedly by the fuel shortage, traffic accidents and arrests have not fallen by a corresponding percentage, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Traffic on Highway 101 is as much as 40 per cent lighter after midnight than last summer, according to Myron R. MacNeil, information officer at the patrol's Corte Madera office.

MacNeil attributed the reduction in traffic to the fact that most Marin gas stations are closed after 10 p.m.

"During the day people can get all the gas they want," he said. "But almost all stations are closed at night and there is a direct relationship with the traffic at night."

But MacNeil found only about a 10 per cent drop in the number of accidents and arrests.

Drunk driving arrests for this month through July 18 had dropped to 71 from 76 during the same period last year and traffic accidents were down to 157 from 171.

MacNeil pointed out, though, that these figures do not cover just the night-time period but are for all 24 hours.

The patrol has also had trouble with the gas shortage as no stations are available for night-time fill-ups for the late-hour patrols, he said. With less than half their units in operation at night, patrolmen can trade a car that is running out of fuel for a vehicle with a full tank at the patrol's storage yard.

Charges Against Teen Reduced

Two felony charges against a teen-ager arising from a near brawl at a Santa Venetia park were reduced to misdemeanors yesterday by the Marin District Attorney's office.

Christian Thomas Livingston, 19, pleaded innocent to the new charges — two counts of battery on a police officer — as well as to two other misdemeanor charges, resisting arrest and brandishing a weapon.

Judge Peter Allen Smith accepted the innocent pleas and set a jury trial for Livingston for the week of July 30.

Livingston's arrest on a Sonoma County warrant on the evening of the Fourth of July by Marin sheriff's deputies touched off a brawl, with 40 or 50 youths at People's Park in Santa Venetia struggling with the officers.

Meeting Put Off

The Marin Hospital District board has postponed its regular monthly meeting from Tuesday to July 31 at 7 p.m. in the coral room of Marin General Hospital.

Traffic Volume Is Down But Not Accident Rate

Although late night traffic on Marin highways has been reduced markedly by the fuel shortage, traffic accidents and arrests have not fallen by a corresponding percentage, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Traffic on Highway 101 is as much as 40 per cent lighter after midnight than last summer, according to Myron R. MacNeil, information officer at the patrol's Corte Madera office.

HIJACK

princess' cousin as Hinkei Shoda, a son of the younger brother of Michiko's father. Shoda, a professor of economics at Keio University near Tokyo, was enroute home to Japan from a brief visit in Europe.

The crown princess was a commoner, the daughter of a flour milling tycoon, before she joined the Japanese royal family by her marriage to Crown Prince Akihito.

Officials in Dubai said a woman—identified as one of the hijackers—died in an explosion on board that also wounded a crew member. The hijackers let police remove the woman's body but refused to allow anyone else off the plane.

In Tokyo, an airline official said the woman died just before the hijacking.

"The hijackers have, so far, asked for only food and water and nothing else," the Dubai police said. "They have threatened to blow up the craft if attempts are made to disarm them."

The police said Palestinians and Japanese were among the hijackers, but gave no details about them. Earlier, the hijackers identified themselves as members of a Japanese revolutionary group.

A Dubai government spokesman said the hijackers were "awaiting instructions," but did not say from where or whom.

"The hijacked aircraft is still at Dubai airport," the spokesman said, "and the five hijackers are still insisting they have no demands..."

He said they did not even ask for more fuel for the aircraft.

In Beirut, a spokesman for Japan Air Lines said Dubai authorities were waiting for the arrival of a Japanese delegation en route from Tokyo.

In the first contact with the ground after the plane was seized, one of the hijackers, speaking what an airline spokesman called "horrible" English, said he was a member of the Palestinian guerrilla group Al Fatah. Later, an Al Fatah spokesman in Beirut denied any knowledge of the hijacking.

Body Is Found In West Marin

The badly decomposed body of a man was discovered near Point Reyes Station yesterday afternoon, according to the Marin County Coroner's office.

A gun was found in the man's right hand, coroner's deputy Bill D. Thomas reported. The body was taken to the Chapel of the Hills mortuary in San Anselmo for autopsy.

The dead man's identification was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Letter Threat Seeks Release Of Convicts

A letter threatening "many prison officials' deaths" unless six San Quentin convicts are flown to Cuba or Algeria was received yesterday by a San Francisco newspaper.

Prison officials said today they knew nothing of the ultimatum, and the six inmates accused in the alleged escape attempt from the prison of Aug. 21, 1971 will remain in custody.

The letter, was signed "August Sevenyh (sic) Guerrilla Movement (ASGM)."

It included a newspaper clipping of the photos and names of the six convicts presently waiting trial in Marin on charges stemming from the 1971 escape attempt. They are Fleeta Drumgo, David Johnson, Hugo Pinell, John Larry Spain, Luis Talamantez and Willie Tate.

The signature apparently referred to Aug. 7, 1970, the day when Marin Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley and three other persons were killed in an escape attempt and shoot out at the civic center.

Judge Ponders Suit Against Mansion Dig

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Superior Court judge has taken under consideration Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s lawsuit to block an excavation of an ancient Indian village at the planned site of a new governor's mansion.

Judge Lloyd Phillips Friday heard lengthy arguments on the suit in which Brown seeks to halt the archeological dig until an environmental impact report is prepared on it. Phillips said he would announce a decision later on the suit.

The excavation, for which the legislature has appropriated $110,000, would be the first actual step toward construction of the $1.3 million mansion in suburban Carmichael. The site is believed to be on the remains of a 3,000-year-old Maidu Indian village and burial ground.

Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, filed an eleventh hour suit Monday to block the dig which was scheduled to be started that same day by a team of 30 students and professors. The state Department of Parks and Recreation halted the dig until the court gives its approval.

Brown's attorney, Daniel Lowenstein, told Phillips Friday the excavation will have a "significant impact" on the environment. He said "disturbing the site through a dig would adversely affect the (Maidu Indian) heritage."

He said the dig itself came under the 1970 Environmental Quality Act, which requires reports on the impact of major projects.

princess' cousin as Hinkei Shoda, a son of the younger brother of Michiko's father. Shoda, a professor of economics at Keio University near Tokyo, was enroute home to Japan from a brief visit in Europe.

The crown princess was a commoner, the daughter of a flour milling tycoon, before she joined the Japanese royal family by her marriage to Crown Prince Akihito.

Officials in Dubai said a woman—identified as one of the hijackers—died in an explosion on board that also wounded a crew member. The hijackers let police remove the woman's body but refused to allow anyone else off the plane.

In Tokyo, an airline official said the woman died just before the hijacking.

"The hijackers have, so far, asked for only food and water and nothing else," the Dubai police said. "They have threatened to blow up the craft if attempts are made to disarm them."

The police said Palestinians and Japanese were among the hijackers, but gave no details about them. Earlier, the hijackers identified themselves as members of a Japanese revolutionary group.

A Dubai government spokesman said the hijackers were "awaiting instructions," but did not say from where or whom.

"The hijacked aircraft is still at Dubai airport," the spokesman said, "and the five hijackers are still insisting they have no demands..."

He said they did not even ask for more fuel for the aircraft.

In Beirut, a spokesman for Japan Air Lines said Dubai authorities were waiting for the arrival of a Japanese delegation en route from Tokyo.

In the first contact with the ground after the plane was seized, one of the hijackers, speaking what an airline spokesman called "horrible" English, said he was a member of the Palestinian guerrilla group Al Fatah. Later, an Al Fatah spokesman in Beirut denied any knowledge of the hijacking.

Prison officials said today they knew nothing of the ultimatum, and the six inmates accused in the alleged escape attempt from the prison of Aug. 21, 1971 will remain in custody.

The letter, was signed "August Sevenyh (sic) Guerrilla Movement (ASGM)."

It included a newspaper clipping of the photos and names of the six convicts presently waiting trial in Marin on charges stemming from the 1971 escape attempt. They are Fleeta Drumgo, David Johnson, Hugo Pinell, John Larry Spain, Luis Talamantez and Willie Tate.

The signature apparently referred to Aug. 7, 1970, the day when Marin Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley and three other persons were killed in an escape attempt and shoot out at the civic center.

Judge Ponders Suit Against Mansion Dig

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Superior Court judge has taken under consideration Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s lawsuit to block an excavation of an ancient Indian village at the planned site of a new governor's mansion.

Judge Lloyd Phillips Friday heard lengthy arguments on the suit in which Brown seeks to halt the archeological dig until an environmental impact report is prepared on it. Phillips said he would announce a decision later on the suit.

The excavation, for which the legislature has appropriated $110,000, would be the first actual step toward construction of the $1.3 million mansion in suburban Carmichael. The site is believed to be on the remains of a 3,000-year-old Maidu Indian village and burial ground.

Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, filed an eleventh hour suit Monday to block the dig which was scheduled to be started that same day by a team of 30 students and professors. The state Department of Parks and Recreation halted the dig until the court gives its approval.

Brown's attorney, Daniel Lowenstein, told Phillips Friday the excavation will have a "significant impact" on the environment. He said "disturbing the site through a dig would adversely affect the (Maidu Indian) heritage."

He said the dig itself came under the 1970 Environmental Quality Act, which requires reports on the impact of major projects.

Tiburon Ridge Rezoning Report Ruled Not Needed

An architect's plans to rezone his ridgetop land near Tiburon for agricultural uses will not require an environmental impact report, Tiburon's director of community development decided at a hearing yesterday.

The request for the rezoning on the property of Neill Smith, who has aroused opposition of several of his neighbors, will now go to the city council on Aug. 13.

Smith is asking the city to assign the agricultural zone to 43.31 ridgetop acres inside the city and 58.88 unincorporated acres running from the Tiburon Ridge to Paradise Cove on the east side of the peninsula. The land is now zoned residential.

The new zoning would apply to the unincorporated land only if Smith annexes it to the city.

Richard Arjo, director of community development, told a handful of protestors at the meeting that he based his findings on the fact that Smith's proposed reforestation, environmental school and small farm would enhance the environment of his land and have a positive effect on fish, plant and wildlife.

The rezoning also would preclude urban residential development, Arjo noted.

He said that any plans for building on the property which might be objectionable would be subject to design review later.

Vernon S. Dallman of 7 Playa Verde said that before Arjo made his finding the zoning ordinances should be rewritten to outline specifically what uses the property could be put. "He has stated he'll use methane gas produced from manure," said Dallman. "This sort of thing should not be allowed."

Most protesting neighbors were peninsula residents from outside the city.

Arjo said the hearing was held before him instead of the planning commission because the commission had completed its hearings on the rezoning and the city council had authorized him to decide whether an environmental impact report was needed.

Expanded Gnoss Field Project Recommended

The Marin County Aviation Commission will discuss enlarging a Gnoss Field expansion project to take advantage of new federal regulations offering greater financial assistance to airports at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Civic Center.

Ray W. Foreaker Jr., director of public works, said recent changes in federal regulations have increased federal funding for certain construction projects from 54 to 80 per cent.

With this change, he said, current county plans to enlarge the airport and establish airplane warmup areas could be revised to provide even more new apron area for the same cost as the smaller project.

Instead of the $400,000 project now planned, the change could provide funds for a $500,000 project.

He said the commission and board of supervisors could also choose to stay with the smaller project and bank some of the county's matching funds.

Limit Asked On Bridge Gas Sales

One of the longest gas stations in the world, the Golden Gate Bridge, is pinched so hard by the energy crisis that its staff wants to cut sales to stranded motorists from three gallons to one.

Spurning staff fears that district gas tanks may run dry, however, the building and operating committee yesterday unanimously rejected the proposed cut.

Director Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley branded the proposal "a little chintzy," and director E.J. Guidotti of Sonoma County pointed out "we are here to serve the public."

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring recommended the cutback because gasoline suppliers have rationed the district's allocation. The pinch has not affected bus or ferry operations.

Luehring reported motorists running out of gas on the bridge buy about 400 gallons a month. A number are repeaters, the staff added.

Enrollment Increase Is Reported

Enrollment at Dominican College's summer session is up almost 50 per cent over last year according to Mary E. Head, public relations director for the San Rafael school.

The school is presently in the second half of its summer program which includes two six-week periods and some shorter courses to accommodate vacation plans.

Among courses offered were a series on "Mass Media: Use and Abuse" which drew 162 participants, a workshop for learning disability specialists and a sports institute.

An extra session was scheduled for the first time this year and will run Aug. 20 to Aug. 31 offering three courses: Drama in the Classroom, Creative Problem Solving and Music in Motion.

Registration for the extra session will end Aug. 3.

Claim Is Denied In Marin City

The Marin City Community Services District board has denied a $3,500 claim for damages by a former district recreation supervisor suspended for alleged misconduct in February.

Otis Gaines, now an employee of the Marin County Housing Authority, claimed the district owed him $1,800 in salary withheld when he was suspended from Feb. 28 to April 6, and $1,700 for pay lost when the housing authority delayed his hiring while it investigated the circumstances of his suspension.

According to George P. Baxter, district consultant-manager, district directors voted unanimously Thursday to deny the claim.

At the time the suspension was ordered, board chairman Frank J. Phillips charged that Gaines had called board members names and frequently had interrupted district meetings. Gaines resigned his post April 6.

BARGAIN PRICES — With milk going for a quarter a quart at the Zeitzer Food Corp. warehouse in New York City, a woman shopper decides to buy a whole case. In most of New York milk sells for 35 cents a quart. The warehouse is a haven for price-weary, Phase IV-shocked food buyers, who have been known to wait hours in line to stock up on almost unbelievable buys.

Food Buyers Find A Paradise

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Cmar paused in the aisle, patted his rotund belly, and said, "My family of six drinks 10 cases of soft drinks a week. If we had to buy this in a store in Manhattan it would kill us."

So, instead of shopping near his home on the East Side of Manhattan, Cmar had stocked up on his 10 cases at the Zeitzer Food Corp., a warehouse converted into a 30,000-square-foot food store in Queens.

There, with food prices climbing and threatening to climb even more steeply under Phase IV, Cmar finds prices like this:

—Whole milk, which generally sells for about 35 cents a quart in the New York area, for a quarter.

—A dozen grade A large eggs, normally 80 or 90 cents, for 63 cents.

—An 18-ounce loaf of white bread, about 47 cents in most large markets, for a quarter.

—A pound of bacon, usually about $1.41, for 79 cents.

As a result, the Zeitzer Food Corp. is swamped with shoppers who have been known to wait hours in line during blistering heat and nasty rain storms. Yesterday, hundreds of persons picked and pinched their way through the maze of items, loading up their shopping carts.

Sanford Schwartz, an independent consultant who set up the operation, said his store used to deal only with nonretail outlets such as hospitals, nursing homes and the city's schools.

In March, because of the food situation and because the store sat idle on Saturdays, the store was opened to the public on Saturdays. In April, it opened to the public four days a week and business has never slowed down.

Reuben Zeitzer, president of the corporation, said, "I'm not doing this for love, I'm doing it for profit and I'm making a profit."

"Say we buy an item for $1 and it's selling for $2.50 in a large supermarket," Schwartz said. "We will sell/it for $1.20 and make a 20 cent profit."

Schwartz would not discuss the amount of sales on a given day, but said the store averages 4,000 customers on weekdays and 10,000 on Saturday. He said he has not noticed any increase in customers since Phase IV was announced Wednesday.

Mrs. Betty Malik pushed a cart ofgroceries she said would cost her about $60. "I have been coming here for the past couple of months because the prices are reasonable and the warehouse has everything I need for my family," she said.

One woman, who did not want to be identified, said it was her first trip to the store. "God, I wish I had a truck," she said.

"We give dollar for dollar but the big boys give you fancy lights and a parking lot. You get nothing for nothing from them," Zeitzer said.

Sierra Club Plans Suit Over Tahoe Shop Center

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE (UPI) — The Sierra Club plans to sue the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency for approving what will be the largest shopping center at Lake Tahoe.

Sierra Club attorney Coleman Blease said yesterday that the bi-state agency should have required the developers to file an environmental impact statement of the $7 million center.

The center will cover 26 acres and is being built by Raley's Market Chain of Sacramento. The plans were approved 6-4 by the TRPA last month, over the opposition of North Shore representatives.

The legal action would be the first by conservationists against the three year-old agency. The TRPA was formed by Nevada and California to prevent overdevelopment at the resort lake.

Blease also said the Sierra Club was considering a suit over the construction of the Park Tahoe Hotel at Stateline. The 14-story hotel was neither approved nor disapproved by the TRPA. The agency failed to act in either direction, causing the project to be allowed.

Blease said the basis of the Sierra Club suit was that impact statements are required under a California Supreme Court ruling.

TRPA attorney Richard Hanna said the bi-state agency could not be held to a California ruling because it represents both states.

In approving the shopping center, the TRPA board voted against the recommendation of its staff.

The state Division of Forestry Friday said several recent grass fires in the hills west of Red Bluff were started by discarded marijuana cigarette butts.

Shoppers Are Stocking Up

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Most supermarkets have not yet posted the price boosts allowed under the Phase Four economic program, but shoppers thinking ahead to higher costs are buying up whole cases of food in some cities, according to a United Press International survey.

"It was a little busier than a normal Friday, probably due to people trying to beat possible price rises," said David Barranti, manager of the Arguello Supermarket in San Francisco.

"We've had a lot of people buying full cases of merchandise," said Don Lyons, manager of the Food City store in Winston-Salem, N.C. He said 48-can cases of tuna fish and 24-can cases of vegetables have been selling well.

In Raleigh, N.C., some shoppers were filling up oversized baskets and one man bought $200 worth of meat.

Phase Four allows increases in the cost of producing food to be passed along immediately to the consumer on all products except beef. The health industry was also allowed to raise prices. Other sectors of the economy have to wait until Aug. 12.

While the price of many retail foods remained unchanged, perhaps because grocers have not been able to publish advertisements with new prices, a number of increases were reported, including a jump from $1.31 to $1.85 at Burlington, Vt. for a 10-lb. bag of potatos.

Prices for bread, eggs, milk and chicken remained mostly unchanged at stores surveyed in nine cities yesterday, but milk leaped from 52 cents to 70 cents a half-gallon in Dallas and from 58 cents to 61 cents in San Francisco. Eggs were up 4 cents in New York, to 79 cents a dozen for the AA large size. The price of uncut chicken went from 49 cents a pound to 59 cents in New York and from 63 cents to 69 cents in Boston.

The price of bread was down in Chicago, San Francisco and New York.

In California, a strike of cannery workers today went into its third day. The state's Farm Bureau Federation and leaders of the peach, pear and tomato growing industries appealed to President Nixon to order a 60-day "cooling off" period.

Alan Grant, farm bureau president, said that failure to settle the strike by 65,000 workers at 84 canneries could result in severe economic problems for growers and farm workers "and higher prices for consumers."

At the wholesale level, prices went up. Oklahoma hog prices shot upwards by $4 to $6 per hundredweight, "the highest jump in a single day I can remember," according to Charles R. Hamilton, vice president of Wickham Packing Co. The State Agriculture Department reported that the price of broiler chickens increased 2 ½ cents per pound.

On the commodity markets, wheat and oats sold for irregularly higher prices and the price of corn went up by more than $1.25 a bushel.

The Stanford University Hospital in California announced a 4.65 per cent incease in rates, effective today.

The announcement of Phase Four prompted Arlene Matthews, a Los Angeles housewife who was one of the originators of April's meat boycott, to reveal a new project for her group, Fight Inflation Together (FIT).

Mrs. Matthews said FIT would shortly announce a plan to boycott all vegetables and fruits beginning with the letter "p."

"We will ask consumers not to buy pears, peaches, pineapples, papayas, peas, potatoes, pimentoes, parsnips, pomegranates, parsley, plums or prunes," she said.

BART Offer Is Rejected By Strikers

OAKLAND (UPI) — Bay Area Rapid Transit workers voted overwhelmingly last night to reject what BART negotiators said was its "final" offer to end the strike that has shut down the system for three weeks.

Workers voted down the latest BART offer by 384 votes to 49, on the unanimous recommendation of the strike committee.

The strike vote was taken after a 2 ½-hour meeting.

The United Public Employes Local 390, which represents 800 of the 1,100 striking workers, and the Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1555, are involved in the strike.

Paul Varacalli, union spokesman, said the strike committee recommended rejection of BART's offer because employes of the $1.6 billion system are paid less than the average transportation worker in the San Francisco Bay Area.

BART had offered a 24 per cent basic wage increase over two years and "a vast improvement in fringe benefits."

The unions withdrew demands for parity in wages. Some employes hired on from other transit districts receive as much as $2 an hour more than workmates doing the same job.

Ordinance On Lead In Gas Not Legal

SANTA ANA (UPI) — What was believed to be the first local government ordinance in the nation banning lead in gasoline was ruled illegal yesterday because it oversteps state authority.

Superior Court Judge James F. Judge ruled that Orange County cannot enforce its ordinance because regulation of lead in gasoline for motor vehicles is not a proper subject for county-by-county regulations.

Alaskan Pipeline Rulings Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Interior committee has delayed key decisions on the trans-Alaska oil pipeline until Monday after giving tentative approval to legal changes removing statutory obstacles to the project.

To be resolved Monday were the sections of proposed legislation that would direct the interior secretary to issue rights-of-way and permits for construction of the controversial pipeline without any further presently required studies of its impact on the environment.

The Senate passed its version of the measure Tuesday, voting by a one-vote margin to exempt the $3.5 billion, 789-mile project from environmental laws.

On Friday, the House Interior Committee began amending a subcommittee's similar bill, which would authorize changes in a 1920 law limiting pipeline rights-of-way to 24 feet.

The law was cited by a U.S. appeals court which nullified Interior Department permits last year for the pipeline's construction.

The House Committee approved widening the right-of-way to 50 feet, or wider if the interior secretary decides it is needed.

The committee also approved requirements that the pipeline be operated in a safe manner and that annual safety reports be made to Congress.

Several members sought unsuccessfully to delay the bill-writing session in favor of studying an alternate route across Canada to the Middle West, where they say the need for oil is greater. They said the Canadian government had not had a chance to respond to the trans-Canada proposal.

The Alaska pipeline would extend across Alaska from Prudhoe Bay in the icy north to Valdez on the southern coast, where the oil would be shipped by tanker to the U. S. West Coast. The pipeline's capacity has been estimated at two million barrels a day by the mid-1980s.

Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., arguing against any further dalay, said he had new figures indicating each further day of delay would cost the United States $10.5 million in lost revenue.

Hearings Set On Offshore Oil Drilling

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Lands Division next month in Los Angeles will hold the first of three hearings on whether to resume offshore oil drilling.

E.N. Gladish, executive officer of the state Lands Commission, yesterday said information gathered at the hearings will be the basis of a division recommendation to the commission on whether to lift a moratorium on drilling.

The commission has jurisdiction over offshore waters within the three-mile limit. Early in 1969, the commission imposed the moratorium after an oil well blew out in the scenic Santa Barbara Channel. The oil spill blackened beaches for miles and killed many species of wildlife.

Gladish said the first hearing is scheduled for Aug. 14 in the state office building in Los Angeles. The second hearing is set for Santa Barbara Sept. 12, with the third being held at the state office building in Los Angeles the following day.

He said the hearings will examine drilling regulations and procedures and the oil industry's contention that adequate means now are available for controlling offshore oil spills.

Gladish stressed the hearings will not consider the issuance of new offshore leases or specific well permits.

Film Festival Slated Tonight

The Sausalito Youth Center will hold its sixth annual film festival at 8 p.m. today in the auditorium of Central School, Caledonia and Litho Streets in Sausalito, according to Paul Kozak, center director.

Featured will be "Stand In," a 1937 film starring Humphrey Bogart, Leslie Howard and Joan Blondell and "Balloonatics," a 1923 Buster Keaton comedy. Profits from the festival will go to finance youth center activities, Kozak said.

Warrant Issued For Bookkeeper

A bench warrant has been issued for the arrest of Frances D. Venable after she failed to appear in Marin Superior Court for sentencing on charges of embezzlement and passing bad checks.

Judge David Menary Jr. ordered the 28-year-old former Sausalito bookkeeper arrested and held without bail.

She is accused of embezzling almost $900 from her employer, Del Davis Associates, in December and January.

Miss Venable was to be sentenced Monday but didn't keep her court date. She had been promised no more than 60 days in jail by Menary as part of a plea bargain.

A Marin Man's Financial Fiasco

A Black Point man, whose financial house of cards collapsed last year, may have to pay $56.6 million to the foreign investors who poured money into his schemes.

The amount that 40-year-old Robert W. Pollock personally owes is the major remaining issue in a judgment against him in Marin Superior Court and the answer may lie in a receiver's report from federal court in Portland.

The report shows the maze of corporations set up by Pollock now have a potential value of less than $10.4 million, far short of the $67 million invested.

Marin Judge E. Warren McGuire ruled May 31 in a class action civil suit filed by four Europeans that Pollock was guilty of fraud and, therefore, liable for the debts of his crumbling companies.

McGuire told the Independent-Journal he has asked attorneys for Pollock and the Europeans — Zdenek Svejnar, Zdenek Vavra and Anton and Ethel Wenzoski — if they will accept the figures in the report, but has not received an answer.

McGuire also decided in May to impose exemplary damages in the case. The four asked $1.5 million, but the judge said he will hold further hearings on the amount.

Pollock's operation was an "offshore mutual fund," an investment procedure which avoids federal regulation by selling exclusively to foreigners.

Pollock's kingdom, known as United Financial Group, was created in 1966 and had mushroomed to more than 100 companies when the bubble burst in 1971.

A recession in the securities market in late 1969 and early 1970 severely damaged the offshore fund industry and crippled Pollock's enterprises, which depended more on increasing the money coming in than on sound investments, according to court rulings.

Beginning in August 1970, Pollock's companies began refusing to redeem investments or allow withdrawals. The result was a total of 57 lawsuits to date including the suit by the Securities Exchange Commission in Portland.

In that case, a federal judge appointed a receiver in February 1972 after barring further dealings of the United Financial Group, which is based in Black Point.

The receiver, attorney William E. Tassock of Portland, issued his summary of the empire's assets last month.

Tassock, after examining records from throughout the world, concluded the companies had "a remarkable history of poor, intangible investments."

The sales staff has largely disintegrated, he said, and the companies have shown "a history of inability to pay employees and creditors."

Pollock, who paid himself $5,000 a month, had 17 other employees working for him in Marin, according to Tassock.

Among the local assets of the companies were Pollock's home and Lamborghini sports car with a total value of $260,000.

The receiver recommended that all investors share in proportion to their investments in the $10.4 million left. McGuire's ruling makes Pollock liable for the rest.

The judge said Pollock was completely in control of the companies he set up and was therefore responsible for their false practices.

Among the fraudulent practices were:

1. Use of the bulk of investments for promotion and expansion instead of for income producing investments.
2. False claims of not charging commissions.
3. Issuance of false financial statements.

Alaskan Pipeline Rulings Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Interior committee has delayed key decisions on the trans-Alaska oil pipeline until Monday after giving tentative approval to legal changes removing statutory obstacles to the project.

To be resolved Monday were the sections of proposed legislation that would direct the interior secretary to issue rights-of-way and permits for construction of the controversial pipeline without any further presently required studies of its impact on the environment.

The Senate passed its version of the measure Tuesday, voting by a one-vote margin to exempt the $3.5 billion, 789-mile project from environmental laws.

On Friday, the House Interior Committee began amending a subcommittee's similar bill, which would authorize changes in a 1920 law limiting pipeline rights-of-way to 24 feet.

The law was cited by a U.S. appeals court which nullified Interior Department permits last year for the pipeline's construction.

The House Committee approved widening the right-of-way to 50 feet, or wider if the interior secretary decides it is needed.

The committee also approved requirements that the pipeline be operated in a safe manner and that annual safety reports be made to Congress.

By PAT BALMES

Mrs. Berton Bennett, 70, whose voice sang in 1930 films, reminisced recently at her Tiburon home of Hollywood's early days.

"In those days we would make a record and I would stand behind the star. Sometimes I stood in front of her and she watched me and sang along," said Ellen Bennett.

Mrs. Bennett's voice was chosen to sing on the lips of Marian Marsh, who co-starred with John Barrymore in "Svengali."

"I sang under the piano for Marian Marsh. At the dramatic moment I was supposed to flat, but my voice was too well trained and I couldn't. After several failures a hard poke from the director made me flat," she said, smiling at the memory.

Once the cast worked on the set all day while the director labored to get John Barrymore to direct a triangle, she recalled.

Mrs. Bennett sang the introduction for the movie "Danny Boy."

ANOTHER OF her Hollywood jobs was to substitute her hands and feet for those of the stars when scripts called for shots of just their hands and feet.

"When a great star's hand dropped a letter for dramatic emphasis, it was my hand. When she walked across the lobby, those were my legs," she said adding that sometimes she never even saw the celebrity.

Today Ellen Bennett and her husband, a retired KGO chief announcer, live in Tiburon's first schoolhouse, where she is completing a book describing her speech therapy method, "Speech Through Music for Children."

Shuffling through old theatrical photographs and cherished fan mail, the former singer said, "I was a very little kid when I first was dragged onto the stage."

She was born in Scotland and barnstormed in the Midwest with her mother and father's traveling theatrical group which played "in a great tent" for a week at a time, she said.

Her father, who had understudied Sir Henry Irving, was a director and band leader and her mother sang.

At 17 Ellen went to Chicago to study at the Chicago Musical College and won a three-year scholarship to the American Conservatory, where she earned a teacher's certificate. She continued to study with private teachers.

SHE WAS guest soloist for Frederick Stock of the Chicago Symphony and for Chaliapin, the basso profundo with the Metropolitan Opera.

MRS. BERTON BENNETT

At Chicago's Edgewater Beach Hotel she was a soloist with Al Jolson.

"He was a gentle, nice person. I was so very young — one night it was hot and I headed for the punch bowl. He said, 'Little girl, do you know what that is? Little girl, do not drink it,' " she recalled.

She was a soloist on KWY radio in Chicago, and later she went to Seattle to sing in prologues before the films were shown in movie houses.

"I was offered to prepare Gilda in Rigoletto and Violetta in La Traviata for Fortune Gallo, impresario of the San Carlos Opera Company, and to join the company. Instead I rushed off and got married," she said.

Her first husband was the late Hugo Carlson and their son Gordon is now an Oroville State Park ranger.

The newlyweds lived in San Francisco, where Ellen sang on KFRC radio's "Captain Dobbsie" program and with KYA's Cy Trobbe program. And she sang in prologues with Paul Ash in Fox and Paramount Theaters.

In 1930 she followed her former teacher, Leon Ceppard of Seattle, to Hollywood where she opened in the Pantages Theater at Hollywood and Vine with Marian Davies in "Little Old New York." Next she was soloist with David Mendosa at the Paramount Theater.

Then her movie singing began.

During this time she appeared with Olson and Johnson in Portland, Ore., and recalls the fun the cast had shooting freshly caught smelt at the audience.

She declined to voice double for the part of Katie in "The Student Prince," returning instead to San Francisco to give birth to her son.

A treasured memory is the visit by Lucretia Bori, the Spanish soprano from the Met, at her San Francisco home.

DURING WORLD War II Mrs. Bennett took charge of 1,000 American Women's Volunteer Service junior volunteers from 14 through 18 years old who helped soldiers when they got to town and ran the USOs, she said.

In 1943 the Carlsons moved to an apartment on property they bought in Tiburon where Navy men connected with the net base and their wives were living.

Giovanni Martinelli of the Met visited Mrs. Bennett there, she said. She wanted to work with children so she took a San Francisco State College course in children's dramatics and put on little shows at Tiburon School.

Then she was the teacher at Belvedere-Tiburon and San Rafael nursery school co-ops and taught an adult education class at San Rafael High School in nursery school procedure.

Her husband died in 1953 and soon afterward a stroke crippled her left side. Because she feared the loss of her speech, Mrs. Bennett returned to San Francisco State College for a speech therapist's credential.

In 1954 she married Berton Bennett, a friend of her late husband.

PHOTOGRAPHED STARTING the first Vita Phone piped-music system on Alexander Lines ships, Mrs. Berton Bennett of Tiburon was a celebrity in 1930. Once guest soloist with the Chicago Symphony and the Metropolitan Opera, she sang in early movies, on the radio and at hotels and theaters.

Recently the couple moved to the little cottage on their property. Their tenants are "like family," she said. The 1884 school house was dragged up the hill from the railroad yard by horses, she believes.

Her first speech therapist position was for the summer at the Cedars Development School (now known as Cedars Foundation of Marin) and she stayed eight years.

Disabled, she did not want to meet people, but gained courage from "those brave little children at Cedars."

She played the piano, too, with one hand.

"The children who did not speak, and there are many at Cedars, would sing along and make vocal sounds which are the beginnings of speech.

"They would not make nonsense sounds a therapist usually requests because those children think, 'That is silly.' But they will sing "Alouette, Gentle Alouette," she explained.

An autistic child first communicated with her by copying her "rhythm stories."

Mrs. Bennett's method is now being used by speech pathologist Bill Goen, an employee of Stanford Speech Clinic.

Her method is explained in "Speech through Music for Children" which was was requested by the Schmacher Speech Foundation for publication by educational publisher Charles C. Thomas.

Now retired from Cedars, Mrs. Bennett faithfully writes to her former students, telling of deer that eat her landscaping and her dog which is forever getting into the fish bowl.

"Every child gets his own stamped, addressed envelope.

"Cedars is a loving, wonderful place; you get as much as you give. Every gesture is reaching for love and understanding. They are really very dear to work with," Ellen Bennett said.

Ryans Return From Scandinavia

By MOLLY MARIN

Home in Belvedere after three weeks traveling in the Scandinavian countries are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ryan. They visited Mrs. Ryan's mother, Mrs. Emma Niska in the small town of Pajala in the county of Norrbotten in Sweden. Mrs. Ryan was born there. Pajala is 150 miles north of the Arctic Circle. The Ryans were entertained by family members and friends during their stay in Sweden. They drove to North Cape in Norway, the northernmost cape in Europe, and also visited other places in Norway and Finland. During their summer visit in the northern latitudes the sun never went down, Mrs. Ryan said.

MRS. MARGOT Clark, who was born in Novato in 1898, entertained at a tea in her home on July 13. Guests were former schoolmates at Novato grammar school and San Rafael High School, Mrs. Francis McLaughlin and Mrs. Esther Clark, now both of Petaluma; and her sister, who is visiting her from Vienna, Austria, Mrs. Eveline Oswald, who has lived in Austria for the past 50 years.

The four women reminisced about their girlhood days and talked about Novato, which Mrs. Clark says is not the Novato they knew years ago. There were only 500 people in Novato when she left in 1927 to move to San Francisco when she was married, and there were five saloons on the tiny street. Now a widow, Mrs. Clark returned to Novato last September and finds it hard to locate addresses in the large suburban area.

Margot Clark and Eveline Oswald are the daughters of the late Judge Hermann Rudolff, a Novato pioneer.

MRS. DON Solem of Mill Valley was honored at a luncheon and baby shower at the Caprice Restaurant in Tiburon Wednesday (July 18). The luncheon was arranged by Miss Anne Ellinwood of Tiburon. The guests were Mrs. Louis Ruggeri of Orinda, Mrs. Solem's mother, and Mmes. Troy Lewis, Edward Mills, Michael Peevey, John Donhoff, E. Robert Herrell, Harvey Bragdon and Maurice Kauer, all of Mill Valley.

BARBARA LOUISE Gould and Thomas Eric Mindling were married in a garden setting in Virginia City, Nev., on July 7.

The bride is the daughter of U.S. Coast Guard Capt. (ret.) and Mrs. Joseph E. Gould, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mindling, all of Novato. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Tallitsch of Novato and Mrs. John Mindling of Napa.

The bride is a 1971 graduate of California State University, Sonoma, and the bridegroom was graduated from Novato High School and attended College of Marin. He is a test driver in Carson City.

BARBARA WILLMANN arrived in Marin last night from her home in Vienna, Austria, for a four weeks visit with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Willmann of San Anselmo. Mrs. Willmann is director of housing for the Vienna Program of the Institute of European Studies, a junior year abroad program attended by many Marinites and Bay Area students.

An afternoon reception for some 40 guests will be given at the Willmann home July 28 for former students, their parents and friends of Mrs. Willman. A special guest will be the Consul General of Austria in San Francisco, Paul Eisler, whose daughter studied in the program.

AFTER AN Hawaiian wedding trip, newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Tom Nelson (Jean Smith) will make their home in Novato. The couple exchanged vows July 7 at St. Anselm's Church in San Anselmo.

Jean, employed at Blessed Sacrament School, is a Marin Catholic High School and Dominican College graduate. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ward T. Smith of San Rafael.

Tom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Nelson of San Rafael, attended Terra Linda High School and St. Mary's College and is employed by California State Automobile Association in Greenbrae.

MR. AND Mrs. Frank John Guidice are living in San Rafael after their marriage June 7 at St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael. The bride is the former June E. Howard of San Rafael, who attended Ventura schools. Her sister, Julie Ann Howard also resides in San Rafael.

Frank is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Guidice of San Rafael. A graduate of Redwood High School, he attended Skyline College and is employed by BART Trucking Co., in San Francisco.

Lynda Abrams To Marry John Jamrog

The engagement of Lynda Abrams of Belvedere to John H. Jamrog of Woodside has been announced by Lynda's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Alan L. Abrams of Belvedere.

Lynda is the sister of Frederick and Kenneth Abrams and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Zelinsky of San Francisco and Belvedere, and of Mrs. Ernest Safran of San Francisco.

She is a graduate of California Polytechnic State University and received the M.S. degree from the University of California at Davis.

John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Jamrog of Woodside. Mrs. Clarence Cardoza of Menlo Park is his sister and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jamrog of Holyoke, Mass., are his grandparents.

He was graduated from Coalinga College and California Polytechnic. John is employed as a systems engineer with Gangi Bros. Cannery in Santa Clara.

Lynda and John have set a Nov. 3 wedding at Lake Merced Golf and Country Club in San Francisco.

Textile Industry Warned On Trends

The textile industry can be heading for trouble if it doesn't pay enough attention to fashion, delegates to the Textile Distributors Association were told recently.

"There are about 100 influential fashion pace setters in America," Peter Diamandia, president of American Essence, Inc. told the convention meeting at Pocono Manor, Pa. There are 25 top ready-to-wear designers, 25 top fashion editors, 25 retail fashion coordinators and 25 major textile designers, he indicated.

THE LAST WORD

Brides Of Today Are Returning To The Old-Fashioned Wedding

By DOROTHY NEWELL

"Something borrowed, something blue" — weddings seem to be returning to the traditions of yesteryear after the informality of the ceremony on a mountaintop or in a pasture. Or so it seems in Novato.

Wedding photos again reflect the bride in the traditional white gown and the new husband in more formal attire.

The interest in a return to the past also is taking more people to the Mother Lode country to hunt for gold and antiques of early California. Perhaps the renewed search for gold results from its new high value, but there is also a feeling for the past in the interest in Victorian antique pieces.

Families are going to the Feather River and panning and surfing for gold. And they seem to be a special type of people who enjoy showing what their find is for the day. Their camp grounds are clean, and they invite people to hear their experiences and admire a vial of nuggets or flakes of gold.

Certainly, everyone can't afford a trip to Europe or other foreign ports on vacation, and what better way for families to vacation than to camp and spend a week or two in any of the private campgrounds or state and national forests in the West. Even a weekend with the family in the county parks of Sonoma, where the family pet is also welcome, is enjoyable.

Another return to the past is seen in the current rage for what some call "the victory garden" of World War II. Many families have had them each summer, delignting in the fresh corn, tomatoes, squash and other vegetables, picked each day for dinner as they ripen. However, the high price of thses same items in the grocery store has made many more people begin having a home garden.

But there are some things that most would rather not give up in a return to the past — the new polyester fabrics, non-iron shirts and dresses, automatic dish washers, garbage disposals and self cleaning ovens, to name a few.

It's great to look back, but, thank heavens for modern conveniences.

Two Exchange Their Vows In Apartment

Teresa Pelmear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Pelmear of Novato, and Walter Young of San Francisco, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Young of Ohio, were married at the couple's new apartment in San Francisco on July 7.

The bride's sister, Mrs. William J. Fitzpatrick of Santa Rosa, was matron of honor, and best man was Charles Benton of San Francisco.

Following a luncheon at their apartment, the couple went on a wedding trip to Monterey and Southern California.

The bride is also the sister of Stan Pelmear of Novato, and her grandparents are Mrs. Warren Green and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pelmear of San Francisco. She was graduated from Novato High School and works at California Blue Shield Co. in San Francisco.

The bridegroom is the brother of Barry and James Young and Mrs. James Paige of Ohio. He was graduated from Sydney High School in Sydney, Ohio, and is a bar manager in San Francisco.

Unisex Fear: What's In A Difference?

I-J Special Report

NEW YORK — A new word has appeared in the language to describe what people fear about equality of the sexes — it's "unisex." Many fear that the long-celebrated differences between men and women will disappear. But there's not a chance.

Charlotte Holt Clinebell, psychotherapist, expresses this view in her book, "Meet Me In The Middle: On Becoming Human Together," published by Harper and Row.

"The issue in equality is not that women must become 'like men,' or that men must become 'like women,' particularly not in imitating the other's worst qualities," she writes. "There is nothing to be gained if women going into politics become warlike, or men moving into relationships become weak or dependent. Equality doesn't mean that we are going to give up whatever turns out to be our uniqueness as males and females."

What equality of the sexes really means, she says, is a genuine interdependence, a doing away with the centuries-old "battle of the sexes" which centers around male dominance and female submission.

By PAT BALMES

Mrs. Berton Bennett, 70, whose voice sang in 1930 films, reminisced recently at her Tiburon home of Hollywood's early days.

"In those days we would make a record and I would stand behind the star. Sometimes I stood in front of her and she watched me and sang along," said Ellen Bennett.

Mrs. Bennett's voice was chosen to sing on the lips of Marian Marsh, who co-starred with John Barrymore in "Svengali."

"I sang under the piano for Marian Marsh. At the dramatic moment I was supposed to flat, but my voice was too well trained and I couldn't. After several failures a hard poke from the director made me flat," she said, smiling at the memory.

Once the cast worked on the set all day while the director labored to get John Barrymore to direct a triangle, she recalled.

Mrs. Bennett sang the introduction for the movie "Danny Boy."

ANOTHER OF her Hollywood jobs was to substitute her hands and feet for those of the stars when scripts called for shots of just their hands and feet.

"When a great star's hand dropped a letter for dramatic emphasis, it was my hand. When she walked across the lobby, those were my legs," she said adding that sometimes she never even saw the celebrity.

Today Ellen Bennett and her husband, a retired KGO chief announcer, live in Tiburon's first schoolhouse, where she is completing a book describing her speech therapy method, "Speech Through Music for Children."

Shuffling through old theatrical photographs and cherished fan mail, the former singer said, "I was a very little kid when I first was dragged onto the stage."

She was born in Scotland and barnstormed in the Midwest with her mother and father's traveling theatrical group which played "in a great tent" for a week at a time, she said.

Her father, who had understudied Sir Henry Irving, was a director and band leader and her mother sang.

At 17 Ellen went to Chicago to study at the Chicago Musical College and won a three-year scholarship to the American Conservatory, where she earned a teacher's certificate. She continued to study with private teachers.

SHE WAS guest soloist for Frederick Stock of the Chicago Symphony and for Chaliapin, the basso profundo with the Metropolitan Opera.

At Chicago's Edgewater Beach Hotel she was a soloist with Al Jolson.

"He was a gentle, nice person. I was so very young — one night it was hot and I headed for the punch bowl. He said, 'Little girl, do you know what that is? Little girl, do not drink it,' " she recalled.

She was a soloist on KWY radio in Chicago, and later she went to Seattle to sing in prologues before the films were shown in movie houses.

"I was offered to prepare Gilda in Rigoletto and Violetta in La Traviata for Fortune Gallo, impresario of the San Carlos Opera Company, and to join the company. Instead I rushed off and got married," she said.

Her first husband was the late Hugo Carlson and their son Gordon is now an Oroville State Park ranger.

The newlyweds lived in San Francisco, where Ellen sang on KFRC radio's "Captain Dobbsie" program and with KYA's Cy Trobbe program. And she sang in prologues with Paul Ash in Fox and Paramount Theaters.

In 1930 she followed her former teacher, Leon Ceppard of Seattle, to Hollywood where she opened in the Pantages Theater at Hollywood and Vine with Marian Davies in "Little Old New York." Next she was soloist with David Mendosa at the Paramount Theater.

Then her movie singing began.

During this time she appeared with Olson and Johnson in Portland, Ore., and recalls the fun the cast had shooting freshly caught smelt at the audience.

She declined to voice double for the part of Katie in "The Student Prince," returning instead to San Francisco to give birth to her son.

A treasured memory is the visit by Lucretia Bori, the Spanish soprano from the Met, at her San Francisco home.

DURING WORLD War II Mrs. Bennett took charge of 1,000 American Women's Volunteer Service junior volunteers from 14 through 18 years old who helped soldiers when they got to town and ran the USOs, she said.

In 1943 the Carlsons moved to an apartment on property they bought in Tiburon where Navy men connected with the net base and their wives were living.

Giovanni Martinelli of the Met visited Mrs. Bennett there, she said. She wanted to work with children so she took a San Francisco State College course in children's dramatics and put on little shows at Tiburon School.

Then she was the teacher at Belvedere-Tiburon and San Rafael nursery school co-ops and taught an adult education class at San Rafael High School in nursery school procedure.

Her husband died in 1953 and soon afterward a stroke crippled her left side. Because she feared the loss of her speech, Mrs. Bennett returned to San Francisco State College for a speech therapist's credential.

PHOTOGRAPHED STARTING the first Vita Phone piped-music system on Alexander Lines ships, Mrs. Berton Bennett of Tiburon was a celebrity in 1930. Once guest soloist with the Chicago Symphony and the Metropolitan Opera, she sang in early movies, on the radio and at hotels and theaters.

In 1954 she married Berton Bennett, a friend of her late husband.

Recently the couple moved to the little cottage on their property. Their tenants are "like family," she said. The 1884 school house was dragged up the hill from the railroad yard by horses, she believes.

Her first speech therapist position was for the summer at the Cedars Development School (now known as Cedars Foundation of Marin) and she stayed eight years.

Disabled, she did not want to meet people, but gained courage from "those brave little children at Cedars."

She played the piano, too, with one hand.

"The children who did not speak, and there are many at Cedars, would sing along and make vocal sounds which are the beginnings of speech.

"They would not make nonsense sounds a therapist usually requests because those children think, 'That is silly.' But they will sing "Alouette, Gentle Alouette," she explained.

An autistic child first communicated with her by copying her "rhythm stories."

Mrs. Bennett's method is now being used by speech pathologist Bill Goen, an employee of Stanford Speech Clinic.

Her method is explained in "Speech through Music for Children" which was was requested by the Schmacher Speech Foundation for publication by educational publisher Charles C. Thomas.

Now retired from Cedars, Mrs. Bennett faithfully writes to her former students, telling of deer that eat her landscaping and her dog which is forever getting into the fish bowl.

"Every child gets his own stamped, addressed envelope.

"Cedars is a loving, wonderful place; you get as much as you give. Every gesture is reaching for love and understanding. They are really very dear to work with," Ellen Bennett said.

Textile Industry Warned On Trends

The textile industry can be heading for trouble if it doesn't pay enough attention to fashion, delegates to the Textile Distributors Association were told recently.

"There are about 100 influential fashion pace setters in America," Peter Diamandia, president of American Essence, Inc. told the convention meeting at Pocono Manor, Pa. There are 25 top ready-to-wear designers, 25 top fashion editors, 25 retail fashion coordinators and 25 major textile designers, he indicated.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Ryans Return From Scandinavia

By MOLLY MARIN

Home in Belvedere after three weeks traveling in the Scandinavian countries are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ryan. They visited Mrs. Ryan's mother, Mrs. Emma Niska in the small town of Pajala in the county of Norrbotten in Sweden. Mrs. Ryan was born there. Pajala is 150 miles north of the Arctic Circle. The Ryans were entertained by family members and friends during their stay in Sweden. They drove to North Cape in Norway, the northernmost cape in Europe, and also visited other places in Norway and Finland. During their summer visit in the northern latitudes the sun never went down, Mrs. Ryan said.

MRS. MARGOT Clark, who was born in Novato in 1898, entertained at a tea in her home on July 13. Guests were former schoolmates at Novato grammar school and San Rafael High School, Mrs. Francis McLaughlin and Mrs. Esther Clark, now both of Petaluma; and her sister, who is visiting her from Vienna, Austria, Mrs. Eveline Oswald, who has lived in Austria for the past 50 years.

The four women reminisced about their girlhood days and talked about Novato, which Mrs. Clark says is not the Novato they knew years ago. There were only 500 people in Novato when she left in 1927 to move to San Francisco when she was married, and there were five saloons on the tiny street. Now a widow, Mrs. Clark returned to Novato last September and finds it hard to locate addresses in the large suburban area.

Margot Clark and Eveline Oswald are the daughters of the late Judge Hermann Rudolff, a Novato pioneer.

MRS. DON Solem of Mill Valley was honored at a luncheon and baby shower at the Caprice Restaurant in Tiburon Wednesday (July 18). The luncheon was arranged by Miss Anne Ellinwood of Tiburon. The guests were Mrs. Louis Ruggeri of Orinda, Mrs. Solem's mother, and Mmes. Troy Lewis, Edward Mills, Michael Peevey, John Donhoff, E. Robert Herrell, Harvey Bragdon and Maurice Kauer, all of Mill Valley.

BARBARA LOUISE Gould and Thomas Eric Mindling were married in a garden setting in Virginia City, Nev., on July 7.

The bride is the daughter of U.S. Coast Guard Capt. (ret.) and Mrs. Joseph E. Gould, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mindling, all of Novato. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Tallitsch of Novato and Mrs. John Mindling of Napa.

The bride is a 1971 graduate of California State University, Sonoma, and the bridegroom was graduated from Novato High School and attended College of Marin. He is a test driver in Carson City.

Marin Women

BARBARA WILLMANN arrived in Marin last night from her home in Vienna, Austria, for a four weeks visit with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Willmann of San Anselmo. Mrs. Willmann is director of housing for the Vienna Program of the Institute of European Studies, a junior year abroad program attended by many Marinites and Bay Area students.

An afternoon reception for some 40 guests will be given at the Willmann home July 28 for former students, their parents and friends of Mrs. Willman. A special guest will be the Consul General of Austria in San Francisco, Paul Eisler, whose daughter studied in the program.

AFTER AN Hawaiian wedding trip, newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Tom Nelson (Jean Smith) will make their home in Novato. The couple exchanged vows July 7 at St. Anselm's Church in San Anselmo.

Jean, employed at Blessed Sacrament School, is a Marin Catholic High School and Dominican College graduate. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ward T. Smith of San Rafael.

Tom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Nelson of San Rafael, attended Terra Linda High School and St. Mary's College and is employed by California State Automobile Association in Greenbrae.

MR. AND Mrs. Frank John Guidice are living in San Rafael after their marriage June 7 at St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael. The bride is the former June E. Howard of San Rafael, who attended Ventura schools. Her sister, Julie Ann Howard also resides in San Rafael.

Frank is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Guidice of San Rafael. A graduate of Redwood High School, he attended Skyline College and is employed by BART Trucking Co., in San Francisco.

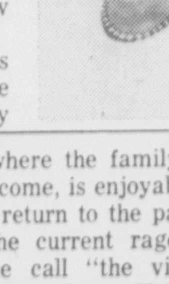
THE LAST WORD

Brides Of Today Are Returning To The Old-Fashioned Wedding

By DOROTHY NEWELL



"Something borrowed, something blue" — weddings seem to be returning to the traditions of yesteryear after the informality of the ceremony on a mountaintop or in a pasture. Or so it seems in Novato.

Wedding photos again reflect the bride in the traditional white gown and the new husband in more formal attire.

The interest in a return to the past also is taking more people to the Mother Lode country to hunt for gold and antiques of early California. Perhaps the renewed search for gold results from its new high value, but there is also a feeling for the past in the interest in Victorian antique pieces.

Families are going to the Feather River and panning and surfing for gold. And they seem to be a special type of people who enjoy showing what their find is for the day. Their camp grounds are clean, and they invite people to hear their experiences and admire a vial of nuggets or flakes of gold.

Certainly, everyone can't afford a trip to Europe or other foreign ports on vacation, and what better way for families to vacation than to camp and spend a week or two in any of the private campgrounds or state and national forests in the West. Even a weekend with the family in the county parks of Sonoma, where the family pet is also welcome, is enjoyable.

Another return to the past is seen in the current rage for what some call "the victory garden" of World War II. Many families have had them each summer, delignting in the fresh corn, tomatoes, squash and other vegetables, picked each day for dinner as they ripen. However, the high price of thses same items in the grocery store has made many more people begin having a home garden.

But there are some things that most would rather not give up in a return to the past — the new polyester fabrics, non-iron shirts and dresses, automatic dish washers, garbage disposals and self cleaning ovens, to name a few.

It's great to look back, but, thank heavens for modern conveniences.

Two Exchange Their Vows In Apartment

Teresa Pelmear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Pelmear of Novato, and Walter Young of San Francisco, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Young of Ohio, were married at the couple's new apartment in San Francisco on July 7.

The bride's sister, Mrs. William J. Fitzpatrick of Santa Rosa, was matron of honor, and best man was Charles Benton of San Francisco.

Following a luncheon at their apartment, the couple went on a wedding trip to Monterey and Southern California.

The bride is also the sister of Stan Pelmear of Novato, and her grandparents are Mrs. Warren Green and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pelmear of San Francisco. She was graduated from Novato High School and works at California Blue Shield Co. in San Francisco.

The bridegroom is the brother of Barry and James Young and Mrs. James Paige of Ohio. He was graduated from Sydney High School in Sydney, Ohio, and is a bar manager in San Francisco.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Mother And Daughter Are Both Going With Older Married Men

RAP:

My mother is going with a married man who is 17 years older than she is. I don't say anything though I think a lot!

So why should she make snide remarks when I get interested in a man 16 years older than me, and only slightly married? Maybe my man's not perfect, but neither is hers. — LIVE AND LET LIVE, AGE 19

L AND LL, 19:

What a mother does in her own personal life is often the exact opposite of what she wants for her daughter — perhaps because she sees the problems her actions have created.

Since you each disapprove the other's choice (you, silently; she, cuttingly), why not get honest and have a real discussion? You might both discover you're settling for less because you feel unworthy of more.

Perhaps you might even build enough confidence in each other to realize that neither of you should consider older, easily "snagged" married men the only kind you can attract. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

This is to "Gemini" and "Hopeful" which think that cutting your hair according to the stars makes it grow thicker.

I believe in astrology — I'm a Scorpio — but I'm also a licensed beautician, and I know that hair health and growth depend on nutrition, care, and a few minor factors.

Normal hair grows about one-half inch a month, sometimes faster in summer.

Cutting does not influence growth, no matter when or how. It only serves as a styling device or for the removal of damaged hair. Thickness depends on heredity or race. Coloring, perms, and extreme climatic conditions can change texture, but thickness and texture are different.

Neither will cutting the hair make it curly or straight, or change the color. Those are old wives' tales.

Hair is nourished only in the scalp, in the hair follicle through the papilla. The way to healthy hair is proper diet, monthly trimming, avoiding abuse by chemicals and protecting it from sun and wind. Hair types vary, being strong or delicate, coarse or fine, etc., but care of the hair doesn't, and all that astrological rigmarole is nonsense. — SCORPIO BEAUTICIAN

RAP:

What would you think of a boy who promises to take a girl to a formal dance and then at the last minute says he has to work? You'd think a boss would let him off for something special!

Should she break up with him or teach him a lesson by dating one of his friends? — FRIEND WHO CARES

FRIEND:

I have news for you: Bosses don't always think a dance date is "special" — not if it interferes with their business. Your friend shouldn't take her disappointment out on a guy who can't help disappointing her — unless he wants to be fired. — SUE

Personal to "Is he liberated or a chauvinist??" Try this little test on your boyfriend. Ask him to punctuate the following sentence:

"Woman without her man is incomplete."

You can tell a lot about a man's thinking by where he puts the commas! — HELEN

NOTE FROM SUE: By the way, readers, where would you put the comma or commas? — SUE

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Youngsters Due Regular Blood Pressure Checks

I-J Special Report

Although high blood pressure is usually found in persons over 19 years old, children with a family history of essential hypertension are at increased risk of developing the condition, according to Dr. James L. Reynolds, president of the Louisiana Heart Association.

There is increasing evidence that essential hypertension is set in childhood, perhaps during the first two years of life, or even before birth, according to an article by Dr. Reynolds in a recent issue of "The Journal of the Louisiana State Medical Society."

"It cannot yet defnitely be said that it does begin in childhood," he says, but concludes that "blood pressure measurement should, indeed, be a routine part of childhood physical examination."

Most researchers agree that high blood pressure runs in families and that heredity is a major determinant of essential hypertension.

Don't jump off the high platform shoes yet, says the American Footwear Institute. There's a lot of happy hoofing left there, especially for the young, who still have their hearts set on the high-rise soles.

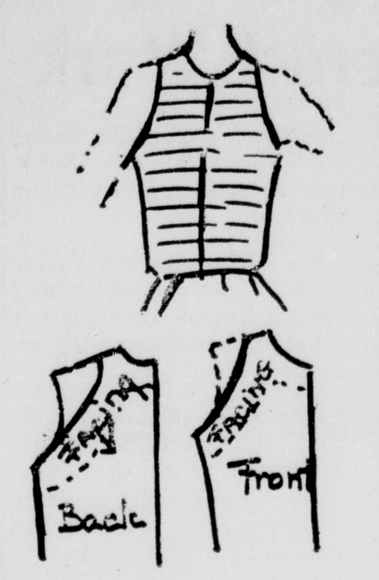
Changing Pattern Is Easy

By EUNICE FARMER
(Released by Register and Tribune Syndicate)



DEAR EUNICE,

I loved your recent article about choosing a pattern that shows the armhole cut in slightly to resemble the halter style without giving a completely bare back look. I am wondering if we can't do this with the patterns we already have instead of buying new ones?

MRS. S.M.

DEAR MRS. S.M.,

Yes, it is a simple matter to change a pattern. Again, it just takes a little confidence. If you don't want to cut up your existing pattern, trace it on a piece of brown paper. Redraw the armhole so that it is cut the same at the underarm, up to the notch in the front and back of the armhole. From this point to the shoulder, you will mark a curve, ending with the width you want at the shoulder.

After you have decided on the cut of the armhole, you can outer edge, and carefully marking it about 2½ inch to 3 inches wide. It will fit the new armhole without a ripple or a bulge. make your own facing for this armhole by using the same

DEAR EUNICE,

I have narrow shoulders for the rest of my body and the shoulder seams always extend about ½ inch to ¾ inch beyond my arm. I have to trim them at the outer edge but am never sure this is the correct way, or if I should take a larger seam in the garment and the sleeve together.

MRS. I.S.

DEAR MRS. I.S.,

Never change the shape of the sleeve cap. The adjustment must be made on the garment itself. I would suggest you make a small fold in your pattern, between the neckline and the armhole. This should be about ¼ inch wide at the shoulder tapering down to nothing, about 6 inches below the shoulder.

Do the same adjustment for the back and front of the garment. Whether your garment has sleeves or no sleeves, you have not changed the armhole shape so that your sleeve or facing will still fit perfectly. I am very opposed to trimming the armhole itself, it is not an accurate adjustment.

DEAR EUNICE,

My husband brought me some beautiful silk from India which I used to make a lovely shirt dress. I made my own buttons, the Chinese ball buttons you have suggested. However, now they are much too large for my buttonholes and I don't know what I did wrong. Please come up with a solution, I don't want to give up the buttons.

MRS. N.B.

DEAR MRS. N.B.,

You should have made the buttons first, then experimented with the size of your buttonhole. You must realize that you need a much larger buttonhole for any round button, especially these Chinese ball buttons because they are made of the fabric. Fabirc won't slide the way a metal or bone button will.

Since you have already made the buttonholes and you want to use the buttons, you will have to come up with another solution. I would recommend sewing the buttons on the buttonhole so that they actually look as though they have been buttoned, then apply snaps to the underside of the buttonhole as well as the other side of your garment. The snaps shouldn't distract from the original design since they will be set far enough back from the outer edge of the garment.

If the garment is a jacket instead of a dress and you will be wearing it open as well as buttoned, you should cover your snaps with a matching piece of lightweight silk as the designers do.

If you would like a copy of the very popular Chinese ball buttons instructions send 10 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR EUNICE,

What can I do to prevent knit slacks from looking baggy at the seams?

MISS M.E.S.

DEAR MISS M.E.S.,

Often the fabric used for slacks is just too soft and lightweight and there is virtually nothing you can do to prevent this. My only suggestion is to add a strip of bias cut tape when you stitch the seams, this will stabilize them a little but still give the8seams the stretch that is required with knits. If you use a woven hem tape, the seams will draw up and look puckered because it will not allow the seam to give the same as the knit.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Mother And Daughter Are Both Going With Older Married Men

RAP:

My mother is going with a married man who is 17 years older than she is. I don't say anything though I think a lot!

So why should she make snide remarks when I get interested in a man 16 years older than me, and only slightly married? Maybe my man's not perfect, but neither is hers. — LIVE AND LET LIVE, AGE 19

L AND LL, 19:

What a mother does in her own personal life is often the exact opposite of what she wants for her daughter — perhaps because she sees the problems her actions have created.

Since you each disapprove the other's choice (you, silently; she, cuttingly), why not get honest and have a real discussion? You might both discover you're settling for less because you feel unworthy of more.

Perhaps you might even build enough confidence in each other to realize that neither of you should consider older, easily "snagged" married men the only kind you can attract. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

This is to "Gemini" and "Hopeful" which think that cutting your hair according to the stars makes it grow thicker.

I believe in astrology — I'm a Scorpio — but I'm also a licensed beautician, and I know that hair health and growth depend on nutrition, care, and a few minor factors.

Normal hair grows about one-half inch a month, sometimes faster in summer.

Cutting does not influence growth, no matter when or how. It only serves as a styling device or for the removal of damaged hair. Thickness depends on heredity or race. Coloring, perms, and extreme climatic conditions can change texture, but thickness and texture are different.

Neither will cutting the hair make it curly or straight, or change the color. Those are old wives' tales.

Hair is nourished only in the scalp, in the hair follicle through the papilla. The way to healthy hair is proper diet, monthly trimming, avoiding abuse by chemicals and protecting it from sun and wind. Hair types vary, being strong or delicate, coarse or fine, etc., but care of the hair doesn't, and all that astrological rigmarole is nonsense. — SCORPIO BEAUTICIAN

RAP:

What would you think of a boy who promises to take a girl to a formal dance and then at the last minute says he has to work? You'd think a boss would let him off for something special!

Should she break up with him or teach him a lesson by dating one of his friends? — FRIEND WHO CARES

FRIEND:

I have news for you: Bosses don't always think a dance date is "special" — not if it interferes with their business. Your friend shouldn't take her disappointment out on a guy who can't help disappointing her — unless he wants to be fired. — SUE

Personal to "Is he liberated or a chauvinist??" Try this little test on your boyfriend. Ask him to punctuate the following sentence:

"Woman without her man is incomplete."

You can tell a lot about a man's thinking by where he puts the commas! — HELEN

NOTE FROM SUE: By the way, readers, where would you put the comma or commas? — SUE

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

Youngsters Due Regular Blood Pressure Checks

I-J Special Report

Although high blood pressure is usually found in persons over 19 years old, children with a family history of essential hypertension are at increased risk of developing the condition, according to Dr. James L. Reynolds, president of the Louisiana Heart Association.

There is increasing evidence that essential hypertension is set in childhood, perhaps during the first two years of life, or even before birth, according to an article by Dr. Reynolds in a recent issue of "The Journal of the Louisiana State Medical Society."

"It cannot yet defnitely be said that it does begin in childhood," he says, but concludes that "blood pressure measurement should, indeed, be a routine part of childhood physical examination."

Most researchers agree that high blood pressure runs in families and that heredity is a major determinant of essential hypertension.

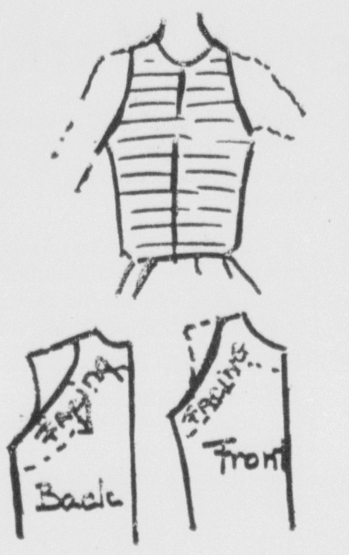
Changing Pattern Is Easy

By EUNICE FARMER
(Released by Register and Tribune Syndicate)



DEAR EUNICE,

I loved your recent article about choosing a pattern that shows the armhole cut in slightly to resemble the halter style without giving a completely bare back look. I am wondering if we can't do this with the patterns we already have instead of buying new ones?

MRS. S.M.

DEAR MRS. S.M.,

Yes, it is a simple matter to change a pattern. Again, it just takes a little confidence. If you don't want to cut up your existing pattern, trace it on a piece of brown paper. Redraw the armhole so that it is cut the same at the underarm, up to the notch in the front and back of the armhole. From this point to the shoulder, you will mark a curve, ending with the width you want at the shoulder.

After you have decided on the cut of the armhole, you can outer edge, and carefully marking it about 2½ inch to 3 inches wide. It will fit the new armhole without a ripple or a bulge. make your own facing for this armhole by using the same

DEAR EUNICE,

I have narrow shoulders for the rest of my body and the shoulder seams always extend about ½ inch to ¾ inch beyond my arm. I have to trim them at the outer edge but am never sure this is the correct way, or if I should take a larger seam in the garment and the sleeve together.

MRS. I.S.

DEAR MRS. I.S.,

Never change the shape of the sleeve cap. The adjustment must be made on the garment itself. I would suggest you make a small fold in your pattern, between the neckline and the armhole. This should be about ¼ inch wide at the shoulder tapering down to nothing, about 6 inches below the shoulder.

Do the same adjustment for the back and front of the garment. Whether your garment has sleeves or no sleeves, you have not changed the armhole shape so that your sleeve or facing will still fit perfectly. I am very opposed to trimming the armhole itself, it is not an accurate adjustment.

DEAR EUNICE,

My husband brought me some beautiful silk from India which I used to make a lovely shirt dress. I made my own buttons, the Chinese ball buttons you have suggested. However, now they are much too large for my buttonholes and I don't know what I did wrong. Please come up with a solution, I don't want to give up the buttons.

MRS. N.B.

DEAR MRS. N.B.,

You should have made the buttons first, then experimented with the size of your buttonhole. You must realize that you need a much larger buttonhole for any round button, especially these Chinese ball buttons because they are made of the fabric. Fabirc won't slide the way a metal or bone button will.

Since you have already made the buttonholes and you want to use the buttons, you will have to come up with another solution. I would recommend sewing the buttons on the buttonhole so that they actually look as though they have been buttoned, then apply snaps to the underside of the buttonhole as well as the other side of your garment. The snaps shouldn't distract from the original design since they will be set far enough back from the outer edge of the garment.

If the garment is a jacket instead of a dress and you will be wearing it open as well as buttoned, you should cover your snaps with a matching piece of lightweight silk as the designers do.

If you would like a copy of the very popular Chinese ball buttons instructions, send 10 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

DEAR MISS M.E.S.,

Often the fabric used for slacks is just too soft and lightweight and there is virtually nothing you can do to prevent this. If you use a woven hem tape, the seams will draw up and look puckered because it will not allow the seam to give the same as the knit.

Mill Valley Variances Are Sought

The Mill Valley Planning Commission at a meeting at 8 p.m. Monday will hear two building proposals from Bala and Strandgaard, the firm which handles the city's engineering work.

According to associate planner Robert J. Hanna, the firm proposes to put up three single-family homes in back of its office at 271 Miller Avenue. It wants a variance so that it can provide seven parking spaces instead of 13 required by zoning ordinances.

The firm is also asking for a use permit to allow the building of a two-story, 4,500-square-foot office building at 275 Miller in an area now zoned multiple residential.

The commission also will discuss with managers of the Sweetwater Bar, on Throckmorton Avenue, how to control noise and congestion near the bar.

Water Rate Hike Legality Ruling Due Next Month

The legality of the September increase in water rates voted by the Bolinas Community Public Utility District cannot be determined until mid-August, a federal price stabilization officer said yesterday.

H. E. Sechser, of the San Francisco Internal Revenue Service office, said Phase Four price regulations announced Wednesday are merely proposals and subject to possible modification.

Final regulations will be enacted Aug. 12 after public hearings, he added.

"There is a proposal to exempt public utilities" from the price freeze in the Phase Four announcement, Sechser said. He knew of no plan to monitor public utilities, as such, he added, but the Cost of Living Council has reserved the right to challenge any increases and to take away exemptions if it deems such action necessary.

Directors of the Bolinas district have voted to raise water charges in September to $1 per 100 cubic feet of water, plus a bi-monthly service charge of $10. Under current rates, the $10 fee covers the first 1,000 cubic feet of water used, with a charge of 75 cents per 100 cubic feet thereafter.

AFRICAN GEOGRAPHY SPEAKER — James Baylor, a professor of African history, will conduct a slide presentation on African geography July 30 at 8 p.m. in Bertrand Hall at Dominican College of San Rafael. Mill Valley Variances Are Sought

The Mill Valley Planning Commission at a meeting at 8 p.m. Monday will hear two building proposals from Bala and Strandgaard, the firm which handles the city's engineering work.

According to associate planner Robert J. Hanna, the firm proposes to put up three single-family homes in back of its office at 271 Miller Avenue. It wants a variance so that it can provide seven parking spaces instead of 13 required by zoning ordinances.

The firm is also asking for a use permit to allow the building of a two-story, 4,500-square-foot office building at 275 Miller in an area now zoned multiple residential.

The commission also will discuss with managers of the Sweetwater Bar, on Throckmorton Avenue, how to control noise and congestion near the bar.

Water Rate Hike Legality Ruling Due Next Month

The legality of the September increase in water rates voted by the Bolinas Community Public Utility District cannot be determined until mid-August, a federal price stabilization officer said yesterday.

H. E. Sechser, of the San Francisco Internal Revenue Service office, said Phase Four price regulations announced Wednesday are merely proposals and subject to possible modification.

Final regulations will be enacted Aug. 12 after public hearings, he added.

"There is a proposal to exempt public utilities" from the price freeze in the Phase Four announcement, Sechser said. He knew of no plan to monitor public utilities, as such, he added, but the Cost of Living Council has reserved the right to challenge any increases and to take away exemptions if it deems such action necessary.

Directors of the Bolinas district have voted to raise water charges in September to $1 per 100 cubic feet of water, plus a bi-monthly service charge of $10. Under current rates, the $10 fee covers the first 1,000 cubic feet of water used, with a charge of 75 cents per 100 cubic feet thereafter.

SPORTS ANALYSIS

Should Girls Play? They Do In Novato

By LEW CODDINGTON

While civic officials and responsible adults from Mill Valley to Williamsport, Pa., debate the wisdom of allowing girls to play Little League baseball, a program in Novato is quietly proving that most fears about the move are groundless.

The Novato Parks and Recreation Department has "15 or 16 girls" playing in a baseball program which closely resembles Little League, and the department's recreation supervisor reports that virtually no problems have been caused by their participation.

Furthermore, notes supervisor Larry Dito, a soccer program for the same 9-12 age bracket was instituted this year and has "45 or 50" girls playing.

The abnormal number of injuries which some gloomy critics forecast simply have not happened in either sport in Novato, Dito says, and aren't likely to, either.

"At this age, there's not a heck of a lot of physical difference between boys and girls," Dito says. "In many cases, the girls are stronger than boys in the fourth through sixth grade.

"As far as overall athletic ability, the guys are not that far ahead. The girls might not have as much experience, but the basic coordination, ability and strength is the same."

The Parks and Recreation Department made its decision to "integrate" the baseball program without great fanfare three years ago. There were "one or two" girls the first year, "four or five" last year and the one dozen-plus outpouring this year. The program serves 150 youths.

There were no cries of outrage from Novato parents "that I'm aware of," Dito said. No boys stalked off teams. No coaches made things hard for the girls except for one who didn't realize they were eligible and sent one home one day, and that misunderstanding was cleared up promptly.

Nor has the presence of girls altered the character of the game. Baserunners still round third and crash into the catcher with the same sexually indiscriminate gusto that has marked the sport for 100 years, Dito acknowledged.

Soccer is a rougher, more demanding sport than baseball, and the girls hold their own perfectly well there, too, Dito says. "Some girls and some guys are just more aggressive than others," he says. "We have a couple of girls in the soccer program (which involves 200 youths) who are outstanding."

The biggest problem to crop up, the supervisor says, centers around the male ego. It can be irksome for a boy to go running across the sidewalk and down the street to chase a home run ball hit by somebody who was playing with dolls last year.

"There's no harm in that," Dito says. "Life is made up of both males and females; the kids just have to realize that men can be beaten by women.

"It's worked out very well for us in soccer. We've had some great experiences, and by the end of the season I'm sure some guys had more respect for some of the girls than they had to start with."

The male ego argument has always mystified me. If sports are supposed to teach character (as we hear so often from people who are promoting sports), there are few greater lessons of character to be taught than to accept females as equals, especially in a society which doesn't teach that lesson too often elsewhere.

If male self-confidence is going to be crushed by a loss to a female, then perhaps its existence was shaky and artificial to start with, and perhaps the male is better off building himself a more stable structure.

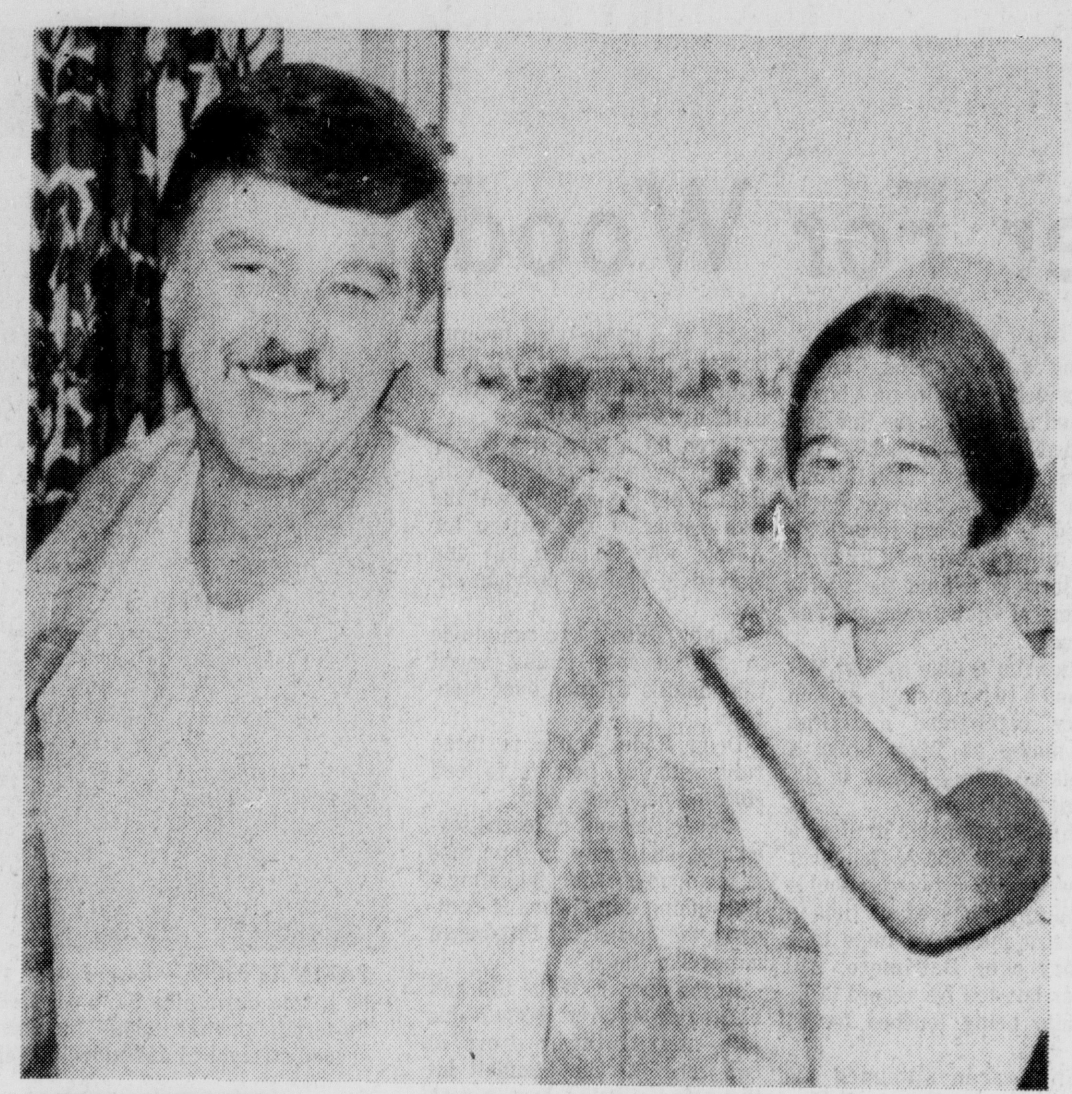
And isn't the "loss" to the male ego more than outweighed by the gain in the girls' self-esteem, stemming from the realization that they can accomplish things previously thought beyond their limits?

The league in which the girls are playing is called the "Farm" league. There is another baseball league for younger children, called the "Pee Wee" league, and no girls play in it, though Dito says they "probably should" be permitted.

Dito has reservations about allowing girls to confront boys after age 12. "With girls in higher (age) brackets, there's more of a problem as far as physical strength. We'd be letting ourself open to some injuries. If there were enough public interest in the thing we'd definitely take a look at it, though," he said.

He expressed fear about "a 200-pound boy running into a 130-pound girl," and added that such physical disparity rarely occurs among boys, because the biggest and strongest tend to leave the recreation program for more highly organized athletics, such as in school.

In the 9-12 bracket, however, the Novato baseball and soccer programs provide important examples which should be considered by anybody trying to deal with the issue.



NEW UNIFORM — Oakland A's manager Dick Williams, operated on for acute appendicitis late Thursday, was assisted with his robe by nurse Linda Loftus yesterday at Merritt Hospital in Oakland. Williams said he "definitely" will be in Kansas City to manage the American League All-Stars Tuesday. (UPI Telephoto)

YASTRZEMSKI WON'T PLAY

BOSTON (UPI) — First baseman Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox was excused from the All-Star game Friday night because of a left wrist injury he suffered earlier this week.

Joe Cronin, president of the American League, said he excused Yastrzemski because the Red Sox team physician felt playing in the All-Star game might aggravate the injury he received while sliding Monday.

Cronin said Jim Spencer of the Texas Rangers would replace Yastrzemski as a reserve on the All-Star team.

AFTER 20 YEARS

Spotlight Finds Aaron At Last

By LARRY ELDRIDGE

Denying that pitchers are trying to aid him in surpassing Babe Ruth's career home run record, Hank Aaron says: "I don't even get balls down the middle to hit in batting practice anymore."

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The pressure is mounting to a crescendo as Hank Aaron closes in on that most glamorous of all baseball records — Babe Ruth's 714 career home runs. Reporters and television crews besiege the Atlanta Braves' slugger everywhere he goes, asking the same questions over and over again.

There's quite a bit of irony in this, for during virtually his entire career Aaron has been just about the most overlooked superstar you could imagine. Serious fans recognized his talents, of course, but he never became a household name like Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, or Sandy Koufax.

Now when he could use a little privacy, there is none to be found. Press and public alike seem to be making up for the lost recognition of two decades by jamming it all into this one season. Somehow Aaron takes it all with quiet grace and incredible patience — then goes out on the field and still manages to hit homers at a pace belying his 39 years.

"Nothing seems to bother Henry," says his former teammate and current manager, Ed Mathews. "It gets on my nerves, though, I can tell you."

Aaron says the question he gets most frequently is the big one: Will he do it?

"I have a lot of confidence it's going to come if I stay healthy," he replies. "I don't really think I'll make it this year, though."

As a youngster growing up in Mobile, Ala., Aaron didn't even hold the bat correctly for a right-handed hitter, putting his left hand on top in a cross-handed grip, but he had so much natural ability that it hardly seemed to matter.

"It was just the way I started," Henry says. "We didn't have any instructors, and that was just my way. I never though much about it."

Aaron's way was good enough so that he was hitting .467 for the Indianapolis Clowns of the old Negro American League when the Braves bought him.

"They wanted me to change my grip, so I just did it in the middle of a game," he says. "It was no problem."

In 19 years with the Braves, first at Milwaukee and now in Atlanta, Aaron has assumed a place among the all-time major league leaders in just about every offensive category, but it wasn't until the last couple of seasons that anyone took him seriously as a threat to Ruth's homer mark.

Mays was the glamor boy before that, and in truth he did seem to have the best chance. When Willie reached 500 homers in 1965, Aaron was more than 100 behind him, and when Mays hit No. 600 in 1969, Henry was still almost 50 in arrears.

Aaron chides the press good-naturedly for the way it "used to forget about me," saying that as a result he's not accustomed to all the attention he's getting now. He insists that the publicity buildup hasn't put any added pressure on him, however, because "once the game starts I have a job to do, and I just go out and do it the best I can."

Hammerin' Hank has often said he hopes to be remembered as "a good all-around hitter, not just as a fellow who hit home runs." With more than 3,000 lifetime hits and a .311 career batting average he need have no fears. This year, however, he has indeed been primarily a long ball threat, with a batting average hovering in the .230s all season.

"I haven't changed my style," he says in reply to suggestions that he's swinging for the fences. "Maybe I'm

Hunter Hates Haitian Ball

OAKLAND (UPI) — There is no question in Jim Hunter's mind —the new Haitian sewn baseballs they are using in the big leagues these days are changing the game around.

Hunter, who'll pitch next Tuesday in the All Star game at Kansas City, was anything but a star Friday night, staggering the distance on an 11-hitter to beat the Cleveland Indians, 6-5, and keep the Oakland A's 2 ½ games in front in the American League west.

Hunter blamed his "sorry" performance on the new ball.

"The seams are not even, the balls are of different sizes and they are so slick you can't rub them down," said Hunter, now 15-3. "There is no question in my mind, the ball is going to change the game around."

Hunter said because of the uneven seams on the new ball he can't grip it the same way all the time, especially for breaking pitches.

"Heck, I've lost all my confidence in my breaking ball," he said. "Now, it's become my waste pitch, and honestly I don't know how far I can go without a breaking pitch. You just can't stand out there and throw fastballs. I tried to do it in this game and you saw what happened."

What happened is that such non-home run hitters as John Lowenstein and Walt Williams hit a couple out and there were a half dozen or so whistling outs into the hands of Oakland defenders.

Gaylord Perry, who pitched even worse, agreed with Hunter.

"If he (Hunter) was complaining and he won," said Perry, "you can imagine how I feel about the new balls. They are terrible. It's just another move to give the hitters an edge.

"At the beginning of the season we still had a lot of the old balls (ones stitched in the United States). That's why there were a lot of well pitched games.

Perry, touched for 13 hits in absorbing his 14th loss, fed Reggie Jackson a home run pitch the A's all star slugger hit 453 feet for a homer.

San Rafael Man Rolls 300 Game

Myron Holmes had been suffering through a terrible slump, so Thursday he decided to go back to his old style of bowling. He dusted off an old ball that had been sitting in his garage for a year, and trudged off to Greenbrae Lanes with high hopes.

He could not break 200 his first three games, but his hopes were answered in the fourth with a 300, his first perfect game ever. He bowled 171, 196, 175 and 300 for an 842 series.

"It's unbelievable", Holmes commented later. "I've been in a six-month slump, and this is a great way to get out of it."

Holmes' first three games Thursday were no indication of what was to come. "No way did I even think about it," he said. "I haven't even bowled a 200 this summer. The 12th ball was pretty sick, but it carried."

The 44-year-old San Rafael man, a commercial photographer in San Francisco, has been bowling for 12 years, with a previous high game of 268. He has seen his 182 average fall to 165 this summer, but maybe his old ball will work some more magic before the summer is through.

END OF THE LINE — The sound of cracking pins will no longer be heard at Hamilton Lanes after July 31, for the bowling alley is closing down due to the phaseout of the base.

TOURNAMENT — Country Club Bowl in San Rafael will hold a Powder Puff Tournament for women Monday at 1 p.m. Entrance fee for the no tap tourney is $3.

MONEY MAN — Ed Henry of San Rafael picked up $230 last weekend in the Professional and World Bowling Association sponsored El Cerrito Open. Henry came in 10th with a 16-game total of 6,135.

Borrowed Caddie Aids Miss Miller

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — This may be the Women's Open, but at least one of the top male golfers is playing a big role.

Bruce Crampton loaned his regular tour caddy to Sharon Kay Miller a couple of weeks ago and in three weeks he figured out what Sharon couldn't in eight years—that she was lining up all wrong on her putts.

The result was a three-under-par 69 Friday that left Miss Miller, in her 185th professional tournament and still looking for her first victory, with a 142 total and four-stroke lead starting today's third round.

"I used to think I couldn't read greens but I've been using Bruce Crampton's caddy the last three weeks and he showed me I was lining up wrong. So here I have my caddy behind me lining them up for me."

Miss Miller, 32, from Battle Creek, Mich., had seven one-putt greens Friday.

Shelley Hamlin and Kathy Martin, a pair of second-year California pros, joined three-time former National Amateur champion Ann Quast Welts Sander in a deadlock for second at 146. Miss Hamlin's 70, which included birdies on three of the last six holes, was the second best round Friday.

"It's been frustrating," said Miss Miller, who has only three second place finishes—the last at Atlanta last month where a final-hole bogey cost her a shot at a playoff—to show for her eight years on the LPGA tour.

"But," she added, "I know I can do it. I know I can hit it better or as well as most of the other girls. But when you can't putt, what can you do?"

Putting hasn't been Miss Miller's only frustration.

A member of the LPGA executive board which suspended Jane Blalock for alleged cheating in May 1972, Miss Miller said she was close to giving up the game last winter because of all the "hassle" over Miss Blalock's case.

"It just didn't make sense to me to come out here and beat my brains out when somebody comes out and does what she does," Miss Miller said.

Under questioning, however, Miss Miller admitted she never actually saw Miss Blalock cheat. "But many, many people I've talked to have seen her," she insisted.

GIANTS WIN, 5-4

Confident Sosa Stops Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Elias Sosa said that "confidence" was what pulled him through when the Chicago Cubs threatened in the ninth inning Friday to come from behind for a second straight day and beat the San Francisco Giants.

Juan Marichal, who now has beaten the Cubs 23 times in 31 decisions, lasted 8 1-3 innings and apparently was en route to an easy win until Pat Bourque homered with one out in the ninth to cut the Giants' lead to 5-4 and bring in Sosa.

The situation grew more tense when Rick Monday and Don Kessinger singled, but Sosa said that was "when I knew I had the confidence to win."

He got Billy Williams on a called third strike and the Cubs' star slugger leaned back from the plate in amazement. But Sosa said he had no doubt about the pitch.

But Sosa then walked Jim Hickman to fill the bases and bring up Jose Cardenal and he said it was almost according to plan.

"I was throwing breaking stuff to Hickman and just missing," he said. "A little outside, a little inside. I said 'Well, let's get him out of there and bring on Cardenal.'"

Cardenal went according to plan too, swinging at an outside pitch, a slider, to end the game. It was the Cubs' seventh loss in the last eight games, the 13th in the last 18, and the eighth in 10 games this year against the Giants.

The brightest spot in the game for the Cubs was the fact that Williams got his 12th homer. But it was his first since June 1 in Wrigley Field and even with Monday on base to give him two runs batted in, it boosted his rbis to only five in the last month, June 20 to July 20.

The Giants' Bobby Bonds got two doubles and scored twice and Dave Rader hit his seventh homer to help Marichal get the win and Sosa get his ninth save. Rader's homer, in the eighth inning, turned into the winning run.

SPORTS ANALYSIS

Should Girls Play? They Do In Novato

By LEW CODDINGTON

While civic officials and responsible adults from Mill Valley to Williamsport, Pa., debate the wisdom of allowing girls to play Little League baseball, a program in Novato is quietly proving that most fears about the move are groundless.

The Novato Parks and Recreation Department has "15 or 16 girls" playing in a baseball program which closely resembles Little League, and the department's recreation supervisor reports that virtually no problems have been caused by their participation.

Furthermore, notes supervisor Larry Dito, a soccer program for the same 9-12 age bracket was instituted this year and has "45 or 50" girls playing.

The abnormal number of injuries which some gloomy critics forecast simply have not happened in either sport in Novato, Dito says, and aren't likely to, either.

"At this age, there's not a heck of a lot of physical difference between boys and girls," Dito says. "In many cases, the girls are stronger than boys in the fourth through sixth grade.

"As far as overall athletic ability, the guys are not that far ahead. The girls might not have as much experience, but the basic coordination, ability and strength is the same."

The Parks and Recreation Department made its decision to "integrate" the baseball program without great fanfare three years ago. There were "one or two" girls the first year, "four or five" last year and the one dozen-plus outpouring this year. The program serves 150 youths.

There were no cries of outrage from Novato parents "that I'm aware of," Dito said. No boys stalked off teams. No coaches made things hard for the girls except for one who didn't realize they were eligible and sent one home one day, and that misunderstanding was cleared up promptly.

Nor has the presence of girls altered the character of the game. Baserunners still round third and crash into the catcher with the same sexually indiscriminate gusto that has marked the sport for 100 years, Dito acknowledged.

Soccer is a rougher, more demanding sport than baseball, and the girls hold their own perfectly well there, too, Dito says. "Some girls and some guys are just more aggressive than others," he says. "We have a couple of girls in the soccer program (which involves 200 youths) who are outstanding."

The biggest problem to crop up, the supervisor says, centers around the male ego. It can be irksome for a boy to go running across the sidewalk and down the street to chase a home run ball hit by somebody who was playing with dolls last year.

"There's no harm in that," Dito says. "Life is made up of both males and females; the kids just have to realize that men can be beaten by women.

"It's worked out very well for us in soccer. We've had some great experiences, and by the end of the season I'm sure some guys had more respect for some of the girls than they had to start with."

The male ego argument has always mystified me. If sports are supposed to teach character (as we hear so often from people who are promoting sports), there are few greater lessons of character to be taught than to accept females as equals, especially in a society which doesn't teach that lesson too often elsewhere.

If male self-confidence is going to be crushed by a loss to a female, then perhaps its existence was shaky and artificial to start with, and perhaps the male is better off building himself a more stable structure.

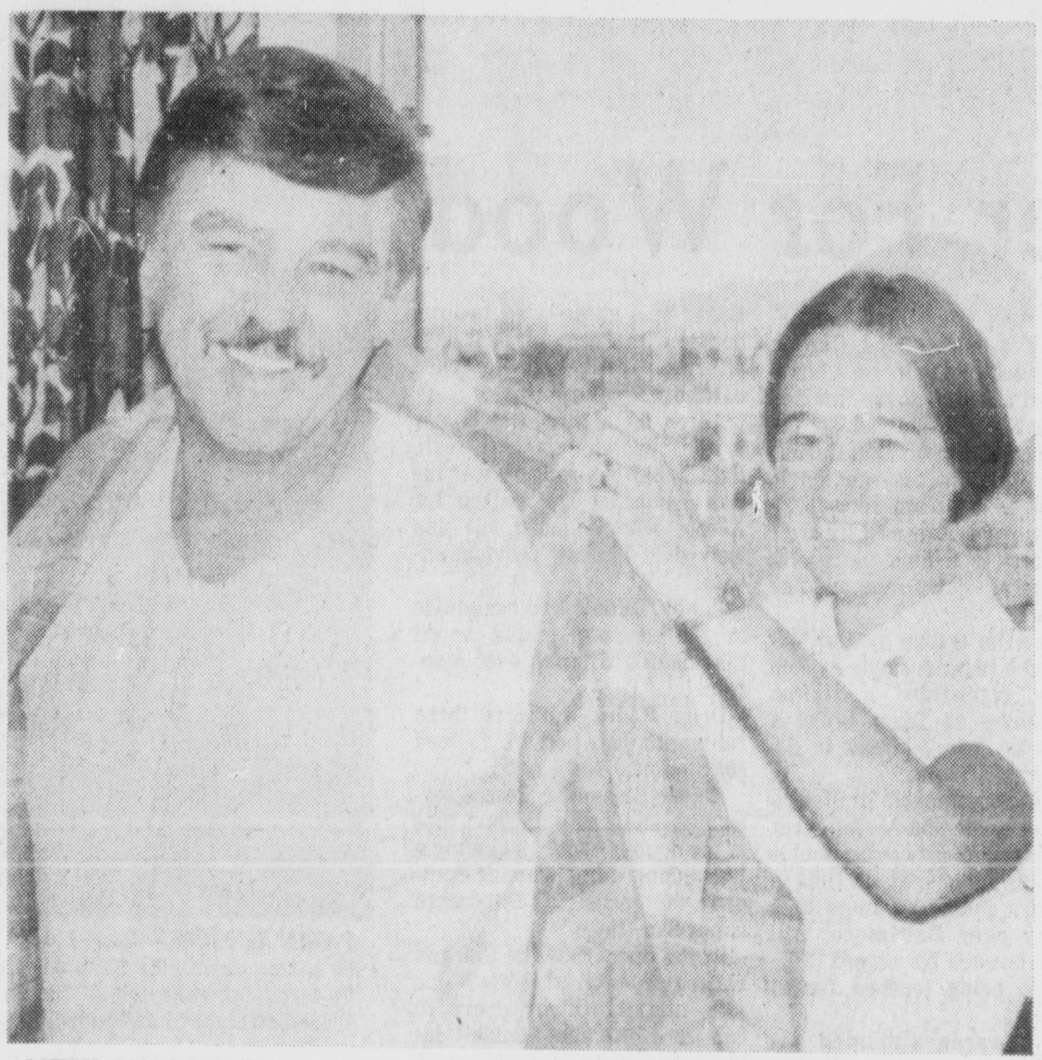
And isn't the "loss" to the male ego more than outweighed by the gain in the girls' self-esteem, stemming from the realization that they can accomplish things previously thought beyond their limits?

The league in which the girls are playing is called the "Farm" league. There is another baseball league for younger children, called the "Pee Wee" league, and no girls play in it, though Dito says they "probably should" be permitted.

Dito has reservations about allowing girls to confront boys after age 12. "With girls in higher (age) brackets, there's more of a problem as far as physical strength. We'd be letting ourself open to some injuries. If there were enough public interest in the thing we'd definitely take a look at it, though," he said.

He expressed fear about "a 200-pound boy running into a 130-pound girl," and added that such physical disparity rarely occurs among boys, because the biggest and strongest tend to leave the recreation program for more highly organized athletics, such as in school.

In the 9-12 bracket, however, the Novato baseball and soccer programs provide important examples which should be considered by anybody trying to deal with the issue.



NEW UNIFORM — Oakland A's manager Dick Williams, operated on for acute appendicitis late Thursday, was assisted with his robe by nurse Linda Loftus yesterday at Merritt Hospital in Oakland. Williams said he "definitely" will be in Kansas City to manage the American League All-Stars Tuesday. (UPI Telephoto)

YASTRZEMSKI WON'T PLAY

BOSTON (UPI) — First baseman Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox was excused from the All-Star game Friday night because of a left wrist injury he suffered earlier this week.

Joe Cronin, president of the American League, said he excused Yastrzemski because the Red Sox team physician felt playing in the All-Star game might aggravate the injury he received while sliding Monday.

Cronin said Jim Spencer of the Texas Rangers would replace Yastrzemski as a reserve on the All-Star team.

Spotlight Finds Aaron At Last

By LARRY ELDRIDGE

Denying that pitchers are trying to aid him in surpassing Babe Ruth's career home run record, Hank Aaron says: "I don't even get balls down the middle to hit in batting practice anymore."

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The pressure is mounting to a crescendo as Hank Aaron closes in on that most glamorous of all baseball records — Babe Ruth's 714 career home runs. Reporters and television crews besiege the Atlanta Braves' slugger everywhere he goes, asking the same questions over and over again.

There's quite a bit of irony in this, for during virtually his entire career Aaron has been just about the most overlooked superstar you could imagine. Serious fans recognized his talents, of course, but he never became a household name like Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, or Sandy Koufax.

Now when he could use a little privacy, there is none to be found. Press and public alike seem to be making up for the lost recognition of two decades by jamming it all into this one season. Somehow Aaron takes it all with quiet grace and incredible patience — then goes out on the field and still manages to hit homers at a pace belying his 39 years.

"Nothing seems to bother Henry," says his former teammate and current manager, Ed Mathews. "It gets on my nerves, though, I can tell you."

Aaron says the question he gets most frequently is the big one: Will he do it?

"I have a lot of confidence it's going to come if I stay healthy," he replies. "I don't really think I'll make it this year, though."

As a youngster growing up in Mobile, Ala., Aaron didn't even hold the bat correctly for a right-handed hitter, putting his left hand on top in a cross-handed grip, but he had so much natural ability that it hardly seemed to matter.

"It was just the way I started," Henry says. "We didn't have any instructors, and that was just my way. I never though much about it."

Aaron's way was good enough so that he was hitting .467 for the Indianapolis Clowns of the old Negro American League when the Braves bought him.

"They wanted me to change my grip, so I just did it in the middle of a game," he says. "It was no problem."

In 19 years with the Braves, first at Milwaukee and now in Atlanta, Aaron has assumed a place among the all-time major league leaders in just about every offensive category, but it wasn't until the last couple of seasons that anyone took him seriously as a threat to Ruth's homer mark.

Mays was the glamor boy before that, and in truth he did seem to have the best chance. When Willie reached 500 homers in 1965, Aaron was more than 100 behind him, and when Mays hit No. 600 in 1969, Henry was still almost 50 in arrears.

Aaron chides the press goodnaturedly for the way it "used to forget about me," saying that as a result he's not accustomed to all the attention he's getting now. He insists that the publicity buildup hasn't put any added pressure on him, however, because "once the game starts I have a job to do, and I just go out and do it the best I can."

Hammerin' Hank has often said he hopes to be remembered as "a good all-around hitter, not just as a fellow who hit home runs." With more than 3,000 lifetime hits and a .311 career batting average he need have no fears. This year, however, he has indeed been primarily a long ball threat, with a batting average hovering in the .230s all season.

"I haven't changed my style," he says in reply to suggestions that he's swinging for the fences. "Maybe I'm

Hunter Hates Haitian Ball

OAKLAND (UPI) — There is no question in Jim Hunter's mind —the new Haitian sewn baseballs they are using in the big leagues these days are changing the game around.

Hunter, who'll pitch next Tuesday in the All Star game at Kansas City, was anything but a star Friday night, staggering the distance on an 11-hitter to beat the Cleveland Indians, 6-5, and keep the Oakland A's 2 ½ games in front in the American League west.

Hunter blamed his "sorry" performance on the new ball.

"The seams are not even, the balls are of different sizes and they are so slick you can't rub them down," said Hunter, now 15-3. "There is no question in my mind, the ball is going to change the game around."

Hunter said because of the uneven seams on the new ball he can't grip it the same way all the time, especially for breaking pitches.

"Heck, I've lost all my confidence in my breaking ball," he said. "Now, it's become my waste pitch, and honestly I don't know how far I can go without a breaking pitch. You just can't stand out there and throw fastballs. I tried to do it in this game and you saw what happened."

What happened is that such non-home run hitters as John Lowenstein and Walt Williams hit a couple out and there were a half dozen or so whistling outs into the hands of Oakland defenders.

Gaylord Perry, who pitched even worse, agreed with Hunter.

"If he (Hunter) was complaining and he won," said Perry, "you can imagine how I feel about the new balls. They are terrible. It's just another move to give the hitters an edge.

"At the beginning of the season we still had a lot of the old balls (ones stitched in the United States). That's why there were a lot of well pitched games.

Perry, touched for 13 hits in absorbing his 14th loss, fed Reggie Jackson a home run pitch the A's all star slugger hit 453 feet for a homer.

Borrowed Caddie Aids Miss Miller

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — This may be the Women's Open, but at least one of the top male golfers is playing a big role.

Bruce Crampton loaned his regular tour caddy to Sharon Kay Miller a couple of weeks ago and in three weeks he figured out what Sharon couldn't in eight years—that she was lining up all wrong on her putts.

The result was a three-under-par 69 Friday that left Miss Miller, in her 185th professional tournament and still looking for her first victory, with a 142 total and four-stroke lead starting today's third round.

"I used to think I couldn't read greens but I've been using Bruce Crampton's caddy the last three weeks and he showed me I was lining up wrong. So here I have my caddy behind me lining them up for me."

Miss Miller, 32, from Battle Creek, Mich., had seven one-putt greens Friday.

Shelley Hamlin and Kathy Martin, a pair of second-year California pros, joined three-time former National Amateur champion Ann Quast Welts Sander in a deadlock for second at 146. Miss Hamlin's 70, which included birdies on three of the last six holes, was the second best round Friday.

"It's been frustrating," said Miss Miller, who has only three second place finishes—the last at Atlanta last month where a final-hole bogey cost her a shot at a playoff—to show for her eight years on the LPGA tour.

"But," she added, "I know I can do it. I know I can hit it better or as well as most of the other girls. But when you can't putt, what can you do?"

Putting hasn't been Miss Miller's only frustration.

A member of the LPGA executive board which suspended Jane Blalock for alleged cheating in May 1972, Miss Miller said she was close to giving up the game last winter because of all the "hassle" over Miss Blalock's case.

"It just didn't make sense to me to come out here and beat my brains out when somebody comes out and does what she does," Miss Miller said.

Under questioning, however, Miss Miller admitted she never actually saw Miss Blalock cheat. "But many, many people I've talked to have seen her," she insisted.

GIANTS WIN, 5-4

Confident Sosa Stops Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Elias Sosa said that "confidence" was what pulled him through when the Chicago Cubs threatened in the ninth inning Friday to come from behind for a second straight day and beat the San Francisco Giants.

Juan Marichal, who now has beaten the Cubs 23 times in 31 decisions, lasted 8 1-3 innings and apparently was en route to an easy win until Pat Bourque homered with one out in the ninth to cut the Giants' lead to 5-4 and bring in Sosa.

The situation grew more tense when Rick Monday and Don Kessinger singled, but Sosa said that was "when I knew I had the confidence to win."

He got Billy Williams on a called third strike and the Cubs' star slugger leaned back from the plate in amazement. But Sosa said he had no doubt about the pitch.

But Sosa then walked Jim Hickman to fill the bases and bring up Jose Cardenal and he said it was almost according to plan.

"I was throwing breaking stuff to Hickman and just missing," he said. "A little outside, a little inside. I said 'Well, let's get him out of there and bring on Cardenal.'"

Cardenal went according to plan too, swinging at an outside pitch, a slider, to end the game. It was the Cubs' seventh loss in the last eight games, the 13th in the last 18, and the eighth in 10 games this year against the Giants.

The brightest spot in the game for the Cubs was the fact that Williams got his 12th homer. But it was his first since June 1 in Wrigley Field and even with Monday on base to give him two runs batted in, it boosted his rbis to only five in the last month, June 20 to July 20.

The Giants' Bobby Bonds got two doubles and scored twice and Dave Rader hit his seventh homer to help Marichal get the win and Sosa get his ninth save. Rader's homer, in the eighth inning, turned into the winning run.

San Rafael Man Rolls 300 Game

Myron Holmes had been suffering through a terrible slump, so Thursday he decided to go back to his old style of bowling. He dusted off an old ball that had been sitting in his garage for a year, and trudged off to Greenbrae Lanes with high hopes.

He could not break 200 his first three games, but his hopes were answered in the fourth with a 300, his first perfect game ever. He bowled 171, 196, 175 and 300 for an 842 series.

"It's unbelievable", Holmes commented later. "I've been in a six-month slump, and this is a great way to get out of it."

Holmes' first three games Thursday were no indication of what was to come. "No way did I even think about it," he said. "I haven't even bowled a 200 this summer. The 12th ball was pretty sick, but it carried."

The 44-year-old San Rafael man, a commercial photographer in San Francisco, has been bowling for 12 years, with a previous high game of 268. He has seen his 182 average fall to 165 this summer, but maybe his old ball will work some more magic before the summer is through.

END OF THE LINE — The sound of cracking pins will no longer be heard at Hamilton Lanes after July 31, for the bowling alley is closing down due to the phaseout of the base.

TOURNAMENT — Country Club Bowl in San Rafael will hold a Powder Puff Tournament for women Monday at 1 p.m. Entrance fee for the no tap tourney is $3.

MONEY MAN — Ed Henry of San Rafael picked up $230 last weekend in the Professional and World Bowling Association sponsored El Cerrito Open. Henry came in 10th with a 16-game total of 6,135.

Double Disaster For Wood

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It sounded like a good idea.

Even the New York Yankees weren't surprised. "I told Bobby (Murcer) we shouldn't have treated him so rough," admitted Roy White. "I figured if they knocked him out out early, we'd see him again in the second game."

The man they were referring to is Wilbur Wood, the Chicago White Sox' rubber-armed knuckleballer.

Since Wood was knocked out in the first inning of a first game of a doubleheader by the Yankees, Manager Chuck Tanner came back with him as the second game starter.

But it didn't work out the way the White Sox hoped. It just took a little longer for the Yankees to get to him this time as they rolled to a 7-0 rain-shortened victory after scoring a 12-2 triumph in the opener.

The two losses left Wood with an 18-14 record in his last appearance before next Thursday. He got permission to skip the All-Star game because his seven-year-old son is having a minor operation.

The Yanks got two unearned runs in the fourth inning of the second game and then White hit a grand slam in the fifth inning to knock Wood out. White had a two-run double off Wood in the eight-run first inning of the opener when he only faced six men before leaving. The second game was then called by rain in the last of the sixth.

Wood, who beat Cleveland twice on June 28 although the first game was actually the completion of a suspended game, is believed to be the first pitcher to start and lost two games in one day since Cincinnati's Fred Toney did it in 1918.

In other American League games, Boston blanked Minnesota 5-0, Kansas City whipped Milwaukee 6-1, Texas outslugged Detroit 8-6, Oakland beat Cleveland 6-5 and California tripped Baltimore 8-3.

In the National League, San Francisco downed Chicago 5-4, Philadelphia topped Atlanta 6-4, Cincinnati blanked Montreal 4-0, Houston beat New York 6-2, Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from San Diego 5-4 in 10 innings and 7-0 and Los Angeles topped St. Louis 4-3.

Tommy Harper drove in three runs with three hits including a homer and Carlton Fisk added two more on a home run and a single as the Red Sox whipped Minnesota behind the five-hit pitching of John Curtis.

Hal McRae's two-run single started a three-run second inning to lead Kansas City over the Brewers behind the six-hit pitching of Dick Drago and Joe Hoerner.

A two-run double by Jim Mason and a two-run single by Ken Suarez highlighted a six-run first inning as Texas broke a five-game losing streak in defeating the Tigers.

John Stephenson drilled a two-run single and Al Gallagher followed with a two-run double as California scored six runs in the third inning en route to a victory over Baltimore. Bill Singer boosted his record to 15-5 while being touched for 11 hits.

Hank Aaron slammed his 699th career home run Friday night to move within 15 homers of Ruth's career mark as the Braves dropped a 6-4 decision to the Philadelphia Phillies. Bill Robinson leaped above the right field fence with two out in the ninth inning to rob Dusty Baker of a game-tying two-run homer with Aaron on first base after the Phillies had pitched carefully around Aaron.

Aaron hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning to highlight a four-run rally. It was the 26th homer of the season for Aaron, who bounced out and walked in his two previous at-bats.

Bobby Tolan's two-run single in the seventh inning keyed Cincinnati's triumph over Montreal.

Rennie Stennett collected seven hits and drove in four runs in the doubleheader, including a 10th inning game-winning homer in the opener, as Pittsburgh swept San Diego.

In the opener, Willie Stargell blasted a two-run homer—his 28th—and Al Oliver drove in two runs. Rennie Stennett hit the game winning homer with one out in the 10th off Mike Caldwell to decide the game.

Steve Garvey drove in two runs, including the game-winner with a 15th inning double, to push Los Angeles past the Cardinals.

TAKIN' IT EASY — Gene Littler, resting on his laurels and on a tree during the St. Louis Golf Classic, complained of "a terrific stomach ache" but managed anyway to fire his second straight 66 and move into the tournament lead.

Littler Complains, But Leads In Golf

ST.LOUIS (UPI) — Ailing Gene Littler, complaining about his stomach but not his golf game, held a one stroke lead today going into the third round of the $210,000 St. Louis Golf Classic.

"I was going so well toward the end that I was surprised when I missed a 40-footer on the 17th, " quipped Littler, who birdied six of the last seven holes Friday for his second four-under-par and a two-round total of 132.

At the end of his first round Thursday, Littler complained of abdominal pains and was taken to a doctor. "I guess I have some kind of bug," he said. "I feel a little weak."

Littler, who underwent surgery for cancer of the lymph glands a year ago, said the early rains followed by high temperature and humidity added to his discomfort.

Littler cannot afford to take it easy today with defending champion Lee Trevino, local favorite Bob Goalby and young pro John Schroeder only one stroke behind. Trevino picked up six strokes Friday with a six-under par 64.

"I kind of predicted that I was going to have a good round like this," Trevino said. "I've got it going now because the only thing I have to do is concentrate on my golf. I've slacked up on some of my other activities, like exhibitions."

Trevino's two-round score of 133 is the same as his tworound score of last year when he was two strokes behind leader Deane Beman. Beman didn't fare as well this year—he missed the cut with a 145.

Goalby was nine under par going into the 15th hole Friday but his drivers failed and he bogeyed that hole and the next.

Young Rik Massengale, who was tied for the lead with Goalby after the first round, was tied for fifth today with Jim Ferriell. One stroke behind was Don Bies, who offset two bogeys with four birdies and an eagle Friday for a 66.

Also shooting 66, in addition to Littler and Bies, were Dow Finsterwald, who missed the cut with 144, and Bruce Crampton, the pro golf tour's leading money winner.

The lowest round of the day was Tom Shaw's 63, giving him a two-round total of 136. With the exception of the 12th hole, Shaw birdied the ninth through the 15th, including a 60-foot putt on the 15th.

Shaw, at 29 already a 10-year veteran of the PGA tour, said, "It's the lowest competitive round I've had since I became a pro. I've been working hard on my game and I've been playing well. The boost from this round will last a long time."

Woolley Quits Again In Transcript Case

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Joe Woolley, reinstated earlier this month as head football coach at Galveston Ball High School although he had admitted changing the grade records of two athletes, was forced to resign for a second time Friday —this time for good.

Woolley's resignation was demanded by Galveston School Superintendent Eli Douglas, who last week had been given permission to fire anybody he thought necessary in connection with the grade tampering scandal.

Lynn Nix, the assistant principal who said he helped Woolley change the transcript of Oklahoma Sooner quarterback Kerry Jackson and center Mike Phillips, also resigned at Douglas' request.

"I have admitted my past mistakes in attempting to give Galveston athletes an opportunity to attend a university and succeed," said Woolley after the school board accepted his resignation by a 6-0 vote with one abstention. "I realize my mistake and have been willing to reaccept the reassignment and reduction of salary and damage to my personal reputation.

"I had hoped that after such discipline, I might be given the opportunity by the school board and the public to pick up the pieces and try to build from those a better name and stronger character."

The school board which accepted Woolley's resignation had in quick succession earlier this month demoted him to a maintenance job and then reinstated him to the head coaching position by a 4-3 vote.

The reinstatement brought heavy protest from education officials in Galveston and eight of Woolley's assistants resigned as well.

The changing of Jackson's and Phillip's grades caused Oklahoma to forfeit eight of its victories from last year's 11-1 Sugar Bowl champion team.

Thomas Asks Allen For The Day Off

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Duane Thomas' first act as a Washington Redskin was to ask for the day off but George Allen is still all smiles.

Thomas, the moody and controversial running back who helped Dallas to a Super Bowl title two years ago, was traded Thursday by the San Diego Chargers to Allen's Redskins for a pair of future draft choices. Thomas, who had both personal and contract problems at San Diego, asked to stop at his home in Dallas before reporting to the Redskins' training site at Carlisle, Pa.

Allen okayed the delay but could not say exactly when Thomas will report. He did say he was extremely pleased with the deal.

"We're very happy to have Duane Thomas as a member of the Redskins," Allen said Friday. "I have heard that Duane has had problems in the past. Well, I believe that a problem is not a problem unless you do not solve it. A lot of clubs wouldn't even take a chance with him but we've handled problem guys at Los Angeles and with the Redskins.

"That's part of your job," added the man who led the Redskins to a Super Bowl berth last season. "To get the most out of a player and realize his potential. You just don't take trained seals and play them."

Allen is hoping to form potentially one of the great backfields in NFL history but at present neither Thomas nor Larry Brown, the NFC Player of the Year last season, is in camp. Brown is holding out in hopes of renegotiating his contract.

Elsewhere in the training camps, All-Star defensive tackle Bob Lilly, who was near retirement because of contract problems, worked out for the first time with the Dallas Cowboys Friday.

Defensive captain Nick Buoniconti of the World Champion Miami Dolphins underwent minor corrective surgery on his wrist and will miss tonight's scrimmage at the Orange Bowl. Coach Don Shula said the Buoniconti will be ready to play middle linebacker against the College All-Stars next week.

Running Back Essex Johnson of Cincinnati revealed Friday that he played last season with two fractured cheekbones. Johnson led the Bengals in rushing with 825 yards after being fitted with a special protective helmet. Johnson said the Bengals kept his injury secret, a disclosure which might not sit to well with NFL brass. All injuries are supposed to be reported weekly to the league office in New York.

Rookie wide receiver Stan Davis suffered a mild concussion at the Philadelphia Eagles' camp while the Pittsburgh Steelers got down to 69 players by cutting running back Carl Cayette, a free agent from Penn State.

Graebner Grabs Victory In Pro Tennis Tourney

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Clark Graebner wasn't suppose to win, according to Arthur Ashe, because he was a "part-time" tennis player. But he proved Ashe wrong and won his quarterfinal match Friday.

Graebner, 29, of New York defeated fourth-seeded John Alexander of Australia, 7-5, 6-4, in the 10th Annual $60,000 U.S. Professional Tennis Championship at Longwood Cricket Club here.

Ashe, who is second-seeded in the tournament, said he "picked Alexander to win because Graebner is a part-time tennis player."

"It's true," Graebner said after his victory over 22-year-old Alexander. "I am a part-time tennis player. I am also a business man. I only play on the curcuit 20 weeks while the other players play 35.

"I'm in better shape than a lot of the players thought I would be in," Graebner added. "I've been trying to get in shape, I've been practicing, exercising a lot and I guess it paid off."

The well-conditioned Graebner said he used the heat (0 degrees) to his advantage to defeat his opponent.

"John's moves quite well, he's a fine tennis player, there's no doubt about that. But I tried to make him move around out there a lot more than usual because it was so hot. I guess that paid off too."

Graebner plays Ashe in the semifinal round scheduled for today.

Ashe overcame three match points and the heat Friday and squeezed by seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Ashe, playing his third match in less than 24 hours, fought Tanner, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., for two hours and 13 minutes. Despite the heat and the tough schedule, Ashe said he was not tired.

"What matters is if you win or lose," said Ashe. "It doesn't matter how you play. Sometimes you play bad and win and other times you play good and lose. He'll beat me eventually," Ashe said of Tanner, who has lost to Ashe the other three times they have played.

Because of heavy showers, Friday evenings matches were postponed until this morning. The quarterfinal doubles between the second-seeded team of Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., and Eric van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif. and Tom Gorman of Seattle, and Charlie Pasarell of Santurce, P.R., were to be resumed.

Other matches to be played today include quarterfinal singles between third -seeded Marty Reissen of Evanston, Ill., and fifth-seeded Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex.; sixth-seeded Dick Stockton of Port Washington, N.Y., and Jimmy Connors of Bellville, Ill.

The semifinal matches were scheduled for tonight between Ashe and Graebner and the winner of the quarterfinal matches.

"John's moves quite well, he's a fine tennis player, there's no doubt about that. But I tried to make him move around out there a lot more than usual because it was so hot. I guess that paid off too."

Graebner plays Ashe in the semifinal round scheduled for today.

Ashe overcame three match points and the heat Friday and squeezed by seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Ashe, playing his third match in less than 24 hours, fought Tanner, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., for two hours and 13 minutes. Despite the heat and the tough schedule, Ashe said he was not tired.

"What matters is if you win or lose," said Ashe. "It doesn't matter how you play. Sometimes you play bad and win and other times you play good and lose. He'll beat me eventually," Ashe said of Tanner, who has lost to Ashe the other three times they have played.

Because of heavy showers, Friday evenings matches were postponed until this morning. The quarterfinal doubles between the second-seeded team of Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., and Eric van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif. and Tom Gorman of Seattle, and Charlie Pasarell of Santurce, P.R., were to be resumed.

Other matches to be played today include quarterfinal singles between third -seeded Marty Reissen of Evanston, Ill., and fifth-seeded Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex.; sixth-seeded Dick Stockton of Port Washington, N.Y., and Jimmy Connors of Bellville, Ill.

The semifinal matches were scheduled for tonight between Ashe and Graebner and the winner of the quarterfinal matches.

3 Marinites In Line For Tennis Titles

Three Marinites are in line for tennis titles this weekend.

In Hoylake, England, Sharon Walsh of San Rafael will meet Patti Hogan of La Jolla in an All-American women's singles final at the North of England Tennis Championships.

Meanwhile, in Tacoma, Wash., Mike Machette of Belvedere and Dorsey Hook of Tiburon were scheduled to play in semi-final round matches today at the Pacific Northwest Tennis Tournament.

Miss Walsh reached the finals yesterday by upsetting second-seeded Karen Krantzcke of Australia, 6-2, 6-2. She topped another Australian, 16-year-old Dianne Fromholtz, in the quarter-finals, 6-2, 6-0.

Machette reached his semi-final match with Phil Brown of San Luis Obispo by beating Chris De Graff of San Diego, 6-4, 6-3, and second-seeded Dick Knight of Bellevue, Wash.

Miss Hook, who lost to Molly Morris of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-1, in the semi-finals of Girls 16, was slated to oppose Sally Thompson of Los Altos today in the girls 18 semis.

Another Hook girl, top-seeded Kelley, lost to Lesie Tobin of Mercer Island, Wash., 7-5, 7-5, in the finals of Girls 12.

The Cady family of Tiburon struck out yesterday in the first round of play at the Culligan's $500 Invitational Senior Tennis Tournament at the Boulder Creek Racquet Club.

Sven was beaten in the men's singles by Ken Green of Carmel Valley, 6-1, 6-2, and Fran lost to Jill Leach of Carmel, 6-7, 6-0, 6-0.

Woolley Quits Again In Transcript Case

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Joe Woolley, reinstated earlier this month as head football coach at Galveston Ball High School although he had admitted changing the grade records of two athletes, was forced to resign for a second time Friday —this time for good.

Woolley's resignation was demanded by Galveston School Superintendent Eli Douglas, who last week had been given permission to fire anybody he thought necessary in connection with the grade tampering scandal.

Lynn Nix, the assistant principal who said he helped Woolley change the transcript of Oklahoma Sooner quarterback Kerry Jackson and center Mike Phillips, also resigned at Douglas' request.

"I have admitted my past mistakes in attempting to give Galveston athletes an opportunity to attend a university and succeed," said Woolley after the school board accepted his resignation by a 6-0 vote with one abstention. "I realize my mistake and have been willing to reaccept the reassignment and reduction of salary and damage to my personal reputation.

"I had hoped that after such discipline, I might be given the opportunity by the school board and the public to pick up the pieces and try to build from those a better name and stronger character."

The school board which accepted Woolley's resignation had in quick succession earlier this month demoted him to a maintenance job and then reinstated him to the head coaching position by a 4-3 vote.

The reinstatement brought heavy protest from education officials in Galveston and eight of Woolley's assistants resigned as well.

The changing of Jackson's and Phillip's grades caused Oklahoma to forfeit eight of its victories from last year's 11-1 Sugar Bowl champion team.

I-J Tennis Tournament Set Monday

A record total of 240 entrants will compete beginning Monday in the 20th annual Independent-Journal-San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department tennis tournament at four sites in San Rafael.

The total surpasses last year's field by "25 or 30," according to tournament director Ralph Dannenberg, the San Rafael assistant recreation supervisor.

Boys and girls will compete in singles and doubles in the 10 through 18 age groups for some 60 trophies offered as prizes.

Matches will be held Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. at Albert Park, Gerstle Park, Boyd Park and San Rafael High School courts. Anyone who has registered and has not been notified of his or her first match should go to the tournament desk at Albert Park at 8 a.m. Monday.

Ferrari Team Makes Bid At Watkins Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — The Ferrari team went after the slim Matra lead today in the World Manufactuers Championship Six-Hour Endurance race.

Matra, leading Ferrari 104-97 through nine of the 11 scheduled races, could clinch the title with a victory over the 3.4-mile Watkins Glen Grand Prix course.

The French team got the jump in qualifying and won the pole and the No. 2 position for today's race. Francois Cevert and Jean Pierre Beltoise share the driving in the pole car on the basis of Cevert's top qualifying time of one minute, 42.273 seconds Wednesday. Henri Pescarolo and Gerard Larrousse, who accounted for all the Matra wins this year, line up alongside their blue Matra team car.

Ferrari has the next three positions. Carlos Pace of Brazil and Arturo Merzario of Italy man the No. 3 post, Carlos Retuemann of Argentina and Tim Schenken of Australia had the fourth best time in qualifying and Jackie Ickx of Belgium and Brian Redman of England are in the third Ferrari entry at the No. 5 post on the grid.

Bobby Fisher of Lafayette, Calif., and John Buffum of Shelborne, Vt., have the best position for Americans as they lined up in eighth place with a Chevron B23. Mark Donohue of Newtown, Pa. and George Follmer of Arcadia, Calif. qualified their Porsche Carrera into the No. 10 position.

Donohue, the 1972 Indianapolis winner, turned in a record track time of 1,38.85 as he covered the lap at an average speed of 122.989 m.p.h. in qualifying for Sunday's Can-Am race. The old record of 1:39.19 was set by Peter Revson during last year's qualifying round.

Thomas Asks Allen For The Day Off

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Duane Thomas' first act as a Washington Redskin was to ask for the day off but George Allen is still all smiles.

Thomas, the moody and controversial running back who helped Dallas to a Super Bowl title two years ago, was traded Thursday by the San Diego Chargers to Allen's Redskins for a pair of future draft choices. Thomas, who had both personal and contract problems at San Diego, asked to stop at his home in Dallas before reporting to the Redskins' training site at Carlisle, Pa.

Allen okayed the delay but could not say exactly when Thomas will report. He did say he was extremely pleased with the deal.

"We're very happy to have Duane Thomas as a member of the Redskins," Allen said Friday. "I have heard that Duane has had problems in the past. Well, I believe that a problem is not a problem unless you do not solve it. A lot of clubs wouldn't even take a chance with him but we've handled problem guys at Los Angeles and with the Redskins.

"That's part of your job," added the man who led the Redskins to a Super Bowl berth last season. "To get the most out of a player and realize his potential. You just don't take trained seals and play them."

Allen is hoping to form potentially one of the great backfields in NFL history but at present neither Thomas nor Larry Brown, the NFC Player of the Year last season, is in camp. Brown is holding out in hopes of renegotiating his contract.

Elsewhere in the training camps, All-Star defensive tackle Bob Lilly, who was near retirement because of contract problems, worked out for the first time with the Dallas Cowboys Friday.

Defensive captain Nick Buoniconti of the World Champion Miami Dolphins underwent minor corrective surgery on his wrist and will miss tonight's scrimmage at the Orange Bowl. Coach Don Shula said the Buoniconti will be ready to play middle linebacker against the College All-Stars next week.

Running Back Essex Johnson of Cincinnati revealed Friday that he played last season with two fractured cheekbones. Johnson led the Bengals in rushing with 825 yards after being fitted with a special protective helmet. Johnson said the Bengals kept his injury secret, a disclosure which might not sit to well with NFL brass. All injuries are supposed to be reported weekly to the league office in New York.

Rookie wide receiver Stan Davis suffered a mild concussion at the Philadelphia Eagles' camp while the Pittsburgh Steelers got down to 69 players by cutting running back Carl Cayette, a free agent from Penn State.

Ticket Sales Up In San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The new San Antonio Spurs said Friday that in the first four days of selling season tickets they surpassed last year's entire advance ticket sales when the American Basketball Association franchise was in Dallas.

The Dallas Chaparrals last season sold $70,000 worth of season tickets all year long, secretary-treasurer Angelo Drossos said.

The Spurs' ticket drive started Tuesday and already has resulted in sales of $90,000.

BEGINS MONDAY

All-Star Tourney In Little League

With hopeful eyes toward Williamsport, Pa., the 1973 Marin County Little League All-Star Tournament opens Monday with a game between the all-stars of the Fairfax-Sleepy Hollow and San Anselmo leagues at Memorial Park in San Anselmo.

All games, except for the championship game on Saturday, will begin at 6 p.m. The tourney is single elimination.

Tuesday the tournament gets into full swing with a complete schedule of games. The winner of Monday's game will face the all-stars from Marinwood at Mary E. Silveira School, Marinwood; Novato National will meet San Geronimo at Rancho Field, Novato; San Rafael National challenges Kentfield-Greenbrae at San Quentin; Strawberry faces San Rafael American at Strawberry Field; Twin Cities visits Tiburon at Joe Wagner Field, Larkspur; Mill Valley American meets Sausalito at Boyle Park, Mill Valley; Novato American faces Mill Valley National at Hamann Field, Novato and Gallinas Valley challenges Hamilton-Loma Verde at Hamilton Field.

Radio KTIM will broadcast one game a night, beginning with the San Rafael National-Kentfield clash at San Quentin. KTIM General Manager Bob Dinsmore and Verle Sorgen will be handling the play by play action.

The path to the Little League World Series at Williamsport is a long and treacherous one. The winner of the Marin tournament, the district champions, will then play in the sectional tournament Aug. 1-3 at Rancho Field in Novato.

If that team survives the sectionals, it then goes to Union City Aug. 4 for the sectional championship game. The winner of that game will be one of four Little League teams left in Northern California competition.

The following week, there will be a tournament in Santa Clara between the remaining NorCal teams with the winner meeting the Southern California victor for the State championship, also in Santa Clara.

The State champion then competes in the Western Regionals, and after that, if it gets lucky, on to Williamsport.

Marin Yacht Last To Finish Transpac

HONOLULU (UPI) — Marin's Vicarious was the 59th and final yacht to cross the finish line of the 2,225 mile Transpacific Yacht race which officially ended yesterday.

Skippered by David O. Jesberg of Belvedere and registered out of the San Francisco Yacht Club there, the 33-foot Vicarious received a trophy for being the last boat to finish at last night's awards banquet here.

Chutzpah, the 35-foot sloop from the Waikiki Yacht Club, officially was awarded the winner's trophy.

Chutzpah was declared the winner of the race with a corrected time of 13 days, 13 hours, 36 minutes and 53 seconds.

The first to finish trophy went to Ragtime, 62-foot sloop from the Long Beach Yacht Club which beat favorite and Transpac record holder Windward Passage by less than five minutes. Both Ragtime and Windward Passage crossed the finish line early last Sunday.

The only yacht remaining on the course was Defiant, which is being towed. Defiant was disqualified when she lost her rudders and had to go under tow.

Hamilton Vs. Marinwood For Senior Championship

Hamilton and Marinwood were to meet today at Hamilton Field for the championship of the Marin Senior Little League Tournament.

Hamilton is undefeated in the double-elimination tourney, so if it loses to Marinwood (2-1) in the noon title game, a second clash between the two teams would follow.

Marinwood reache the championship game with a 9-6 victory over Fairfax yesterday. Behind by three runs, Marinwood broke the game open with a five run uprising in the third inning, paced by pitcher Brad Silva's two-run double.

Fairfax had a five tally rally of its own against Silva in the second inning. The big blow in that spree was delivered by pitcher Walt Gillespie, who hit a grand slam home run.

Marinwood touched Gillespie and reliever Mike Dittman, who came on in the fourth, for eight hits, two of them by Ken Boullt.

Dutch Warmerdam clears bar at 15 feet.

TIME MACHINE

Dutch Surpasses 15-Foot Barrier

BERKELEY — It's late afternoon on this 1940 day and only a few fans remain in the stadium. We're at the University of California campus at Berkeley and the weather for this track meet has been excellent. All day there have been some good times but no world records have been broken.

However, at the end of the pole vault runway right now is a man preparing to attempt breaking a world record. The man is Cornelius (Dutch) Warmerdam, an algebra teacher from Hanford, Calif. Warmerdam is not only going to attempt a world record, but he is also attempting to shatter the 15-foot barrier of pole vaulting.

The world record for this event is 14 feet, 11 inches, held jointly by Bill Defton and Earl Meadows. The bar is now at 15 feet.

Warmerdam missed this height on his first attempt. Despite the odds against Dutch, or any man of clearing this height, Warmerdam looks confident as he glides, then sprints, towards the vaulting box.

The pole is planted and Warmerdam is pulling his body skyward. The pole is a foot shorter than the cross-bar but Warmerdam's body gracefully extends up on the pole and he pushes himself cleanly over the bar. He makes the long fall into the tiny sawdust pit below.

The small crowd here has just witnessed the breaking of a long standing track and field barrier. A lean, blonde pole vaulter from Hanford is now an historic sports figure.

Willard Phones 49ers To Say He Will Report

GOLETA, Calif. (UPI) — Missing fullback Ken Willard has called the San Francisco 49er training camp from his home in Richmond, Va., to announce that he'll report soon.

Under club rules he is already out $400 for having missed two days of training.

All 70 players in camp participated in Friday's drills and Coach Dick Nolan planned the first contact work of the year today.

Meanwhile, rookie linebacker Mike Fulk of Indiana was operated on for ligament damage in his right knee and will be lost to the team for the season.

He was the 49ers' fifth round draft pick last spring.

Sonoma State Funding Group

Sonoma State College's struggling athletic department has been given a little help with the founding of the Cossack Associates.

Formed by a group of Sonoma County community leaders, the purpose of the Cossack Associates is to "formalize and coordinate our fund-raising efforts for intercollegiate athletics," according to Bill Trumbo, director of athletics at the college.

Sonoma's athletic program has been operating in the red since the associated student body disbanded three years ago, with most of the financial support coming from the community.

The organization's goal next year is $12,500 to support such expenses as insurance, travel, official's expenses and team uniforms — all costs which the college may not finance through its state budget.

All-Star Lee Just Wants Chance To Swing A Bat

By ALLAN R. BRUCE

BOSTON (UPI) — The Spaceman promises to do everything he's told. All he wants is a chance to swing a bat.

Lefthander Bill Lee of the Boston Red Sox, dubbed The Spaceman because of his carefree life style and the wayout lectures he delivers to anyone who'll listen, is just itching for a chance to play in the major league All-Star game at Kansas City next week.

The 12-3 record he has compiled to date got him as far as the American League roster — he was named to the team by Oakland Manager Dick Williams—and now he hopes to get into the game long enough to take a turn at the plate.

"I'll be so psyched up if I get to hit in the All-Star game the first pitch'll be a fastball right down the pike and I'm gonna smoke it out of there," Lee said.

"But Bill," someone said, "you're a pitcher, not a hitter."

"I'm a hitter, too," Lee replied. "I just haven't had a chance with the designated hitter rule. But they don't have designated hitters in the All-Star game."

Manager Eddie Kasko said Lee got his shot as a starter this year because "he pitched well out of the bullpen and we were having trouble with our starters."

"I've thrown 163 innings so far this year," Lee said. "I figured I'd have only about 18 by now."

Lee has been chided about not being able to pitch without men on base. In his last start, for instance, he gave up seven hits in the first six innings and eight for the game, but managed a 6-1 win.

"It makes for better teamwork, the way I pitch," Lee said. "Everybody hustles. I'm not one of those guys that flames the ball in. Everybody gets a chance to play when they're behind me. They don't just stand around, because I don't get a lot of strikeouts.

"Everybody gets his say. They get a chance to make a good defensive play and everybody pulls together."

Lee, in fact, says he has "a patent on the 16-hit shutout. All I need is a bunch of double plays."

Already Lee has more wins than ever before in the majors. He was 9-2 in 1971 and he frankly admits he's looking for 20 wins this year.

"I think about 20, sure," Lee said. "But I also think about getting my arm up to throw the next game. I think about winning 13. When I get that, I think about winning 14. Then 15."

Will success spoil the Spaceman?

"Don't be silly," Lee said. "I'm doing the same things now that I was doing when I was 0-0. Every Friday I do my Army duty. And I go out and enjoy myself just like I always did."

AARON

stronger now than when I was younger, and I know I've become more selective. I used to swing at anything, but now I wait for my pitch."

Aaron's six-foot, 190-pound body looks trim for his years, but he has started to make some concessions to age. He has moved to left field, an easier position than his old right field spot, and he sits out quite a few games now, including second games of doubleheaders and day games following night games.

A certain amount of negative response, of course, had to be expected. Some old-timers just don't want to see the Babe's records broken, and just as they howled and demanded asterisks when Roger Maris played more games while erasing Ruth's one-season mark of 60 homers a few years ago, so they point now to things like Aaron's extra times at bat.

Also, unfortunately, there are people who are unhappy because a black man is going for the record. Aaron got a lot of hate mail full of racial slurs earlier this season, but this, at least, seems to have decreased now.

"I don't see all the mail, but the Braves tell me it's 99 percent favorable these days," he says. "There's still some of the hate mail, but there's a lot more from people rooting for me — especially kids. The kids have always been for me."

Raiders Unload Two Linebackers

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders, apparently feeling that they are solid in the linebacking department, have traded Terry Mendenhall to St. Louis for a draft pick and released Greg Slough, who joined the club out of USC in 1971.

The departure of the two linebackers seem to indicate that the Raiders are confident big Bubba Smith will be able to start at defensive end so that Tony Cline can be shifted to linebacker.

Smith, obtained in the deal that sent tight end Ray Chester to Baltimore, arrived in camp Friday but wasn't able to practice because the team doctor wasn't there for the mandatory physical exam.

"My knee is okay" said Smith, who missed the 1972 campaign after running into a sideline chain marker in the Colts' fourth exhibition game. "After the doctor cut it, he said 'you can recover completely, but you'll have to work on it.' I put in my time working on it."

Smith said that he would have to "work his way" back into shape after the year layoff from playing.

In researching the trade, the Raiders sent a coach and scout to watch the Colts work out in an early scrimmage.

Marinwood Faces San Anselmo '9'

San Anselmo Fire Department and the Marinwood-Lucas Valley Braves were to meet today at Mary E. Silveira School to decide the championship of the 1973 Marin Little League Team Tournament.

Another team from the Marinwood-Lucas Valley League won the title last year, the Caps, while this is San Anselmo League's first year in the tournament.

Both teams got excellent pitching performances to reach the finals, with San Anselmo edging Kentfield-Greenbrae, 2-1, at Rancho Field in Novato, and the Braves taking a 5-1 victory over San Rafael National at Mary E. Silveira School.

San Anselmo's Brad Katuna pitched a five-hitter and struck out 12, while allowing no walks. The only run scored against him came in the third when Jim Mitchell's triple drove in Cam Garrett. Two pitches later, Mitchell was thrown out at home trying to score on a passed ball.

Katuna's stellar hurling was backed up by equally fine hitting of his batterymate, Louie Lituanio, who got four hits and drove in both runs with a third inning home run and a single with runners on first and third in the sixth.

Kentfield-Greenbrae's Ben Werthimer also pitched a fine game, with 10 strikeouts to his credit. Mitchell was the big gun with three hits.

The Braves' Craig Stevens limited San Rafael National to just two hits, both of them singles. He fanned 12 batters and gave up four walks.

Stevens was given all the runs he needed in the second inning when the Egide family ganged up on San Rafael hurler Pete Heinlein. Shawn led off the inning with a single and moved to second on a walk to Rob Weinmann. Doug Smith then laced a double to score Shawn. Darrell Egide then hit a single to drive in both Weinmann and Smith.

BEGINS MONDAY

All-Star Tourney In Little League

With hopeful eyes toward Williamsport, Pa., the 1973 Marin County Little League All-Star Tournament opens Monday with a game between the all-stars of the Fairfax-Sleepy Hollow and San Anselmo leagues at Memorial Park in San Anselmo.

All games, except for the championship game on Saturday, will begin at 6 p.m. The tourney is single elimination.

Tuesday the tournament gets into full swing with a complete schedule of games. The winner of Monday's game will face the all-stars from Marinwood at Mary E. Silveira School, Marinwood; Novato National will meet San Geronimo at Rancho Field, Novato; San Rafael National challenges Kentfield-Greenbrae at San Quentin; Strawberry faces San Rafael American at Strawberry Field; Twin Cities visits Tiburon at Joe Wagner Field, Larkspur; Mill Valley American meets Sausalito at Boyle Park, Mill Valley; Novato American faces Mill Valley National at Hamann Field, Novato and Gallinas Valley challenges Hamilton-Loma Verde at Hamilton Field.

Radio KTIM will broadcast one game a night, beginning with the San Rafael National-Kentfield clash at San Quentin. KTIM General Manager Bob Dinsmore and Verle Sorgen will be handling the play by play action.

The path to the Little League World Series at Williamsport is a long and treacherous one. The winner of the Marin tournament, the district champions, will then play in the sectional tournament Aug. 1-3 at Rancho Field in Novato.

If that team survives the sectionals, it then goes to Union City Aug. 4 for the sectional championship game. The winner of that game will be one of four Little League teams left in Northern California competition.

The following week, there will be a tournament in Santa Clara between the remaining NorCal teams with the winner meeting the Southern California victor for the State championship, also in Santa Clara.

The State champion then competes in the Western Regionals, and after that, if it gets lucky, on to Williamsport.

Marin Yacht Last To Finish Transpac

HONOLULU (UPI) — Marin's Vicarious was the 59th and final yacht to cross the finish line of the 2,225 mile Transpacific Yacht race which officially ended yesterday.

Skippered by David O. Jesberg of Belvedere and registered out of the San Francisco Yacht Club there, the 33-foot Vicarious received a trophy for being the last boat to finish at last night's awards banquet here.

Chutzpah, the 35-foot sloop from the Waikiki Yacht Club, officially was awarded the winner's trophy.

Chutzpah was declared the winner of the race with a corrected time of 13 days, 13 hours, 36 minutes and 53 seconds.

The first to finish trophy went to Ragtime, 62-foot sloop from the Long Beach Yacht Club which beat favorite and Transpac record holder Windward Passage by less than five minutes. Both Ragtime and Windward Passage crossed the finish line early last Sunday.

The only yacht remaining on the course was Defiant, which is being towed. Defiant was disqualified when she lost her rudders and had to go under tow.

Hamilton Vs. Marinwood For Senior Championship

Hamilton and Marinwood were to meet today at Hamilton Field for the championship of the Marin Senior Little League Tournament.

Hamilton is undefeated in the double-elimination tourney, so if it loses to Marinwood (2-1) in the noon title game, a second clash between the two teams would follow.

Marinwood reache the championship game with a 9-6 victory over Fairfax yesterday. Behind by three runs, Marinwood broke the game open with a five run uprising in the third inning, paced by pitcher Brad Silva's two-run double.

Fairfax had a five tally rally of its own against Silva in the second inning. The big blow in that spree was delivered by pitcher Walt Gillespie, who hit a grand slam home run.

Marinwood touched Gillespie and reliever Mike Dittman, who came on in the fourth, for eight hits, two of them by Ken Boullt.

Dutch Warmerdam clears bar at 15 feet.

TIME MACHINE

Dutch Surpasses 15-Foot Barrier

BERKELEY — It's late afternoon on this 1940 day and only a few fans remain in the stadium. We're at the University of California campus at Berkeley and the weather for this track meet has been excellent. All day there have been some good times but no world records have been broken.

However, at the end of the pole vault runway right now is a man preparing to attempt breaking a world record. The man is Cornelius (Dutch) Warmerdam, an algebra teacher from Hanford, Calif. Warmerdam is not only going to attempt a world record, but he is also attempting to shatter the 15-foot barrier of pole vaulting.

The world record for this event is 14 feet, 11 inches, held jointly by Bill Defton and Earl Meadows. The bar is now at 15 feet.

Warmerdam missed this height on his first attempt. Despite the odds against Dutch, or any man of clearing this height, Warmerdam looks confident as he glides, then sprints, towards the vaulting box.

The pole is planted and Warmerdam is pulling his body skyward. The pole is a foot shorter than the cross-bar but Warmerdam's body gracefully extends up on the pole and he pushes himself cleanly over the bar. He makes the long fall into the tiny sawdust pit below.

The small crowd here has just witnessed the breaking of a long standing track and field barrier. A lean, blonde pole vaulter from Hanford is now an historic sports figure.

ARLINGTON, Tex. — Rico Carty, designated hitter and left fielder for the Texas Rangers, has suffered a broken bone in his right foot and will miss the next week of play, the team said Friday.

Willard Phones 49ers To Say He Will Report

GOLETA, Calif. (UPI) — Missing fullback Ken Willard has called the San Francisco 49er training camp from his home in Richmond, Va., to announce that he'll report soon.

Under club rules he is already out $400 for having missed two days of training.

All 70 players in camp participated in Friday's drills and Coach Dick Nolan planned the first contact work of the year today.

Meanwhile, rookie linebacker Mike Fulk of Indiana was operated on for ligament damage in his right knee and will be lost to the team for the season.

He was the 49ers' fifth round draft pick last spring.

Sonoma State Funding Group

Sonoma State College's struggling athletic department has been given a little help with the founding of the Cossack Associates.

Formed by a group of Sonoma County community leaders, the purpose of the Cossack Associates is to "formalize and coordinate our fund-raising efforts for intercollegiate athletics," according to Bill Trumbo, director of athletics at the college.

Sonoma's athletic program has been operating in the red since the associated student body disbanded three years ago, with most of the financial support coming from the community.

The organization's goal next year is $12,500 to support such expenses as insurance, travel, official's expenses and team uniforms — all costs which the college may not finance through its state budget.

All-Star Lee Just Wants Chance To Swing A Bat

By ALLAN R. BRUCE

BOSTON (UPI) — The Spaceman promises to do everything he's told. All he wants is a chance to swing a bat.

Lefthander Bill Lee of the Boston Red Sox, dubbed The Spaceman because of his carefree life style and the wayout lectures he delivers to anyone who'll listen, is just itching for a chance to play in the major league All-Star game at Kansas City next week.

The 12-3 record he has compiled to date got him as far as the American League roster — he was named to the team by Oakland Manager Dick Williams—and now he hopes to get into the game long enough to take a turn at the plate.

"I'll be so psyched up if I get to hit in the All-Star game the first pitch'll be a fastball right down the pike and I'm gonna smoke it out of there," Lee said.

"But Bill," someone said, "you're a pitcher, not a hitter."

"I'm a hitter, too," Lee replied. "I just haven't had a chance with the designated hitter rule. But they don't have designated hitters in the All-Star game."

Manager Eddie Kasko said Lee got his shot as a starter this year because "he pitched well out of the bullpen and we were having trouble with our starters."

"I've thrown 163 innings so far this year," Lee said. "I figured I'd have only about 18 by now."

Lee has been chided about not being able to pitch without men on base. In his last start, for instance, he gave up seven hits in the first six innings and eight for the game, but managed a 6-1 win.

"It makes for better teamwork, the way I pitch," Lee said. "Everybody hustles. I'm not one of those guys that flames the ball in. Everybody gets a chance to play when they're behind me. They don't just stand around, because I don't get a lot of strikeouts.

"Everybody gets his say. They get a chance to make a good defensive play and everybody pulls together."

Lee, in fact, says he has "a patent on the 16-hit shutout. All I need is a bunch of double plays."

Already Lee has more wins than ever before in the majors. He was 9-2 in 1971 and he frankly admits he's looking for 20 wins this year.

"I think about 20, sure," Lee said. "But I also think about getting my arm up to throw the next game. I think about winning 13. When I get that, I think about winning 14. Then 15."

Will success spoil the Spaceman?

"Don't be silly," Lee said. "I'm doing the same things now that I was doing when I was 0-0. Every Friday I do my Army duty. And I go out and enjoy myself just like I always did."

stronger now than when I was younger, and I know I've become more selective. I used to swing at anything, but now I wait for my pitch."

Aaron's six-foot, 190-pound body looks trim for his years, but he has started to make some concessions to age. He has moved to left field, an easier position than his old right field spot, and he sits out quite a few games now, including second games of doubleheaders and day games following night games.

A certain amount of negative response, of course, had to be expected. Some old-timers just don't want to see the Babe's records broken, and just as they howled and demanded asterisks when Roger Maris played more games while erasing Ruth's one-season mark of 60 homers a few years ago, so they point now to things like Aaron's extra times at bat.

Also, unfortunately, there are people who are unhappy because a black man is going for the record. Aaron got a lot of hate mail full of racial slurs earlier this season, but this, at least, seems to have decreased now.

"I don't see all the mail, but the Braves tell me it's 99 percent favorable these days," he says. "There's still some of the hate mail, but there's a lot more from people rooting for me — especially kids. The kids have always been for me."

Raiders Unload Two Linebackers

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders, apparently feeling that they are solid in the linebacking department, have traded Terry Mendenhall to St. Louis for a draft pick and released Greg Slough, who joined the club out of USC in 1971.

The departure of the two linebackers seem to indicate that the Raiders are confident big Bubba Smith will be able to start at defensive end so that Tony Cline can be shifted to linebacker.

Smith, obtained in the deal that sent tight end Ray Chester to Baltimore, arrived in camp Friday but wasn't able to practice because the team doctor wasn't there for the mandatory physical exam.

"My knee is okay" said Smith, who missed the 1972 campaign after running into a sideline chain marker in the Colts' fourth exhibition game. "After the doctor cut it, he said 'you can recover completely, but you'll have to work on it.' I put in my time working on it."

Smith said that he would have to "work his way" back into shape after the year layoff from playing.

In researching the trade, the Raiders sent a coach and scout to watch the Colts work out in an early scrimmage.

Marinwood Faces San Anselmo '9'

San Anselmo Fire Department and the Marinwood-Lucas Valley Braves were to meet today at Mary E. Silveira School to decide the championship of the 1973 Marin Little League Team Tournament.

Another team from the Marinwood-Lucas Valley League won the title last year, the Caps, while this is San Anselmo League's first year in the tournament.

Both teams got excellent pitching performances to reach the finals, with San Anselmo edging Kentfield-Greenbrae, 2-1, at Rancho Field in Novato, and the Braves taking a 5-1 victory over San Rafael National at Mary E. Silveira School.

San Anselmo's Brad Katuna pitched a five-hitter and struck out 12, while allowing no walks. The only run scored against him came in the third when Jim Mitchell's triple drove in Cam Garrett. Two pitches later, Mitchell was thrown out at home trying to score on a passed ball.

Katuna's stellar hurling was backed up by equally fine hitting of his batterymate, Louie Lituanio, who got four hits and drove in both runs with a third inning home run and a single with runners on first and third in the sixth.

Kentfield-Greenbrae's Ben Werthimer also pitched a fine game, with 10 strikeouts to his credit. Mitchell was the big gun with three hits.

The Braves' Craig Stevens limited San Rafael National to just two hits, both of them singles. He fanned 12 batters and gave up four walks.

Stevens was given all the runs he needed in the second inning when the Egide family ganged up on San Rafael hurler Pete Heinlein. Shawn led off the inning with a single and moved to second on a walk to Rob Weinmann. Doug Smith then laced a double to score Shawn. Darrell Egide then hit a single to drive in both Weinmann and Smith.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

High Earnings Spur Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street took a guarded position on Phase IV and concentrated its attention more on exceptionally good second quarter earnings this week, moving prices higher in fairly active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Phase IV reaction Wednesday was negative. Pierre Rinfret, economist and presidential adviser, called the new program a return to "Lazarus economics...bringing to life what died in Phase II. It's treating the facade of inflation rather than getting to the guts of it."

Milton Friedman, another presidential economic adviser, said he had expected the return of Phase II controls, "but the curious thing is...many people insinuate there is an alternative program. What is it?"

Talks with many economists and analysts indicated there is concern the nation is headed for a recession at the end of the year or the beginning of 1974.

William Rahmig, economist for the Madison Fund, said he thought there would be a recession early next year. This, he said, "would take some of the pressure off. Things are boiling right now."

Many of the stock averages gained, prompting some analysts to say there was some short covering and possibly a bit of bargain hunting. Aside from the flow of good second quarter earnings reports, there was little news to spark investor interest.

Dr. Karl Menninger, At 80, Still Fighting Injustice

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Dr. Karl Menninger turns 80 tomorrow, still a fighter of social injustices, still recognized as one of America's greatest minds in psychiatry and still working to make life more pleasant.

"I don't believe in goals," he says. "Life isn't a 100-yard dash or a basketball game. Everybody's got hundreds of goals.

"But maybe I ought to sit down and decide on a goal before I die. I've always believed in amelioration. But it's not a goal; it's more a philosophy."

He's still preaching with the fervor of a revivalist against the inhumanity he sees in the nation's correctional system and trying to educate others that you don't rehabilitate a man by beating him, which he says was the real message of his book, "The Crime of Punishment."

Dr. Karl — as he is known — sees some rays of hope that the system is slowly doing some of the things he's advocated in prison reform, as well as efforts to prevent "bad" youngsters from becoming criminals.

"We've got to study crime scientifically," he said in a birthday interview. "Crime is never a surprise; there are causes which explain it."

The Menninger Foundation, which grew from the psychiatric clinic that Dr. Karl founded with his father here over 50 years ago, friends and public officials honored him at a pre-birthday party last week.

"Karl Menninger remains a youthful and vigorous thinker, still the dominant figure on the scene of American psychiatry," is how Dr. Sidney Smith, editor of the Menninger Clinic Bulletin, introduced the special edition of Menninger's unpublished paper.

"Everybody's been so nice to me," Dr. Karl said. "And I don't just mean all this birthday folderol."

Menninger said he feels great — "no different from any other birthday.

"Young people don't believe that, when they see us old buzzards running around, that we can feel good," he added. "But I feel just as good as I did 20 or 30 years ago. I just expect to go on working all my life."

On attaining 80, he said:

"I don't attach any particular achievement to reaching 80. I thank God I reached it. It's more His doing than mine. And I had good parents, you know."

If he has slowed his pace, it's not noticeable. He remains chairman of the board of the foundation — which entails, he said, "listening to everybody else, then deciding what to do."

He just completed another book, "Sparks," and has another in the works for late summer or early fall publication, "Take Heart — Your Sins Are Forgiven."

He also cultivates his deep interest in history and Indian cultures, with the Indians of Costa Rica a current fascination.

Menninger returned to Topeka in 1919 to practice medicine with his father, Dr. Charles Menninger, after graduating with honors from Harvard Medical School in 1917 and after practicing in Kansas City.

He soon began concentrating on treating patients with "nervous" disorders and became what was first called a "nerve specialist."

Asked how the psychiatric clinic came into being, Dr. Karl related:

"I saw you couldn't do psychiatry alone, you needed others around you. So that's why my father and I originated the clinic. Five years later, we coaxed my brother, Will, to come out from New York."

TITLE INSURANCE EXPLAINED

Since the days of the Spaniards, all California land was originally owned, controlled and recorded by some governmental body. As these lands were gradually transferred to private ownership, and property in turn changed hands over the years, certain encumbrances were sometimes involved.

This is where a title search becomes important. A title search investigates all county records relative to a piece of property, and can turn up any obscure claims that might exist, such as liens, easements, or unpaid taxes. Title Insurance is the buyer's guarantee that this title search is complete and accurate.

Your member Realtor office of the Marin County Board of Realtors can help you with any questions about Title Insurance. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. The more than 1,000 salesmen from the member offices of the Marin County Board of Realtors will be selling it for you. Your Real Estate Professionals.

TITLE INSURANCE EXPLAINED

Since the days of the Spaniards, all California land was originally owned, controlled and recorded by some governmental body. As these lands were gradually transferred to private ownership, and property in turn changed hands over the years, certain encumbrances were sometimes involved.

This is where a title search becomes important. A title search investigates all county records relative to a piece of property, and can turn up any obscure claims that might exist, such as liens, easements, or unpaid taxes. Title Insurance is the buyer's guarantee that this title search is complete and accurate.

Your member Realtor office of the Marin County Board of Realtors can help you with any questions about Title Insurance. And if you're selling a home, place it on Multiple Listing. The more than 1,000 salesmen from the member offices of the Marin County Board of Realtors will be selling it for you. Your Real Estate Professionals.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Vitamins Said To Be Harmful If Massive Doses Are Taken

Most of us get more than adequate amounts of vitamins by eating a varied diet with plenty of fruits and vegetables, and a reasonable amount of lean animal products. There is no harm in taking a daily multiple vitamin-mineral capsule for additional insurance. This is recommended especially for persons with irregular eating habits and those on restricted diets to lose weight or for other medical purposes.

VITAMINS are useless unless other edibles are also consumed. They help the body utilize the nutrients in food and become co-enzymes in the complicated process required for normal metabloism. There is a growing tendency to change the alphabetical names of vitamins to the name of their chemical structure. Vitamin C is now called ascorbic acid; B1 is thiamine, B2, riboflavin.

We stress the chemical aspect because vitamins are chemicals that were originally isolated in their pure form and then synthesized in the laboratory. There are no nutritional differences between natural and synthetic vitamins. In normal amounts, vitamins are safe. However, in larger doses, vitamins may become drugs and should be treated as such. As chemicals, they have side effects on the body, which may or may not be harmful. This is mentioned because of the possible dangers associated with the taking of massive doses of certain vitamins, especially A, C, D, and E.

AT PRESENT, nutritional fads are sweeping the country. Many center on vitamins and stem from the projection or extension of animal experiments to persons without any sound basis for doing so. Others stem from phony reasoning. For example, people with a vitamin B1 dificency lose appetite, tire easily, are unstable, and develop neuritis and headache. However, this does not mean that vitamin B1 will do any good when these symptoms are due to other causes.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

A reader writes: Rcently I haven't been able to get my arms into a comfortable position in bed. Can you make a suggestion?

REPLY

ARRESTED TB

G. writes: If sputum tests are negative for a long time, is tuberculosis considered arrested.

REPLY

Yes, provided there are no chest X-ray signs of progression of the original disease.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, July 21, the 202nd day of 1973 with 163 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury. The evening star is Venus.

American author Ernest Hemingway was born on July 21, 1899.

On this day in history:

In 1861, the first major military engagement of the Civil War occurred at Bull Run Creek in Virginia, about 35 miles southwest of Washington, D.C.

In 1873, outlaw Jesse James held up the Rock Island express train at Adair, Iowa, and escaped with $3,000.

In 1930, the U.S. Veterans Administration was established.

In 1961, Air Force Capt. Virgil Grissom became the second American to rocket into space. His Mercury capsule ride lasted 16 minutes.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, clean air.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Vitamins Said To Be Harmful If Massive Doses Are Taken

Most of us get more than adequate amounts of vitamins by eating a varied diet with plenty of fruits and vegetables, and a reasonable amount of lean animal products. There is no harm in taking a daily multiple vitamin-mineral capsule for additional insurance. This is recommended especially for persons with irregular eating habits and those on restricted diets to lose weight or for other medical purposes.

VITAMINS are useless unless other edibles are also consumed. They help the body utilize the nutrients in food and become co-enzymes in the complicated process required for normal metabloism. There is a growing tendency to change the alphabetical names of vitamins to the name of their chemical structure. Vitamin C is now called ascorbic acid; B1 is thiamine, B2, riboflavin.

We stress the chemical aspect because vitamins are chemicals that were originally isolated in their pure form and then synthesized in the laboratory. There are no nutritional differences between natural and synthetic vitamins. In normal amounts, vitamins are safe. However, in larger doses, vitamins may become drugs and should be treated as such.

As chemicals, they have side effects on the body, which may or may not be harmful. This is mentioned because of the possible dangers associated with the taking of massive doses of certain vitamins, especially A, C, D, and E.

AT PRESENT, nutritional fads are sweeping the country. Many center on vitamins and stem from the projection or extension of animal experiments to persons without any sound basis for doing so. Others stem from phony reasoning. For example, people with a vitamin B1 dificency lose appetite, tire easily, are unstable, and develop neuritis and headache. However, this does not mean that vitamin B1 will do any good when these symptoms are due to other causes.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

CAN'T RELAX

A reader writes: Rcently I haven't been able to get my arms into a comfortable position in bed. Can you make a suggestion?

Try hugging a pillow. Occasionally a sedative is needed to break the thought pattern.

ARRESTED TB

G. writes: If sputum tests are negative for a long time, is tuberculosis considered arrested.

REPLY

Yes, provided there are no chest X-ray signs of progression of the original disease.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, July 21, the 202nd day of 1973 with 163 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury. The evening star is Venus.

American author Ernest Hemingway was born on July 21, 1899.

On this day in history:

In 1861, the first major military engagement of the Civil War occurred at Bull Run Creek in Virginia, about 35 miles southwest of Washington, D.C.

In 1873, outlaw Jesse James held up the Rock Island express train at Adair, Iowa, and escaped with $3,000.

In 1930, the U.S. Veterans Administration was established.

In 1961, Air Force Capt. Virgil Grissom became the second American to rocket into space. His Mercury capsule ride lasted 16 minutes.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:
Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, clean air.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Canal Looks Cleaner; HAFB Looks Emptier

It's time once more to empty the pockets of accummulated notes:

CHAIRMAN GENE Sweeney of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce Canal Improvement Committee reports that property fronting on the canal looks cleaner and neater than it has in a long time.

He and representatives of his committee made an inspection a few days ago and found many old eyesores cleaned up. There still are a couple of places much in need of attention, but in general the appearance to waterborn visitors is much improved.

Sweeney's committee has addressed appeals to occupants and owners of canal front property asking them to clean up voluntarily. Some doubted this would be effective. Apparently many people still take pride in appearances and are willing to do their bit voluntarily.

Progress is slow but Sweeney and his group seem to be influencing some improvements. May they be as effective in their efforts to deal with pollution and the dredging problem!

THE AIR FORCE is at last gradually withdrawing from Hamilton AFB — as many have been predicting for years.

What happens now?

You can bet that Air Force bureaucrats will keep thinking up one reason after another why they should hold onto and maintain the base, even while it is scarcely used.

Meantime, its potential to Marin goes unrealized. As consultants to the State Aeronautics Board have pointed out, congestion at San Francisco and Oakland International Airports and at San Jose will in the years ahead become unbearable.

Hamilton could be used for overflow. Certainly it would be an easier departure point for those Marin residents who travel by air.

But foes of "development" — in any shape or form — unite with residents of areas near Hamilton to fight any move to open the field to private or commercial use.

This conglomerate force of foes probably is not very sizeable, but their organized, concentrated effort is sufficient to deter officialdom from action.

Perhaps we need a county ballot proposition at an early election so our officials can be guided by the will of the majority, democratically.

THE CITY OF Petaluma recently took the bull by the horns and voted to buy 212 acres of low land adjacent to Petaluma River to provide a site for disposal of spoil from future dredging.

All our neavigable and potentially navigable waterways which also perform a flood control function — Richardson Bay and its tributaries, Corte Madera Creek, San Rafael Canal and Novato Creek — face the common problem. They need periodic dredging. But area for disposing of dredge spoil has pretty much disappeared. If and when we have to stop dredging, watch out!

Flood problems will multiply. Pollution will be worse. Property values and consequently tax revenues will suffer. Recreational boating and the businesses it supports will fade, as will the tax revenue they generate.

MARSHAL TITO is in the second year of what may well be his final term as Yugoslav head of state.

Under Tito, Yugoslavia has finally stabilized internally and externally. It is no longer at dangerous odds with its fellow communist states like Russia. It maintains reasonably good relationship with western democracies, including the U.S.A.

But insiders say this all may be the calm before the storm. Old-time communists of the Stalin persuasion are ready, it is said, to take over forcefully when the opportunity presents. When Tito goes, chaos may follow.

A month ago, West Germany and Czechoslovakia quietly agreed on a new treaty which, among other things, declared the infamous Munich past of 1938 null and void.

Those of us with long memories (and who have refreshed them with recent reading about the cataclysmic events of the Hitler era) remember as if it were yesterday how British Prime Minister Chamberlain met at Munich with Hitler and, in the belief that he was achieving "peace in our time," agreed to the dismemberment of independent Czechoslovakia, which soon thereafter became a Nazi slave state.

Appeasement became the most contemptible of words.

If you think about it, you can see how Hitler's long shadow cast its pall over events in Southeast Asia. Those of us who initially supported the Vietnam war saw it as the only alternative to unthinkable appeasement.

The beginning of the end for Tito in Yugoslavia.

The beginning of a new era in relations between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Momentous events? Or only footnotes to history?

EVER HEAR of the American Lung Association.

You will. It is the new name of the Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, formerly the T.B. and Health Association.

The organization was founded in 1904 when the "white plague" was the number one cause of death in the U.S.A. By the second half of the 20th century, T.B. had been largely controlled. T.B. researchers began to be concerned with other lung diseases, especially emphysema and chronic bronchitis, the products of smoking and air pollution.

The job the society faces today may be even more difficult than the formidable task it undertook in 1904.

Christmas Seals will continue, of course, but most of us will probably find ourselves continuing to call them T.B. seals.

How could it be Christmas if we called them "Lung Seals?"

Rose Hips

Probably most Marinites think of roses largely in terms of their lovely blossoms. But to practioners of folk medicine, the fruits of the rose — the rose hips — are valuable as a potent source of vitamin C. Rose hip syrup is a widely used vitamin supplement for infants.

Stop Signs Before Injury Welcomed

Congratulations to Police Chief Brusatori for his part in the installations of several stop signs throughout Glenwood.

The speed limit has been ignored for years and these signs are an excellent means of controlling speed.

Everyone asks, "Why the stop signs? Was somebody hurt?" If someone had been hurt I wouldn't have been surprised; our children's safety has always been in question. It's a great thing when measures are taken before a tragedy occurs.

Four-Letter Words Sometimes Gladden Heart

I'm here on a visit from Ireland, so maybe I am especially conscious of the motto of the royal house of England, "Honi soit qui mal y pense", which translated means roughly "Evil to him who evil thinketh."

Now that motto contains two four-letter words. I noticed that Anne Sullivan in her letter to you published on July 11 asked if the phrase "four-letter words" meant profanity to you? That was obviously a rhetorical question, but I shall attempt to dignify it with an answer.

First, I must admit I have never attended a bobby soxers' game (but then, my experience so far also fails to include even a Little League game). Nevertheless, I can really think of many four-letter words even a young girl might use which gladdened the heart of the gentlemen Ms. Sullivan refers to as the illustrious mayor of her fair city. Among them are: "Play ball", "bunt," "oops," "gosh," "darn," and so forth.

Okay, then — as one Irishwoman to another — I hope Ms. Sullivan's Irish wit is not withered away and that she takes this in the spirit in which it is intended. Of course I know what she meant, but wish she would remember that words have different importance to different people and certainly to different generations.

Marin Residents Being Flummixed By Experts

First, we hear of Paul DeFalco, and his EPA's proposal to reduce use of Marin's motor vehicles by 84 per cent no later than 1978. We already know that we cannot afford adequate public transportation, in our highly dispersed population. Nevertheless, we have this firm proposal that would therefore unquestionably reduce Marin to a third-rate agricultural community, and impoverish practically all our residents. Granted, after starving to death, we would be buried under much cleaner air.

Now we have a "state expert" recommending that Hamilton AFB be converted into a major commercial airport, to be at least half the volume of SFO, shortly after 1985. I seem to remember, very recently, airport plan proponents saying nothing like this was in the works. (By the way, the firm recommending this solution is known, because of its initials, as DimJim. Never, we observe, has Jim seemed to be so dim.) This wonderful study is scheduled to cost all of us over one million dollars.

It is obvious that we should turn our attention away from the corruption in Washington; long enough to prevent these agencies and gentlemen from flummixing the public at home. Otherwise, we shall each be walking 15 miles to work, while jet din and smog fill our newly cleaned air.

Every concerned citizen should immediately write to all of his legislators on these issues; and keep communicating until this nonsense is terminated.

Tape Of The Witching Hour In President's Oval Office

WASHINGTON — The most interesting information about President Nixon having all his offices in the White House bugged was that the tape machines were "voice activated" — that is to say, they automatically went on when someone started to talk.

Not all the conversations in the Oval Office had to do with the President and his visitors. I have in my possession a tape of two cleaning women who did not know the office was bugged. The time of the taping was 12:05 a.m.

"Okay, Mathilde, it's my turn to be President of the United States."

"You were President last night, Clementine. It's my turn to be the President."

"I was off last night. Bethlyn must have been President last night. Now I'm going to sit in the big chair behind the desk. Who you want to be, Mathilde?"

"I'll be the queen of England."

"DON'T BE SO smart. Why don't you be Sammy Davis Jr.? Now come over to my side of the desk and hug me."

"I don't want to be Sammy Davis Jr. I think I'll be Henry Kissinger."

"Okay, Henry. I want you to go to China."

"What for, Mr. President?"

"I want two orders of won-ton soup, six egg rolls, a container of chop suey and a dozen fortune cookies."

"WHO YOU WANT to be now, Mathilde?"

"I'll be the former attorney general of the United States of America."

"Okay, Mr. Former Attorney General. Now I got to ask you this question. You know anything about this Watergate mess that everyone's been talking about?"

"No sir, Mr. President. I don't know nothing about nothing, and if I did know I wouldn't tell you."

"That's no way to talk to the President of the United States of America. I want to get to the bottom of this affair. Send in my loyal, devoted and trusted assistants."

"WHO AM I now?"

"You be John Dean."

"Okay, Mr. President, I am John Dean. What you want to know?"

"What's going on with this Watergate business, John?"

"You really want to know?"

"What for am I President of the United States if I didn't want to know?"

"Okay, Mr. President, I'll tell you."

"Get out of here. I don't want to know."

"NOW WHO am I?"

"You be Haldeman."

"Hi, Mr. President. I am Bob Haldeman, your loyal and able chief administrative assistant."

"Bob, I think John Dean knows something and he isn't telling us."

"We'll send him to Camp David and get him out of here. I never trusted him since he went on his honeymoon."

"One more thing, Bob. I need four more golf carts for San Clemente, a new volleyball court and a gazebo for Key Biscayne."

"You got them, Mr. President."

"NOW YOU BE John Connally, Mathilde."

"Yessir, I'm John Connally, reporting to help you out of your troubles."

"John."

"Yessir, Mr. President."

"Get out of here. (LAUGHTER)

"Well, since I'm the President, I think I'll make a proclamation. I hereby free all the slaves."

"That's President Lincoln, not President Nixon."

"I didn't say which President I was, did I?"

Inflation Plagues Bureaucracy As Well As Average Citizen

WASHINGTON — That old devil inflation hovers over the bureaucracy as it does over the citizenry across the country, and it has a lot to do with excellence in government and the drain of brain power. The thorny question of how to compensate for the rapid rise in the cost of living is inevitably tied up with politics.

The report, still kept confidential, of a high-level commission recommends a 25 per cent across-the-board increase for the executive branch of government, the judiciary and Congress. This comes at a moment when by every index bureaucrats and politicians are less respected than at any time in this century. With the burgeoning scandals at all levels, it would seem the wrong time to go after a pay raise.

Yet the commission, required by law to report to the President every four years, compiled extensive data to show that many top administrators are opting out, and these are the best and the brightest. They have had no increase in pay since 1969 and during that time the cost of living has jumped 25 per cent.

BUT WHAT ABOUT members of Congress? This is the large fly in the ointment. The last pay raise for Congress came on March 1, 1969, when senators and representatives went from $30,000 a year to $42,500.

With perquisites, that is substantially increased. A member of Congress does not have to refund his postal allowance over and above what he actually needs. Free trips back to the state, free long-distance calls, staff pay — all these add up to a big plus for the incumbent. In terms of income it puts most members of Congress above $50,000.

To vote yourself a raise of $10,000 a year will not be popular back in the district. That is more than the income of millions of Americans. For families on relief it looks like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

If the President fails to act on the recommendation of the commission and it goes over into 1974 — an election year when Congress would never vote a pay raise — then the whole matter can be postponed until 1977. By then the cost of living may have jumped to 35 per cent over 1969. A measure has passed the Senate and will likely pass the House requiring the commission to make recommendations every two years instead of every four. Should that pass, a proposed pay increase could come in a supplementary budget, with action by Congress by early fall.

WHILE ALL THIS may sound like mere bureaucratese touching only the slothful tax eaters, it gets down to the efficient direction of government. Civil servants at the top level of government are leaving to take pensions which include, unlike their salaries, a 6½ per cent increase geared to the cost of living. Then they are free to take jobs in private business at $20,000 or $25,000 a year, and many are doing just that with business eager to get brainy men and women knowledgeable in the ways of government.

The make-work types stay on. More and more this is true. In the foriegn service the number of early retirements by men of wide experience and ability is shocking. With the dollar devalued and costs going up, they simply cannot afford to stay.

When an able specialist on the Civil Service Commission or in the Office of Management and Budget takes a walk, it makes no splash. But it leaves a hole in the structure of government not easily filled. The way is opened for appointments and promotions based on political favoritism.

Good government is no longer the concern of a few idealists. In this fantastically complex society it is essential to every citizen. And only able and committed men and women can effectively move the machinery of government.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Italian Politics Continues Game Of Musical Chairs

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In the game of musical chairs which makes up Italian politics, Mariano Rumor has taken over the post of premier, a job he has held three times before.

And, as usual, in forming Italy's 35th government since the fall of Fascism 30 years ago, Rumor is surrounded by men who also have held the post before.

Included among them are President Giovanni Leoni, Aldo Moro, who now becomes foreign minister, and Amintore Fanfani, who takes over the post of political secretary of the Christian Democratic party, the country's most powerful political machine.

Rumor himself heads the strongest among the half dozen or so factions that divide the Christian Democrats. His faction is called the "Dorotheans" for the fact that he and his associates once held a caucus in a convent whose patron saint is St. Dorothy. The caucus was in revolt against Fanfani.

COMPLETING THE GAME of musical chairs, Rumor served as minister of the interior in the government of Giulio Andreotti, whom he replaces.

His government is a return to left-of-center rule, bringing the Communist-oriented Socialists into the government instead of the right-of-center Liberals. The left-of-center formula had been abandoned as unworkable 15 months ago after 10 years of trying.

PAST EXPERIENCE has given Rumor intimate knowledge of Italy's mounting troubles.

As interior minister it was up to him to deal with street violence between the ultra-left and the neo-Fascists on the far right, with kidnapings, bombings and all the other problems associated with maintaining law and order in a country beset with strikes and mounting social unrest.

One of his most pressing problems will be to deal with inflation, which has been mounting at an annual rate close to 20 per cent.

THE FACT THAT Italy's latest political crisis lasted just short of a month has given some hope that Italian politicians at last are recognizing the dangers of the country's present course.

For three years the economy has stagnated. Promised reforms in housing, education and health care are long overdue.

Italians also are realizing they have an ecological problem in river, sea and air pollution. A ministry of environment is a creation of the new government as is another to oversee protection of Italy's cultural wealth. The latter is a result of art thefts and the decay of historic buildings.

A realization that strikes are a major contributor to inflation and soon could eat up wage increases has come from an unexpected quarter — Italy's Communist party.

Communist spokesmen have warned workers that not all walkouts are good, and that some may be self-defeating.

The strategy could be the prelude to a Communist move toward participation in the national government.

Canal Looks Cleaner; HAFB Looks Emptier

It's time once more to empty the pockets of accummulated notes:

CHAIRMAN GENE Sweeney of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce Canal Improvement Committee reports that property fronting on the canal looks cleaner and neater than it has in a long time.

He and representatives of his committee made an inspection a few days ago and found many old eyesores cleaned up. There still are a couple of places much in need of attention, but in general the appearance to waterborn visitors is much improved.

Sweeney's committee has addressed appeals to occupants and owners of canal front property asking them to clean up voluntarily. Some doubted this would be effective. Apparently many people still take pride in appearances and are willing to do their bit voluntarily.

Progress is slow but Sweeney and his group seem to be influencing some improvements. May they be as effective in their efforts to deal with pollution and the dredging problem!

THE AIR FORCE is at last gradually withdrawing from Hamilton AFB — as many have been predicting for years.

What happens now?

You can bet that Air Force bureaucrats will keep thinking up one reason after another why they should hold onto and maintain the base, even while it is scarcely used.

Meantime, its potential to Marin goes unrealized. As consultants to the State Aeronautics Board have pointed out, congestion at San Francisco and Oakland International Airports and at San Jose will in the years ahead become unbearable.

Hamilton could be used for overflow. Certainly it would be an easier departure point for those Marin residents who travel by air.

But foes of "development" — in any shape or form — unite with residents of areas near Hamilton to fight any move to open the field to private or commercial use.

This conglomerate force of foes probably is not very sizeable, but their organized, concentrated effort is sufficient to deter officialdom from action.

Perhaps we need a county ballot proposition at an early election so our officials can be guided by the will of the majority, democratically.

THE CITY OF Petaluma recently took the bull by the horns and voted to buy 212 acres of low land adjacent to Petaluma River to provide a site for disposal of spoil from future dredging.

All our neavigable and potentially navigable waterways which also perform a flood control function — Richardson Bay and its tributaries, Corte Madera Creek, San Rafael Canal and Novato Creek — face the common problem. They need periodic dredging. But area for disposing of dredge spoil has pretty much disappeared. If and when we have to stop dredging, watch out!

Flood problems will multiply. Pollution will be worse. Property values and consequently tax revenues will suffer. Recreational boating and the businesses it supports will fade, as will the tax revenue they generate.

MARSHAL TITO is in the second year of what may well be his final term as Yugoslav head of state.

Under Tito, Yugoslavia has finally stabilized internally and externally. It is no longer at dangerous odds with its fellow communist states like Russia. It maintains reasonably good relationship with western democracies, including the U.S.A.

But insiders say this all may be the calm before the storm. Old-time communists of the Stalin persuasion are ready, it is said, to take over forcefully when the opportunity presents. When Tito goes, chaos may follow.

A month ago, West Germany and Czechoslovakia quietly agreed on a new treaty which, among other things, declared the infamous Munich past of 1938 null and void.

Those of us with long memories (and who have refreshed them with recent reading about the cataclysmic events of the Hitler era) remember as if it were yesterday how British Prime Minister Chamberlain met at Munich with Hitler and, in the belief that he was achieving "peace in our time," agreed to the dismemberment of independent Czechoslovakia, which soon thereafter became a Nazi slave state.

Appeasement became the most contemptible of words.

If you think about it, you can see how Hitler's long shadow cast its pall over events in Southeast Asia. Those of us who initially supported the Vietnam war saw it as the only alternative to unthinkable appeasement.

The beginning of the end for Tito in Yugoslavia.

The beginning of a new era in relations between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Momentous events? Or only footnotes to history?

EVER HEAR of the American Lung Association.

You will. It is the new name of the Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, formerly the T.B. and Health Association.

The organization was founded in 1904 when the "white plague" was the number one cause of death in the U.S.A. By the second half of the 20th century, T.B. had been largely controlled. T.B. researchers began to be concerned with other lung diseases, especially emphysema and chronic bronchitis, the products of smoking and air pollution.

The job the society faces today may be even more difficult than the formidable task it undertook in 1904.

Christmas Seals will continue, of course, but most of us will probably find ourselves continuing to call them T.B. seals.

How could it be Christmas if we called them "Lung Seals?"

Rose Hips

Probably most Marinites think of roses largely in terms of their lovely blossoms. But to practioners of folk medicine, the fruits of the rose — the rose hips — are valuable as a potent source of vitamin C. Rose hip syrup is a widely used vitamin supplement for infants.

Stop Signs Before Injury Welcomed

Congratulations to Police Chief Brusatori for his part in the installations of several stop signs throughout Glenwood.

The speed limit has been ignored for years and these signs are an excellent means of controlling speed.

Everyone asks, "Why the stop signs? Was somebody hurt?" If someone had been hurt I wouldn't have been surprised; our children's safety has always been in question. It's a great thing when measures are taken before a tragedy occurs.

Four-Letter Words Sometimes Gladden Heart

I'm here on a visit from Ireland, so maybe I am especially conscious of the motto of the royal house of England, "Honi soit qui mal y pense", which translated means roughly "Evil to him who evil thinketh."

Now that motto contains two four-letter words. I noticed that Anne Sullivan in her letter to you published on July 11 asked if the phrase "four-letter words" meant profanity to you? That was obviously a rhetorical question, but I shall attempt to dignify it with an answer.

First, I must admit I have never attended a bobby soxers' game (but then, my experience so far also fails to include even a Little League game). Nevertheless, I can really think of many four-letter words even a young girl might use which gladdened the heart of the gentlemen Ms. Sullivan refers to as the illustrious mayor of her fair city. Among them are: "Play ball", "bunt," "oops," "gosh," "darn," and so forth.

Okay, then — as one Irishwoman to another — I hope Ms. Sullivan's Irish wit is not withered away and that she takes this in the spirit in which it is intended. Of course I know what she meant, but wish she would remember that words have different importance to different people and certainly to different generations.

Marin Residents Being Flummixed By Experts

First, we hear of Paul DeFalco, and his EPA's proposal to reduce use of Marin's motor vehicles by 84 per cent no later than 1978. We already know that we cannot afford adequate public transportation, in our highly dispersed population. Nevertheless, we have this firm proposal that would therefore unquestionably reduce Marin to a third-rate agricultural community, and impoverish practically all our residents. Granted, after starving to death, we would be buried under much cleaner air.

Now we have a "state expert" recommending that Hamilton AFB be converted into a major commercial airport, to be at least half the volume of SFO, shortly after 1985. I seem to remember, very recently, airport plan proponents saying nothing like this was in the works. (By the way, the firm recommending this solution is known, because of its initials, as DimJim. Never, we observe, has Jim seemed to be so dim.) This wonderful study is scheduled to cost all of us over one million dollars.

It is obvious that we should turn our attention away from the corruption in Washington; long enough to prevent these agencies and gentlemen from flummixing the public at home. Otherwise, we shall each be walking 15 miles to work, while jet din and smog fill our newly cleaned air.

Every concerned citizen should immediately write to all of his legislators on these issues; and keep communicating until this nonsense is terminated.

Tape Of The Witching Hour In President's Oval Office

WASHINGTON — The most interesting information about President Nixon having all his offices in the White House bugged was that the tape machines were "voice activated" — that is to say, they automatically went on when someone started to talk.

Not all the conversations in the Oval Office had to do with the President and his visitors. I have in my possession a tape of two cleaning women who did not know the office was bugged. The time of the taping was 12:05 a.m.

"Okay, Mathilde, it's my turn to be President of the United States."

"You were President last night, Clementine. It's my turn to be the President."

"I was off last night. Bethlyn must have been President last night. Now I'm going to sit in the big chair behind the desk. Who you want to be, Mathilde?"

"I'll be the queen of England."

"DON'T BE SO smart. Why don't you be Sammy Davis Jr.? Now come over to my side of the desk and hug me."

"I don't want to be Sammy Davis Jr. I think I'll be Henry Kissinger."

"Okay, Henry. I want you to go to China."

"What for, Mr. President?"

"I want two orders of won-ton soup, six egg rolls, a container of chop suey and a dozen fortune cookies."

"WHO YOU WANT to be now, Mathilde?"

"I'll be the former attorney general of the United States of America."

"Okay, Mr. Former Attorney General. Now I got to ask you this question. You know anything about this Watergate mess that everyone's been talking about?"

"No sir, Mr. President. I don't know nothing about nothing, and if I did know I wouldn't tell you."

"That's no way to talk to the President of the United States of America. I want to get to the bottom of this affair. Send in my loyal, devoted and trusted assistants."

"WHO AM I now?"

"You be John Dean."

"Okay, Mr. President, I am John Dean. What you want to know?"

"What's going on with this Watergate business, John?"

"You really want to know?"

"What for am I President of the United States if I didn't want to know?"

"Okay, Mr. President, I'll tell you."

"Get out of here. I don't want to know."

"NOW WHO am I?"

"You be Haldeman."

"Hi, Mr. President. I am Bob Haldeman, your loyal and able chief administrative assistant."

"Bob, I think John Dean knows something and he isn't telling us."

"We'll send him to Camp David and get him out of here. I never trusted him since he went on his honeymoon."

"One more thing, Bob. I need four more golf carts for San Clemente, a new volleyball court and a gazebo for Key Biscayne."

"You got them, Mr. President."

"NOW YOU BE John Connally, Mathilde."

"Yessir, I'm John Connally, reporting to help you out of your troubles."

"John."

"Yessir, Mr. President."

"Get out of here. (LAUGHTER)

"Well, since I'm the President, I think I'll make a proclamation. I hereby free all the slaves."

"That's President Lincoln, not President Nixon."

Inflation Plagues Bureaucracy As Well As Average Citizen

WASHINGTON — That old devil inflation hovers over the bureaucracy as it does over the citizenry across the country, and it has a lot to do with excellence in government and the drain of brain power. The thorny question of how to compensate for the rapid rise in the cost of living is inevitably tied up with politics.

The report, still kept confidential, of a high-level commission recommends a 25 per cent across-the-board increase for the executive branch of government, the judiciary and Congress. This comes at a moment when by every index bureaucrats and politicians are less respected than at any time in this century. With the burgeoning scandals at all levels, it would seem the wrong time to go after a pay raise.

Yet the commission, required by law to report to the President every four years, compiled extensive data to show that many top administrators are opting out, and these are the best and the brightest. They have had no increase in pay since 1969 and during that time the cost of living has jumped 25 per cent.

BUT WHAT ABOUT members of Congress? This is the large fly in the ointment. The last pay raise for Congress came on March 1, 1969, when senators and representatives went from $30,000 a year to $42,500.

With perquisites, that is substantially increased. A member of Congress does not have to refund his postal allowance over and above what he actually needs. Free trips back to the state, free long-distance calls, staff pay — all these add up to a big plus for the incumbent. In terms of income it puts most members of Congress above $50,000.

To vote yourself a raise of $10,000 a year will not be popular back in the district. That is more than the income of millions of Americans. For families on relief it looks like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

If the President fails to act on the recommendation of the commission and it goes over into 1974 — an election year when Congress would never vote a pay raise — then the whole matter can be postponed until 1977. By then the cost of living may have jumped to 35 per cent over 1969. A measure has passed the Senate and will likely pass the House requiring the commission to make recommendations every two years instead of every four. Should that pass, a proposed pay increase could come in a supplementary budget, with action by Congress by early fall.

WHILE ALL THIS may sound like mere bureaucratese touching only the slothful tax eaters, it gets down to the efficient direction of government. Civil servants at the top level of government are leaving to take pensions which include, unlike their salaries, a 6½ per cent increase geared to the cost of living. Then they are free to take jobs in private business at $20,000 or $25,000 a year, and many are doing just that with business eager to get brainy men and women knowledgeable in the ways of government.

The make-work types stay on. More and more this is true. In the foriegn service the number of early retirements by men of wide experience and ability is shocking. With the dollar devalued and costs going up, they simply cannot afford to stay.

When an able specialist on the Civil Service Commission or in the Office of Management and Budget takes a walk, it makes no splash. But it leaves a hole in the structure of government not easily filled. The way is opened for appointments and promotions based on political favoritism.

Good government is no longer the concern of a few idealists. In this fantastically complex society it is essential to every citizen. And only able and committed men and women can effectively move the machinery of government.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Italian Politics Continues Game Of Musical Chairs

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In the game of musical chairs which makes up Italian politics, Mariano Rumor has taken over the post of premier, a job he has held three times before.

And, as usual, in forming Italy's 35th government since the fall of Fascism 30 years ago, Rumor is surrounded by men who also have held the post before.

Included among them are President Giovanni Leoni, Aldo Moro, who now becomes foreign minister, and Amintore Fanfani, who takes over the post of political secretary of the Christian Democratic party, the country's most powerful political machine.

Rumor himself heads the strongest among the half dozen or so factions that divide the Christian Democrats. His faction is called the "Dorotheans" for the fact that he and his associates once held a caucus in a convent whose patron saint is St. Dorothy. The caucus was in revolt against Fanfani.

His government is a return to left-of-center rule, bringing the Communist-oriented Socialists into the government instead of the right-of-center Liberals. The left-of-center formula had been abandoned as unworkable 15 months ago after 10 years of trying.

PAST EXPERIENCE has given Rumor intimate knowledge of Italy's mounting troubles.

As interior minister it was up to him to deal with street violence between the ultra-left and the neo-Fascists on the far right, with kidnapings, bombings and all the other problems associated with maintaining law and order in a country beset with strikes and mounting social unrest.

One of his most pressing problems will be to deal with inflation, which has been mounting at an annual rate close to 20 per cent.

THE FACT THAT Italy's latest political crisis lasted just short of a month has given some hope that Italian politicians at last are recognizing the dangers of the country's present course.

For three years the economy has stagnated. Promised reforms in housing, education and health care are long overdue.

Italians also are realizing they have an ecological problem in river, sea and air pollution. A ministry of environment is a creation of the new government as is another to oversee protection of Italy's cultural wealth. The latter is a result of art thefts and the decay of historic buildings.

A realization that strikes are a major contributor to inflation and soon could eat up wage increases has come from an unexpected quarter — Italy's Communist party.

Communist spokesmen have warned workers that not all walkouts are good, and that some may be self-defeating.

The strategy could be the prelude to a Communist move toward participation in the national government.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

PEGGY FLEMING, Olympic champion, flies over ice. Unlike hundreds of others, she just didn't fade from view after winning a Gold Medal. This attractive, talented girl — 22, 25, or 28 — will laugh at her birthday next Friday (July 27). Her age? It's anybody's guess. See below.

BIRTHDAY BIOGRAPHY: Born in San Jose, Calif., daughter of a pressman, Peggy learned to ice skate in Berkeley when she was nine years old and won the Pacific Coast championship by the time she was eleven. "I was thrilled to win," she told me. It also made her wonder. Could she become the very best?

THANKS to her father, Albert, who saw his daughter's potential, the family moved to Colorado Springs in 1965 so Peggy could train under world-famous coaches for international competition. It cost a lot, $5,000 per year. Dad worked overtime to pay for it.

DESIRE, dedication, and determination paid off! Peggy dazzled the world in 1968 Olympic competition — the Gold Medal winner! But she didn't stop there. Next NBC-TV signed her for network specials. She joined Shipstad & Johnsons' Ice Follies, then organized her own show.

NEXT TV SEASON Peggy will be seen in a spectacular filmed in Moscow. Our ice fairy will have the backing of the Red Army Chrous, the Leningrade Philharmonic orchestra, the Kirov Ballet, the Leningrad Balalaika Band and the trained bears of the Moscow Circus.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Hold-Up Play Throws Other Players' Communication Off

A hold-up play is meant to cut the communications between your two opponents. Sometimes you must give up your chance for a trick in the process of holding up.

If so, shed no tears. An isolated trick here or there is of no importance; making sure of the contract is your chief job.

Opening lead — ♠ 4

West opens the four of spades, and East plays the jack.

SUPPRESS INSTINCT

Perhaps your first instinct is to take the king or queen of spades and think about the matter later. If so, you'd better do something about your instincts.

If you win the first trick, you must go after diamonds and allow East to win a trick with the queen. East then returns his other spade, and West can take four spade tricks, defeating the contract.

REFUSE FIRST TRICK

The correct play is to refuse the first trick. East leads his other spade, and you play the queen. West takes the ace of spades and gives you a spade trick.

Now you go after the diamonds. You lead the jack of diamonds for a finesse, not caring too much whether the finesse wins or loses.

As it happens, East wins the trick with the queen of diamonds; but his spades are gone, thanks to your hold-up play, and East's other suits are harmless.

No matter what East returns, you can take nine tricks with the long diamonds and top cards.

What would happen if East had three spades, instead of only two? In that case the opponents would take only three spade tricks and one diamond, and you would still make your contract.

Your partner deals and bids one spade. The next player passes.

You hold:

What do you say?

Answer: Bid two clubs. You will show spade support at your next turn. You cannot jump to two no-trump without a stopper in the unbid diamond suit.

Caroline Kennedy Helps With Film

EAGEN, Tenn. (UPI) — Caroline Kennedy has finished her brief stay to film a documentary in upper east Tennessee.

Miss Kennedy, the 15-year-old daughter of President John F. Kennedy, spent several weeks helping to shoot the federally funded documentary on coal mining in the Campbell County area.

"The local people didn't bother Caroline much, but the national news media did," said Marie Cirillo, a former nun who was Miss Kennedy's hostess during the visit.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Hold-Up Play Throws Other Players' Communication Off

A hold-up play is meant to cut the communications between your two opponents. Sometimes you must give up your chance for a trick in the process of holding up.

If so, shed no tears. An isolated trick here or there is of no importance; making sure of the contract is your chief job.

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass

Opening lead — ♠ 4

West opens the four of spades, and East plays the jack.

SUPPRESS INSTINCT

Perhaps your first instinct is to take the king or queen of spades and think about the matter later. If so, you'd better do something about your instincts.

If you win the first trick, you must go after diamonds and allow East to win a trick with the queen. East then returns his other spade, and West can take four spade tricks, defeating the contract.

REFUSE FIRST TRICK

The correct play is to refuse the first trick. East leads his other spade, and you play the queen. West takes the ace of spades and gives you a spade trick.

Now you go after the diamonds. You lead the jack of diamonds for a finesse, not caring too much whether the finesse wins or loses.

As it happens, East wins the trick with the queen of diamonds; but his spades are gone, thanks to your hold-up play, and East's other suits are harmless.

No matter what East returns, you can take nine tricks with the long diamonds and top cards.

What would happen if East had three spades, instead of only two? In that case the opponents would take only three spade tricks and one diamond, and you would still make your contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Your partner deals and bids one spade. The next player passes.

You hold:
♠- K Q 6
♥- A 4 3
♦- J 10 3
♣- K 9 6 2

What do you say?

Answer: Bid two clubs. You will show spade support at your next turn. You cannot jump to two no-trump without a stopper in the unbid diamond suit.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

PEGGY FLEMING, Olympic champion, flies over ice. Unlike hundreds of others, she just didn't fade from view after winning a Gold Medal. This attractive, talented girl — 22, 25, or 28 — will laugh at her birthday next Friday (July 27). Her age? It's anybody's guess. See below.

BIRTHDAY BIOGRAPHY: Born in San Jose, Calif., daughter of a pressman, Peggy learned to ice skate in Berkeley when she was nine years old and won the Pacific Coast championship by the time she was eleven. "I was thrilled to win," she told me. It also made her wonder. Could she become the very best?

THANKS to her father, Albert, who saw his daughter's potential, the family moved to Colorado Springs in 1965 so Peggy could train under world-famous coaches for international competition. It cost a lot, $5,000 per year. Dad worked overtime to pay for it.

DESIRE, dedication, and determination paid off! Peggy dazzled the world in 1968 Olympic competition — the Gold Medal winner! But she didn't stop there. Next NBC-TV signed her for network specials. She joined Shipstad & Johnsons' Ice Follies, then organized her own show.

NEXT TV SEASON Peggy will be seen in a spectacular filmed in Moscow. Our ice fairy will have the backing of the Red Army Chrous, the Leningrade Philharmonic orchestra, the Kirov Ballet, the Leningrad Balalaika Band and the trained bears of the Moscow Circus.

Paul DiPietro

(Send local birthdays to Birthday Editor, Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 330, San Rafael, Calif. 94902, at least four days before the date of the birthday. Include name to be published and telephone number of sender; print legibly.)

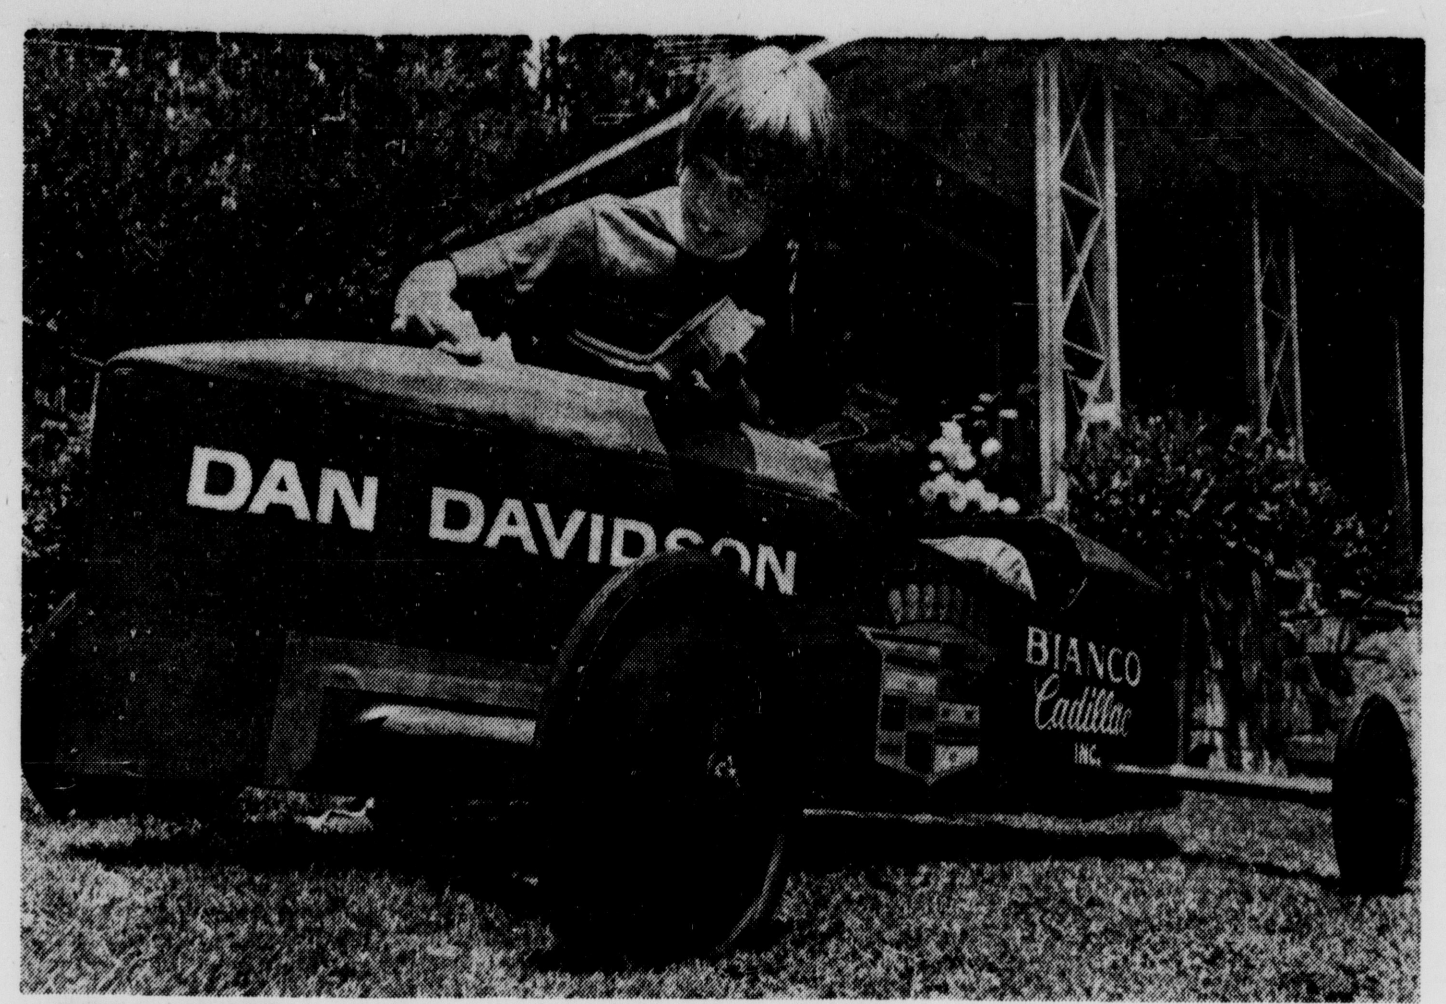
EAGEN, Tenn. (UPI) — Caroline Kennedy has finished her brief stay to film a documentary in upper east Tennessee.

Miss Kennedy, the 15-year-old daughter of President John F. Kennedy, spent several weeks helping to shoot the federally funded documentary on coal mining in the Campbell County area.

"The local people didn't bother Caroline much, but the national news media did," said Marie Cirillo, a former nun who was Miss Kennedy's hostess during the visit.



FINAL TOUCH — A final coat of wax is applied to a sleek soap box racer by Dan Davidson of San Rafael who will race in the soap box derby in Vallejo today. Davidson worked on the racer from last September until yesterday when it was impounded along with 51 other entries at prerace inspection.

FOR SOAP BOX RACER

Year's Work For One Day

By BILL ROBERTS

At age 11, few youngsters take on projects which extend longer than an afternoon baseball game or a two-day project to build a tree house which may end up half-finished.

But for Dan Davidson of 134 Linden Lane, San Rafael, nearly a full year's work was to go on the line today at the annual soap box derby in Vallejo.

Young Davidson was faced with the choice of buying a 10-speed bicycle or building a soap box racer last September and he opted for the lengthy building project.

He recruited his father, Dr. Paul Davidson, and they began building the car without knowing when or where it could be raced, since no race was held in Marin last year and none was planned this year.

"We just thought we would build it and see from there," the youth said.

Almost $200 was spent during the building period, with the end result a highly polished red racer. Contest rules limit expenditures to $40 but the costs of wheels, axles, steering assembly and paint (which are not within the $40 limit) push the total figure much higher.

The Davidsons discovered that the Bay Area offers races only in Vallejo and San Jose so they decided to enter the Vallejo event.

Four trips to Vallejo with the racer were required to meet trial run and mandatory inspection dates. The Davidsons said their entry was the only racer at the trial run.

"Any scattered time we had we would add something," the youth said of the building process. He said he had to build everything himself under contest rules but some dangerous cutting work with an electric saw had to be done by his father. In talking to other entrants at the inspections, he said, he discovered that most had received much more unauthorized help from interested parents.

His father became caught up in the project and found it to be a great source for pride in his son. "He has been bragging about it in the office," the youngster said.

Dr. Davidson also found through an office friend that he could obtain sponsorship for his son's car to offset some building expenses. Bianco Cadillac of Corte Madera is thus emblazoned in professional lettering on the side of the Davidson entry in letters nearly as big as the entrant's name.

The Vallejo race is sponsored by the Police Activities League in that city and was to have more than 50 entries. The soap box racers come in all sizes and shapes, as do drivers ranging from 11 to 15 years old.

The winner from the Vallejo race will go to the national finals in Akron, Ohio, where college scholarships will make up a prize pool of $30,000.

Many tricks to add speed have come to the soap box races over the years but Davidson thinks his chances rest in superior design.

He points with pride to his racer's low, sleek design and many small features which were added to reduce wind resistance. He spent many hours hand carving axle mounts to assure they would not cause added resistance.

He knows he faces certain disadvantages, including a light car. Since he weighs only 64 pounds, the entire vehicle-driver weight is only 148 pounds. Upper limit restriction is 250 pounds and with many heavier drivers approaching the limit, the Marin racer knows he is at a disadvantage.

But he will have plenty of local support, as about 50 family friends plan to attend the race. His grandmother and grandfather from Philadelphia even timed a trip west so they could see the race.

The only other Marin entrant in the race, 14-year-old Kevin Frager of Greenbrae, was entering his third derby. Being the third boy in the Frager family to undertake the soap box challenge, he also knows of the work involved.

His mother pointed out that his past efforts netted him a spot in the top four finishers at last year's San Francisco race. Like Davidson, he thought his chances for a win today in Vallejo were good.

Davidson is sure he will continue the project for next year's race, no matter how he does this weekend. He hopes to adapt his present racer to fit his anticipated larger size next year but the possibility of an entire new car is not ruled out.

So Dan Davidson put a whole year's work on the line in one soap box race with the thought that another such gigantic project may be ahead.

"I haven't had time to do much of anything else," he said of the building and prerace periods. But he expresses only enthusiasm for repeating such a project.

Short-lived or half-finished projects are obviously not for Dan Davidson.

County Plan To Be Eyed

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. at Civic Center, will review additional background and supplementary material on the recently-approved countywide general plan.

The county planning department said the commission also will study detailed policy recommendations on environmental quality, community development and transporttion.

The plan's general countywide policies and goals were adopted last month by county supervisors but details are still to be spelled out.

Additionally, the commission will consider a precise development plan for the controversial Highlands subdivision near Tiburon. Developers are proposing 109 dwellings on the 30-acre site overlooking Bel Aire and Reedlands.

Porno Dealers Given Warning

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Hard core pornography dealers have until next Wednesday to get sleazy magazines off the shelves and blue movies out of the theaters, state Attorney General Warren Rudman said yesterday.

"By Wednesday next, all hard core pornography is going to be out of this state," Rudman told law enforcement officials. He called the meeting to brief them on the impact of the recent Supreme Court ruling, which gives local communities wider latitude in defining what is obscene.

Rudman said a state censorship board was not necessary because police officers can identify what materials are pornographic.

Erroneous Drug Raid Probe Set

The Department of Justice ordered the inquiry July 6 after receiving a number of complaints of abuses in connection with the raids.

William O'Connor, deputy assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department, was to direct the investigation.

Many of the complaints were included in five lawsuits accusing federal narcotics agents of abuses during mistaken drug raids and arrests in recent months. At the time of the raids, the accused agents were assigned to the Drug Abuse Law Enforcement (DALE) Agency.

Fishing Trawler 'Visits' Approved

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (UPI) — Soviet and U.S. fish experts yesterday agreed to American "visits" aboard Russian fishing vessels off the Pacific Northwest coast.

The agreement was apparently aimed at reducing tensions that often arise as a result of Soviet trawling activities in and near traditional American fishing grounds.

Condominiums Curb On Agenda For Council

The Tiburon City Council Monday will discuss a proposed emergency ordinance to halt the conversion of some apartment buildings into condominiums until the housing element of the city's general plan is completed.

Asst. City Mgr. Robert L. Kleinert said that the city is considering the ordinance because it wants to maintain some rental units to keep a balance among different kinds of housing in the city.

The council will also continue discussing an environmental impact report for a controversial proposed subdivision, Paradise Estates, on Paradise Drive north of Trestle Glen Drive.

According to Kleinert, the developer will propose some revisions at the meeting, to neighbors who are opposed to the 19-unit project.

Among the changes are reductions in density and a redesigned entranceway to the subdivision.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

DAN DAVIDSON
BIANCO Cadillac INC.

FINAL TOUCH — A final coat of wax is applied to a sleek soap box racer by Dan Davidson of San Rafael who will race in the soap box derby in Vallejo today. Davidson worked on the racer from last September until yesterday when it was impounded along with 51 other entries at prerace inspection.

FOR SOAP BOX RACER

Year's Work For One Day

By BILL ROBERTS

At age 11, few youngsters take on projects which extend longer than an afternoon baseball game or a two-day project to build a tree house which may end up half-finished.

But for Dan Davidson of 134 Linden Lane, San Rafael, nearly a full year's work was to go on the line today at the annual soap box derby in Vallejo.

Young Davidson was faced with the choice of buying a 10-speed bicycle or building a soap box racer last September and he opted for the lengthy building project.

He recruited his father, Dr. Paul Davidson, and they began building the car without knowing when or where it could be raced, since no race was held in Marin last year and none was planned this year.

"We just thought we would build it and see from there," the youth said.

Almost $200 was spent during the building period, with the end result a highly polished red racer. Contest rules limit expenditures to $40 but the costs of wheels, axles, steering assembly and paint (which are not within the $40 limit) push the total figure much higher.

The Davidsons discovered that the Bay Area offers races only in Vallejo and San Jose so they decided to enter the Vallejo event.

Four trips to Vallejo with the racer were required to meet trial run and mandatory inspection dates. The Davidsons said their entry was the only racer at the trial run.

"Any scattered time we had we would add something," the youth said of the building process. He said he had to build everything himself under contest rules but some dangerous cutting work with an electric saw had to be done by his father. In talking to other entrants at the inspections, he said, he discovered that most had received much more unauthorized help from interested parents.

His father became caught up in the project and found it to be a great source for pride in his son. "He has been bragging about it in the office," the youngster said.

Dr. Davidson also found through an office friend that he could obtain sponsorship for his son's car to offset some building expenses. Bianco Cadillac of Corte Madera is thus emblazoned in professional lettering on the side of the Davidson entry in letters nearly as big as the entrant's name.

The Vallejo race is sponsored by the Police Activities League in that city and was to have more than 50 entries. The soap box racers come in all sizes and shapes, as do drivers ranging from 11 to 15 years old.

The winner from the Vallejo race will go to the national finals in Akron, Ohio, where college scholarships will make up a prize pool of $30,000.

Many tricks to add speed have come to the soap box races over the years but Davidson thinks his chances rest in superior design.

He points with pride to his racer's low, sleek design and many small features which were added to reduce wind resistance. He spent many hours hand carving axle mounts to assure they would not cause added resistance.

He knows he faces certain disadvantages, including a light car. Since he weighs only 64 pounds, the entire vehicle-driver weight is only 148 pounds. Upper limit restriction is 250 pounds and with many heavier drivers approaching the limit, the Marin racer knows he is at a disadvantage.

But he will have plenty of local support, as about 50 family friends plan to attend the race. His grandmother and grandfather from Philadelphia even timed a trip west so they could see the race.

The only other Marin entrant in the race, 14-year-old Kevin Frager of Greenbrae, was entering his third derby. Being the third boy in the Frager family to undertake the soap box challenge, he also knows of the work involved.

His mother pointed out that his past efforts netted him a spot in the top four finishers at last year's San Francisco race. Like Davidson, he thought his chances for a win today in Vallejo were good.

Davidson is sure he will continue the project for next year's race, no matter how he does this weekend. He hopes to adapt his present racer to fit his anticipated larger size next year but the possibility of an entire new car is not ruled out.

So Dan Davidson put a whole year's work on the line in one soap box race with the thought that another such gigantic project may be ahead.

"I haven't had time to do much of anything else," he said of the building and prerace periods. But he expresses only enthusiasm for repeating such a project.

Short-lived or half-finished projects are obviously not for Dan Davidson.

County Plan To Be Eyed

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 9 a.m. at Civic Center, will review additional background and supplementary material on the recently-approved county-wide general plan.

The county planning department said the commission also will study detailed policy recommendations on environmental quality, community development and transporttion.

The plan's general county-wide policies and goals were adopted last month by county supervisors but details are still to be spelled out.

Additionally, the commission will consider a precise development plan for the controversial Highlands subdivision near Tiburon. Developers are proposing 109 dwellings on the 30-acre site overlooking Bel Aire and Reedlands.

Porno Dealers Given Warning

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Hard core pornography dealers have until next Wednesday to get sleazy magazines off the shelves and blue movies out of the theaters, state Attorney General Warren Rudman said yesterday.

"By Wednesday next, all hard core pornography is going to be out of this state," Rudman told law enforcement officials. He called the meeting to brief them on the impact of the recent Supreme Court ruling, which gives local communities wider latitude in defining what is obscene.

Rudman said a state censorship board was not necessary because police officers can identify what materials are pornographic.

Erroneous Drug Raid Probe Set

The Department of Justice ordered the inquiry July 6 after receiving a number of complaints of abuses in connection with the raids.

William O'Connor, deputy assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department, was to direct the investigation.

Many of the complaints were included in five lawsuits accusing federal narcotics agents of abuses during mistaken drug raids and arrests in recent months. At the time of the raids, the accused agents were assigned to the Drug Abuse Law Enforcement (DALE) Agency.

Fishing Trawler 'Visits' Approved

The agreement was apparently aimed at reducing tensions that often arise as a result of Soviet trawling activities in and near traditional American fishing grounds.

Condominiums Curb On Agenda For Council

The Tiburon City Council Monday will discuss a proposed emergency ordinance to halt the conversion of some apartment buildings into condominiums until the housing element of the city's general plan is completed.

Asst. City Mgr. Robert L. Kleinert said that the city is considering the ordinance because it wants to maintain some rental units to keep a balance among different kinds of housing in the city.

The council will also continue discussing an environmental impact report for a controversial proposed subdivision, Paradise Estates, on Paradise Drive north of Trestle Glen Drive.

According to Kleinert, the developer will propose some revisions at the meeting, to neighbors who are opposed to the 19-unit project.

Among the changes are reductions in density and a redesigned entranceway to the subdivision.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Martin Luther Fathered The Protestant Reformation

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

The Lutheran churches of the world—and indeed the whole Protestant Reformation — grew out of one man's tortured search for an inner sense of peace with God.

The man was an Augustinian monk named Martin Luther, who taught theology at Germany's famous University of Wittenberg in the early years of the 16th Century. He is one of the few human beings who can legitimately be said to have changed the course of history.

Luther was obsessed as a young friar with awareness of his own sinfulness. He undertook rigorous acts of penance in an attempt to make his soul and body as obedient to God as he felt they should be. But no matter how many hours he spent in prayer and fasting, or in such acts of "mortification of the flesh" as wearing a hair shirt next to his skin, he never felt he had succeeded in making himself good enough to deserve God's love and forgiveness.

THEN ONE day, as he was reading the Scriptures, Luther came upon St. Paul's statement that men are saved not by their own striving after goodness, but purely and simply through the mercy of a gracious God. In the theological language which Luther was soon to make the flaming motto of the Protestant Reformation, man is "justified" —i.e., made right with God— not by religious works, but solely through faith in God's freely given love, manifested to humanity in and through Jesus Christ.

This is the celebrated doctrine of "justification by faith" which remains to this day the theological keystone of Lutheranism — and all Protestantism.

To it, Luther soon allied another basic doctrine, born of his own experience in finding "saving truth" not in the dogmas of the medieval Church but in the pages of the Bible. Luther gave the doctrine the Latin name, "sola scriptura." It means that the Bible alone is a sufficient guide to all the truth any man needs for his salvation. This also remains a cardinal principle of Lutheran (and all Protestant) teaching.

LUTHER HAD no intention, originally, of breaking with Rome and founding a new church. He simply wanted to share his new-found insights with the world—and was naively surprised when the Pope of Rome took strong exception to his argument that the Bible takes precedence over papal authority.

Relations between the outspoken German monk and Pope Leo X worsened steadily when Luther also found himself compelled by conscience to denounce the then widespread practice of selling papal "indulgences" which were supposed to remit part of the punishment a sinner could otherwise expect to receive in purgatory. Leo was banking on income from indulgences to complete the magnificent church he was building in Rome (the present St. Peter's).

He tried to silence Luther with warnings and threats, to no avail. Finally, he excommunicated the troublesome monk. On Dec. 10, 1520, in the presence of cheering Wittenberg students, Luther publicly burned the bull of excommunication. The Protestant Reformation — and the Lutheran Church—were born on that memorable day.

JOHN CALVIN of Geneva, contemporary of Luther who became the other giant of the Protestant Reformation, was a dour, pinched-nose ascetic. But Martin Luther was a robust, life-loving man who drank plenty of good German beer and used some of the earthiest language ever employed in theological discourse.

Within his own lifetime, Luther saw churches bearing his name flower throughout a large part of Germany and Scandinavia. These Nordic lands remain the center of Lutheran strength, and account today for about two-thirds of the 75 million Lutherans who comprise the largest worldwide Protestant family.

Lutheran churches came to America with German and Scandinavian immigrants. The first was established in 1683 by a group of Swedes who settled along the Delaware River.

DURING THE 19th Century German and Scandinavian immigrants to America brought with them the particular expression of Lutheranism they had known in their homelands. The main difference between them was language, each group holding services in its native tongue. A Danish Lutheran would have felt entirely at home with the theological doctrine of a German Lutheran church—if he could have understood the sermons.

Time and the melting pot of Americanization have largely eradicated these old differences. Services are now conducted in English and contemporary Lutheran congregations include millions of Americans who have no ancestral ties to Germany or Scandinavia.

Moreover, a series of mergers has drastically reduced the once-bewildering proliferation of Lutheran bodies. Most of America's 8 million Lutherans now are associated with three strong national denominations — the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

THE FORMER is the most liberal, theologically and on social issues, but the adjective is relative. Compared to many other Protestant denominations, the Lutheran Church in America is a bastion of Christian orthodoxy as Martin Luther taught it.

Most conservative of the major Lutheran bodies is the Missouri Synod—which also happens to be the largest. "Missouri", as it is known among Lutherans, is currently divided to a dangerous degree, perhaps even to the brink of schism, by controversy between rigorous fundamentalists who insist on the "plenary inspiration and verbal inerrancy" of the Bible, and those who cannot accept the idea that God personally dicated the choice of every single word and sentence in the Scriptures.

Lutheran worship features two kinds of service. The "Service of the Word" is built around Scripture readings, prayer and hymns, with the sermon as the centerpiece. The celebration of Holy Communion is a sacramental service whose liturgy strongly resembles that of the Anglican Church (or, for that matter, the new Roman Catholic Mass in English).

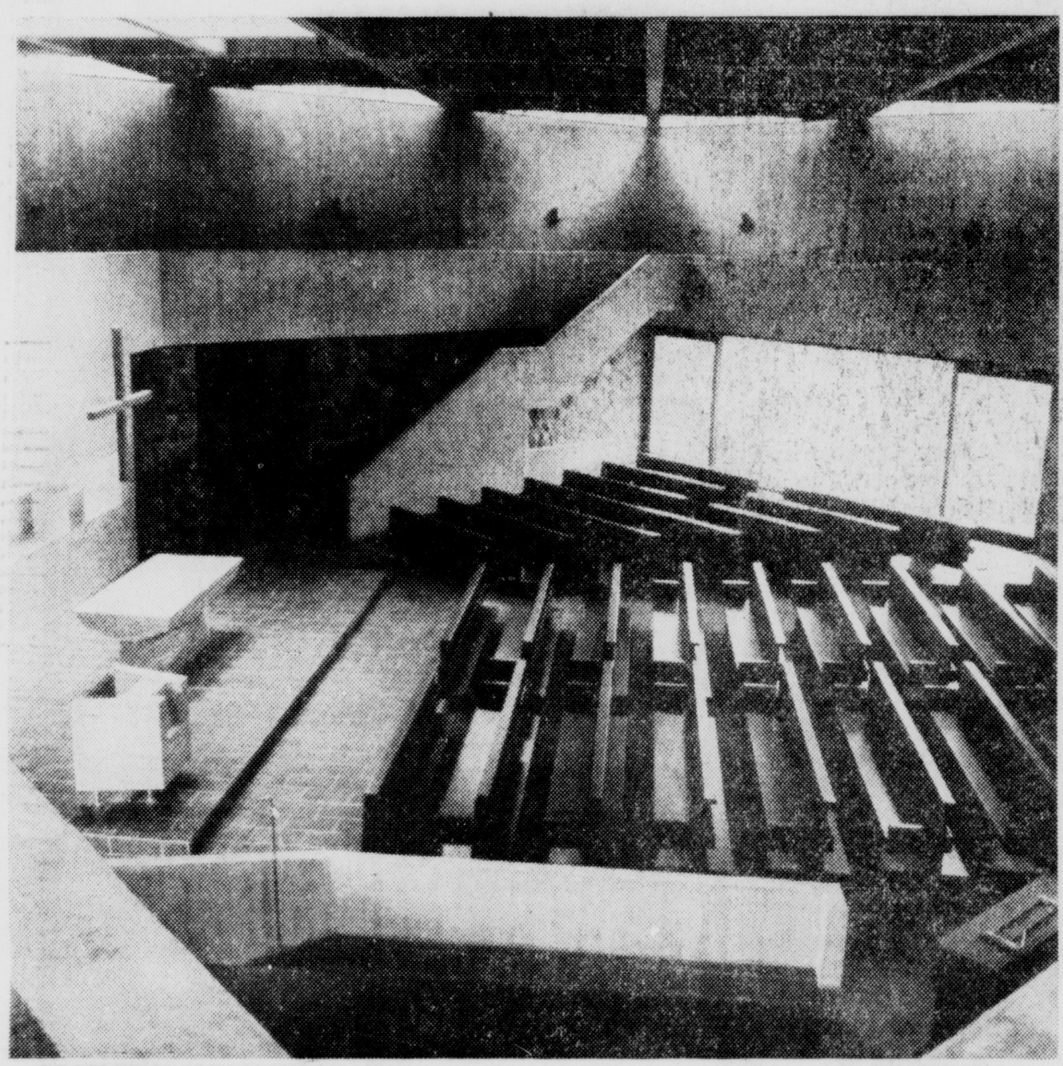
LIKE ANGLICANS and Catholics, Lutherans believe in what theologians call the "real presence" —that is, that Christ is not merely symbolically but really (if mystically) present in the bread and wine which is consecrated as His body and blood. This belief gives a high degree of solemnity and importance to a service of Holy Communion.

In Germany and Scandinavia, Lutheran churches have bishops. American Lutherans traditionally have shied away from this title, preferring to call their presiding clergymen by such titles as "president." But there seems to be a trend toward adoption of the ancient biblical term of bishop.

Lutherans venerate saints who are mentioned in the Bible, and often name churches in their honor, but do not accept any saint canonized after the biblical era. Thus you may find a Lutheran Church of St. John or St. Paul or St. Thomas, but no St. Francis or St. Augustine. The Virgin Mary is venerated as St. Mary, but Lutherans do not cotton to the Catholic practice of calling her "Mother of God."

CONFESSION OF sins normally is a public, corporate act—a regular part of each worship service. But any Lutheran with a burdened conscience may, if he chooses, ask for the opportunity to make private confession to a pastor.

Lutheran churches have brought to its highest stage of development that great American folk custom, the parish supper. The excellence of Lutheran church suppers is appropriate to a denomination bearing the name of Martin Luther, who yielded to no one in his love of good food. But it probably owes less to Luther's tastes than to the cultural tradition of good cooking that has long prevailed and, thank Heaven, prevails yet, among women of German and Scandinavian descent.



MOTHER HOUSE — The creative power of architect Marcel Breuer is shown in the chapel of a Swiss convent completed late last year.

New Convent Radiates "Of-Ness'

By WILLIAM MARLIN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Architect Marcel Breuer might have said it: "Most can raise the flower now, for all have got the seed."

(Actually, it was Alfred Lord Tennyson.)

For 50 of his 70 years, the Hungarian-born, Bauhaus-bred Breuer has been scattering seeds all over the place: that benchmark of a chair, the "Wassily" (after his friend Kandinsky), done in the 1920's of the bent tubular steel; those New England houses, terse verses in stone and wood and glass, done in the 1940's while teaching at Harvard's Graduate School of Design; the muscular Y-shaped office towers for UNESCO (in Paris) and for HUD (in Washington); New York's Whitney Museum, there on Madison Avenue, and explosion of natural light encased in stone.

In the work of Marcel Breuer, the senses are kneaded — all of them.

In his use of materials and structural methods, he is straightforward — honest expression, always. And the emotions which emerge are every bit as important (every bit as much architecture) as that which elicits them.

A testament to all this, and to his continuing creative power, was completed late in 1972 — a mother house for the Franciscan nuns of Baldegg near Lucerne, Switzerland.

The quadrangular cluster is set in a sweep of apple trees on rolling Swiss terrain. A mist of mountains, like something the pointillist Seurat might have painted, ranges in the distance.

Lake Baldegg, alternately mist and mirror, is close by. So are old farmhouses. You get the feeling — ever a good test of architecture — that the new structure is not merely in its surroundings, but of them.

This of-ness, if you will, works something like this.

First, its components. A church, seating 200, and a library. Nuns' living quarters, and spaces for teaching. Communal rooms for living, dining — and kitchens. Offices, service facilities, garages. With the cadence of a medieval chant, the components converge.

The wings of the building assume the shape of an H, with yet another wing perpendicular to the H's connecting element. This composes four courtyards — one for communal meetings, one for individual meditation, another for relaxed conversation, and another for a garden.

Each court is surrounded by the building on three sides. The fourth side is open cloister space with supports of rough granite — like the spaces, tactile, made for running your fingers over. The supports give way to the space, and the terrain.

The inside and outside trek together. Messages fly between them. Rough old stones speak to raw concrete. Sun speaks to shadow. Well-tended courts speak to the nearby hills. There is the image of St. Francis speaking to the birds. And the question, "Is it not possible that the birds were speaking to him?"

I guess it is this of-ness, the sense of things converging, which makes this work so compelling.

Within the sanctuary of the mother house, timeless and temporal concerns of mankind come into interaction. Three (and more) dimensions take hold.

Heavy walls of granite receive their weight. Affirmation.

Expanses of clerestory glass between the roof slab and the walls receive the light, eliminating the sense of being locked in, revealing (in Breuer's words) "the presense of a place of special dedication."

Behind the simple altar, goldleaf tiles encrust a wall. Its only embellishment is that which natural light throws there. It is as though the tiles exist only to receive it. Innocence.

Breuer, working in concert with architect Robert Gatje (his long-time associate) and with Beat von Segresser (who coordinated the project locally), has once again shown us the power of presence in a world whose buildings too often rely on pretension.

Sublimating itself in its surroundings, the mother house evokes a sense of the very old and the very new. Of the very sacred, but also of the very secular.

"Consider the lillies of the field . . ." Same thing. Or St. Francis's birds.

Coming away from Baldegg, you sort of wonder why they had to put all that glass under the chapel beams. It would have been the perfect place for them to fly in and out of.

OF GOD AND MAN

The Why? Of Life Is An Old Question

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The hardest letters to answer are those that ask, WHY?

Why did God let my child (or mate, or parent) die? Why is a devout, kind-hearted person stricken with cancer, while a wicked, self-centered person sails blithely through life?

There is no simple, glib, all-satisfying answer to The Great Why.

But a few observations can be made about it:

It is not, as many who ask it seem to think, a newly discovered question. You will find it raised, in poignant form, in the Biblical book of Job, written thousands of years ago. It also appears in many of the ancient Hebrew Psalms.

The New Testament offers no promise to anyone that he can buy safe passage through the troubles of life by going to church and "being good." On the contrary, Jesus warned his followers repeatedly they would have to pay a very heavy price for fidelity to his way.

And they did. The men and women who insisted on telling the world about Jesus were tortured, beheaded, burned at the stake and fed to lions.

The New Testament offers three consolations to those who suffer pain or loss.

The first and greatest is the promise that the inequities of this life will be rectified in a future state.

Pie in the sky? Perhaps. Certainly, no one living can prove the promise true. On the other hand, no one has ever proved it untrue. If there is a God of love, it is hard to believe He would be so cruel as to let millions of people live and die, through countless generations, sustained by a groundless hope in a false promise that was made in His name.

The second Biblical consolation is that suffering need not be interpreted as something which God inflicts deliberately upon a particular individual.

Finally, there is the consolation of prayer. Christian experience attests that prayer sometimes leads to what seem like miraculous remissions of imminent disaster. But it also affirms that such incidents are relatively rare. Most of the time, the "pay-off" of prayer is not getting what you ask, but getting something far more precious: a sense of the presence of God, and the knowledge that His love enfolds and sustains us even —in fact, especially —in the blackest hours of life. It is this discovery that has brought many a hardheaded realist to believe that accepted suffering can be one of the greatest blessings of human existence.

Inquiry Class At St. Rita's

An adult education inquiry class will begin Monday at St. Rita's Church, 100 Marinda Drive, Fairfax.

The class, to be taught by Dr. James Halligan, will deal with all Catholic doctrine. Though primarily offered as an instruction class for those who wish to become Catholic, it will also serve as a refresher course for many others.

Scheduled for 8 p.m. on Monday evenings, the class will be held in the rectory conference room and will consist of an informal lecture and discussion time. The classes will last an hour and a half.

Bible School Registration Being Taken

"Tell the News — Share the Love" will be the theme of a Vacation Bible School to be held at Resurrection Lutheran Church, 1100 Las Gallinas Avenue in Terra Linda. The school will run for two weeks; August 6 through 17, with daily classes held from 9:30 a.m. until noon, Monday through Friday.

Individual classes are planned for children from nursery school age through those entering 7th grade.

The cirriculum will include Bible study, film strips, arts and crafts, music and recreation.

Rev. Arthur Nitz will be participating in the program, and teachers from both Resurrection Lutheran Church and Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael will be involved. The two congregations have cooperated in this annual program for the past several years.

Children may be enrolled by calling Mrs. Alice DeCosterd at 479-4052 or Mrs. Joanne Juilly at 456-5189.

Two Churches Join For Bible Classes

During the week of July 30 the Valley Community Church and the St. Cecilia's Catholic Church in the San Geronimo Valley will combine efforts to offer a summer Bible school for all children with school experience through grade 6.

The school will be held at the Valley Community Church, Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at Nicasio Road from July 30 to August 3, 9 to 11:30 a.m. The cost will be $1 per child for the entire week or $2 per family.

Activities will include crafts, singing, games, field trips and worship services at both churches. For pre-registration call Judy Parle 454-9564 or Cia Donahue 454-0337.

Treasure Hunt Is Topic Of Message By Pastor

The Rev. Hugo M. Warnke, pastor of Living Word Lutheran Church (Wisconsin Synod) meeting in the Church of Ignacio, 400 Ignacio Boulevard, Novato, will introduce the sermon Sunday by issuing the invitation: "Come along on a treasure hunt."

The pastor will show how the men and women who step out of the pages of Scripture are just as diverse as the worshippers at any Sunday morning service today. There was impetuous Peter, so bold to believe and so quick to defend. There was Thomas, who continually tormented himself with doubts and skepticism. There was Judas, who rebelled against everything and everybody. And then there was the sharecropper, who wasn't really searching for anything, just doing his job, and he found a buried treasure.

The Sunday worship service is at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday school and adult Bible class at 6:30 p.m.

Martin Luther Fathered The Protestant Reformation

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

The Lutheran churches of the world—and indeed the whole Protestant Reformation — grew out of one man's tortured search for an inner sense of peace with God.

The man was an Augustinian monk named Martin Luther, who taught theology at Germany's famous University of Wittenberg in the early years of the 16th Century. He is one of the few human beings who can legitimately be said to have changed the course of history.

Luther was obsessed as a young friar with awareness of his own sinfulness. He undertook rigorous acts of penance in an attempt to make his soul and body as obedient to God as he felt they should be. But no matter how many hours he spent in prayer and fasting, or in such acts of "mortification of the flesh" as wearing a hair shirt next to his skin, he never felt he had succeeded in making himself good enough to deserve God's love and forgiveness.

THEN ONE day, as he was reading the Scriptures, Luther came upon St. Paul's statement that men are saved not by their own striving after goodness, but purely and simply through the mercy of a gracious God. In the theological language which Luther was soon to make the flaming motto of the Protestant Reformation, man is "justified" —i.e., made right with God— not by religious works, but solely through faith in God's freely given love, manifested to humanity in and through Jesus Christ.

This is the celebrated doctrine of "justification by faith" which remains to this day the theological keystone of Lutheranism — and all Protestantism.

To it, Luther soon allied another basic doctrine, born of his own experience in finding "saving truth" not in the dogmas of the medieval Church but in the pages of the Bible. Luther gave the doctrine the Latin name, "sola scriptura." It means that the Bible alone is a sufficient guide to all the truth any man needs for his salvation. This also remains a cardinal principle of Lutheran (and all Protestant) teaching.

LUTHER HAD no intention, originally, of breaking with Rome and founding a new church. He simply wanted to share his new-found insights with the world—and was naively surprised when the Pope of Rome took strong exception to his argument that the Bible takes precedence over papal authority.

Relations between the outspoken German monk and Pope Leo X worsened steadily when Luther also found himself compelled by conscience to denounce the then widespread practice of selling papal "indulgences" which were supposed to remit part of the punishment a sinner could otherwise expect to receive in purgatory. Leo was banking on income from indulgences to complete the magnificent church he was building in Rome (the present St. Peter's).

He tried to silence Luther with warnings and threats, to no avail. Finally, he excommunicated the troublesome monk. On Dec. 10, 1520, in the presence of cheering Wittenberg students, Luther publicly burned the bull of excommunication. The Protestant Reformation — and the Lutheran Church—were born on that memorable day.

JOHN CALVIN of Geneva, contemporary of Luther who became the other giant of the Protestant Reformation, was a dour, pinched-nose ascetic. But Martin Luther was a robust, life-loving man who drank plenty of good German beer and used some of the earthiest language ever employed in theological discourse.

Within his own lifetime, Luther saw churches bearing his name flower throughout a large part of Germany and Scandinavia. These Nordic lands remain the center of Lutheran strength, and account today for about two-thirds of the 75 million Lutherans who comprise the largest worldwide Protestant family.

Lutheran churches came to America with German and Scandinavian immigrants. The first was established in 1683 by a group of Swedes who settled along the Delaware River.

DURING THE 19th Century German and Scandinavian immigrants to America brought with them the particular expression of Lutheranism they had known in their homelands. The main difference between them was language, each group holding services in its native tongue. A Danish Lutheran would have felt entirely at home with the theological doctrine of a German Lutheran church—if he could have understood the sermons.

Time and the melting pot of Americanization have largely eradicated these old differences. Services are now conducted in English and contemporary Lutheran congregations include millions of Americans who have no ancestral ties to Germany or Scandinavia.

Moreover, a series of mergers has drastically reduced the once-bewildering proliferation of Lutheran bodies. Most of America's 8 million Lutherans now are associated with three strong national denominations — the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

THE FORMER is the most liberal, theologically and on social issues, but the adjective is relative. Compared to many other Protestant denominations, the Lutheran Church in America is a bastion of Christian orthodoxy as Martin Luther taught it.

Most conservative of the major Lutheran bodies is the Missouri Synod—which also happens to be the largest. "Missouri", as it is known among Lutherans, is currently divided to a dangerous degree, perhaps even to the brink of schism, by controversy between rigorous fundamentalists who insist on the "plenary inspiration and verbal inerrancy" of the Bible, and those who cannot accept the idea that God personally dicated the choice of every single word and sentence in the Scriptures.

Lutheran worship features two kinds of service. The "Service of the Word" is built around Scripture readings, prayer and hymns, with the sermon as the centerpiece. The celebration of Holy Communion is a sacramental service whose liturgy strongly resembles that of the Anglican Church (or, for that matter, the new Roman Catholic Mass in English).

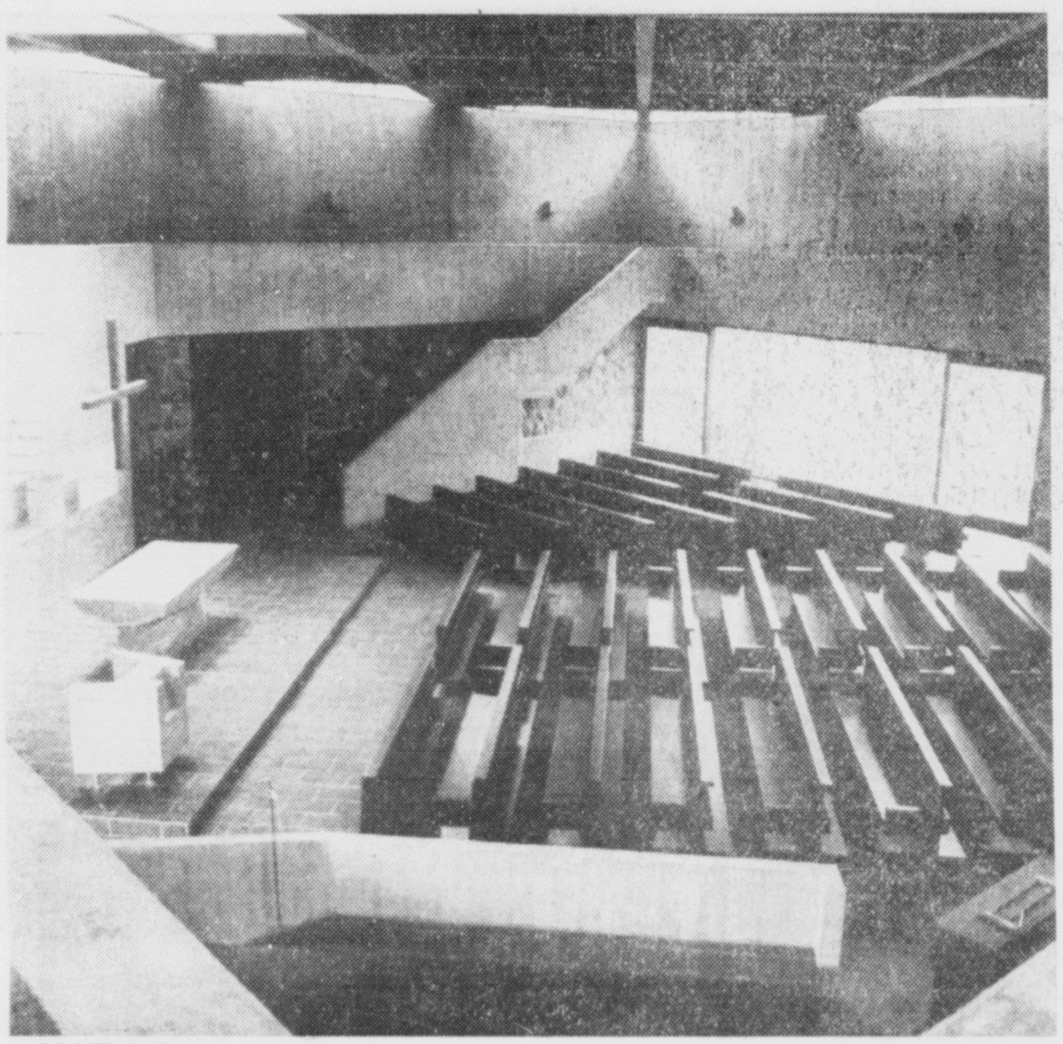
LIKE ANGLICANS and Catholics, Lutherans believe in what theologians call the "real presence" —that is, that Christ is not merely symbolically but really (if mystically) present in the bread and wine which is consecrated as His body and blood. This belief gives a high degree of solemnity and importance to a service of Holy Communion.

In Germany and Scandinavia, Lutheran churches have bishops. American Lutherans traditionally have shied away from this title, preferring to call their presiding clergymen by such titles as "president." But there seems to be a trend toward adoption of the ancient biblical term of bishop.

Lutherans venerate saints who are mentioned in the Bible, and often name churches in their honor, but do not accept any saint canonized after the biblical era. Thus you may find a Lutheran Church of St. John or St. Paul or St. Thomas, but no St. Francis or St. Augustine. The Virgin Mary is venerated as St. Mary, but Lutherans do not cotton to the Catholic practice of calling her "Mother of God."

CONFESSION OF sins normally is a public, corporate act—a regular part of each worship service. But any Lutheran with a burdened conscience may, if he chooses, ask for the opportunity to make private confession to a pastor.

Lutheran churches have brought to its highest stage of development that great American folk custom, the parish supper. The excellence of Lutheran church suppers is appropriate to a denomination bearing the name of Martin Luther, who yielded to no one in his love of good food. But it probably owes less to Luther's tastes than to the cultural tradition of good cooking that has long prevailed and, thank Heaven, prevails yet, among women of German and Scandinavian descent.



MOTHER HOUSE — The creative power of architect Marcel Breuer is shown in the chapel of a Swiss convent completed late last year.

New Convent Radiates "Of-Ness'

By WILLIAM MARLIN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Architect Marcel Breuer might have said it: "Most can raise the flower now, for all have got the seed."

(Actually, it was Alfred Lord Tennyson.)

For 50 of his 70 years, the Hungarian-born, Bauhaus-bred Breuer has been scattering seeds all over the place: that benchmark of a chair, the "Wassily" (after his friend Kandinsky), done in the 1920's of the bent tubular steel; those New England houses, terse verses in stone and wood and glass, done in the 1940's while teaching at Harvard's Graduate School of Design; the muscular Y-shaped office towers for UNESCO (in Paris) and for HUD (in Washington); New York's Whitney Museum, there on Madison Avenue, and explosion of natural light encased in stone.

In the work of Marcel Breuer, the senses are kneaded — all of them.

In his use of materials and structural methods, he is straightforward — honest expression, always. And the emotions which emerge are every bit as important (every bit as much architecture) as that which elicits them.

A testament to all this, and to his continuing creative power, was completed late in 1972 — a mother house for the Franciscan nuns of Baldegg near Lucerne, Switzerland.

The quadrangular cluster is set in a sweep of apple trees on rolling Swiss terrain. A mist of mountains, like something the pointillist Seurat might have painted, ranges in the distance.

Lake Baldegg, alternately mist and mirror, is close by. So are old farmhouses. You get the feeling — ever a good test of architecture — that the new structure is not merely in its surroundings, but of them.

This of-ness, if you will, works something like this.

First, its components. A church, seating 200, and a library. Nuns' living quarters, and spaces for teaching. Communal rooms for living, dining — and kitchens. Offices, service facilities, garages. With the cadence of a medieval chant, the components converge.

The wings of the building assume the shape of an H, with yet another wing perpendicular to the H's connecting element. This composes four courtyards — one for communal meetings, one for individual meditation, another for relaxed conversation, and another for a garden.

Each court is surrounded by the building on three sides. The fourth side is open cloister space with supports of rough granite — like the spaces, tactile, made for running your fingers over. The supports give way to the space, and the terrain.

The inside and outside trek together. Messages fly between them. Rough old stones speak to raw concrete. Sun speaks to shadow. Well-tended courts speak to the nearby hills. There is the image of St. Francis speaking to the birds. And the question, "Is it not possible that the birds were speaking to him?"

I guess it is this of-ness, the sense of things converging, which makes this work so compelling.

Within the sanctuary of the mother house, timeless and temporal concerns of mankind come into interaction. Three (and more) dimensions take hold.

Deep diagonal beams of concrete span the space. Definition.

Heavy walls of granite receive their weight. Affirmation.

Expanses of clerestory glass between the roof slab and the walls receive the light, eliminating the sense of being locked in, revealing (in Breuer's words) "the presense of a place of special dedication."

Behind the simple altar, gold-leaf tiles encrust a wall. Its only embellishment is that which natural light throws there. It is as though the tiles exist only to receive it. Innocence.

Breuer, working in concert with architect Robert Gatje (his long-time associate) and with Beat von Segresser (who coordinated the project locally), has once again shown us the power of presence in a world whose buildings too often rely on pretension.

Sublimating itself in its surroundings, the mother house evokes a sense of the very old and the very new. Of the very sacred, but also of the very secular.

"Consider the lillies of the field . . ." Same thing. Or St. Francis's birds.

Coming away from Baldegg, you sort of wonder why they had to put all that glass under the chapel beams. It would have been the perfect place for them to fly in and out of.

OF GOD AND MAN

The Why? Of Life Is An Old Question

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The hardest letters to answer are those that ask, WHY?

Why did God let my child (or mate, or parent) die? Why is a devout, kind-hearted person stricken with cancer, while a wicked, self-centered person sails blithely through life?

There is no simple, glib, all-satisfying answer to The Great Why.

But a few observations can be made about it:

It is not, as many who ask it seem to think, a newly discovered question. You will find it raised, in poignant form, in the Biblical book of Job, written thousands of years ago. It also appears in many of the ancient Hebrew Psalms.

The New Testament offers no promise to anyone that he can buy safe passage through the troubles of life by going to church and "being good." On the contrary, Jesus warned his followers repeatedly they would have to pay a very heavy price for fidelity to his way.

And they did. The men and women who insisted on telling the world about Jesus were tortured, beheaded, burned at the stake and fed to lions.

The New Testament offers three consolations to those who suffer pain or loss.

The first and greatest is the promise that the inequities of this life will be rectified in a future state.

Pie in the sky? Perhaps. Certainly, no one living can prove the promise true. On the other hand, no one has ever proved it untrue. If there is a God of love, it is hard to believe He would be so cruel as to let millions of people live and die, through countless generations, sustained by a groundless hope in a false promise that was made in His name.

The second Biblical consolation is that suffering need not be interpreted as something which God inflicts deliberately upon a particular individual.

Finally, there is the consolation of prayer. Christian experience attests that prayer sometimes leads to what seem like miraculous remissions of imminent disaster. But it also affirms that such incidents are relatively rare. Most of the time, the "pay-off" of prayer is not getting what you ask, but getting something far more precious: a sense of the presence of God, and the knowledge that His love enfolds and sustains us even —in fact, especially —in the blackest hours of life. It is this discovery that has brought many a hardheaded realist to believe that accepted suffering can be one of the greatest blessings of human existence.

Novato, A Hotbed For Youth Baseball

By LEW CODDINGTON

According to the Americana of baseball lore, handed down from father to toddling son, the national game began back before the Civil War in a pasture in Otsego County, New York.

It is altogether fitting, then, that the game should survive and thrive today in what was formerly pasture land in Marin County, California.

It hardly matters that historians, in their [illegible] objectivity, have destroyed the myth of the Cooperstown origins of baseball. There is something about the spirit of the game that requires that four bases be laid out in a meadow on a sunny summer afternoon. Nowhere does that spirit exist more strongly than in Novato.

Novato is a town of some 30,000 souls. It is no larger and no more famous, except as the home of Hamilton Air Force Base, than scores of towns and cities across the nation. Yet when it comes to baseball, something separates Novato from those other communities.

NOVATO SUPPORTS two high school, American Legion, Babe Ruth and Joe DiMaggio programs; a broad network of Little Leagues; and a semi-professional team. It once had Colt and Pony leagues as well.

It has sent four of its sons into professional baseball, and two of them have come close to the major leagues.

Novato's youth baseball program, it seems, began almost as soon as the town had 19 male citizens —enough for two teams and an umpire. It grew as the town did, starting with Little League and adding the older leagues as the kids who would play in them grew older. And many of the boys' parents began moving from one league to another in coaching and administrative positions, following their sons' progress.

Among those hundreds, several stand out.

ONE IS MANUEL E. (Babe) Silva, founder of the Little League program and once the mayor of the town. (That alone is an indicator of the character of Novato. Joe DiMaggio was admired, and Lefty O'Doul beloved, but neither was ever mayor of San Francisco.)

Silva organized Little League in the fall of 1952, when Novato was a comparative village of 9,000. There were four teams, two of them from Hamilton Air Force Base, containing 15 players each.

Today, there are three leagues totaling 38 teams and an estimated 588 players (including minor leagues), and Silva has acquired almost legendary status as "the grandfather of Little League in Novato," though he hasn't been associated with the program the past two years.

"THE IMPORTANT job then was to be player agent, or 'czar,' like Judge Landis in the big leagues," said Silva, now 65. "I'd control the distribution of players, and if one team got too strong maybe I'd move a player to another roster to equalize the teams."

"Most of the fellas who managed the teams were very good with kids," Silva went on. "Every once in a while there was a manager who only wanted to win. We finally put it in the bylaws that each team had 15 ballplayers, and the six who didn't start had to play at least two innings. That rule is still in existence, and I think it's a good one."

Silva was elected to the Novato City Council in 1960, was mayor from 1962-64, and returned to the council in 1966-70, "but I never gave up baseball. I always said I'd stay with Little League. I always enjoyed working with the kids. There's a lot of psychology involved."

Less psychology was needed to pry cheers and funds from the town's other citizens. "We always got good backing form the community," he said. "The support is much stronger than in many communities with bigger populations."

IN THE MIDDLE 1950s, people began to pour into the Novato area, resulting in its incorporation in 1960. As the newly arrived young couples brought their children, and the children already there grew up, new programs were called for.

Pony and Colt leagues, two of the swarm of youth baseball programs flourishing across the nation, were brought to Novato in the early 1960s but went through financial and other troubles. Eventually these were replaced by the Babe Ruth and American Legion programs.

Gene Ferretti, who ironically had never played organized baseball although he was a softball player, talked Novato American Legion Post 540 into forming a team in 1965, after watching a similar team live and die in San Rafael.

FERRETTI HAS been on the board of directors of District 5, the larger organization to which the Novato team is affiliated, for two years. He has many duties similar to those of Silva — though he doesn't go switching players around. He insures eligibility and otherwise helps organize things.

Shortly afterward, in 1968, the one-year-old Joe DiMaggio program entered Novato.

Strong in California, DiMaggio ball caters to the same high school and recentgraduate age bracket that American Legion ball does, but the potential conflict is minimized because there appear to be more than enough good players to go around.

THE 10-TEAM DiMaggio league has two teams in Novato, and league president Gary Hughes resides in the town. Hughes also scouts for the New York Yankees, was recently named baseball coach at Sonoma State College, and for years was an important figure on the

A New Kind Of College Is Born In Marin

By FRANK FARRARA

A handful of students and staff members will set out this fall to establish a small, private, independent college in an era when the survival of small colleges is shaky.

It will be the start of World College West, ambitiously described by its founders as "a prototype for the independent liberal arts college of the future."

Richard M. Gray of Tiburon, spokesman for the college, explained the other day, "There's no reason for just another college."

The emphasis at World College West will be "on learning that the business of the world and the world of business are a part of life," he said.

STUDENTS WILL learn through work-study, "by doing and thinking, doing and reading, doing and discussing," and through intercultural experience, including at least six months in another culture, Gray said.

The college will open Sept. 17 in temporary quarters, not yet located, "somewhere between San Rafael and Petaluma," with a staff of six, and 12 to 20 students, he said.

Ultimately, the college is to be on a 200-acre campus, rolling tree-studded hills, four miles north of Novato overlooking San Antonio Creek, and serve 600 students by 1980. The total cost has been estimated at $6,200,000.

PLANS ARE TO have the first stage, a community center, resource center and a "living-learning" complex to accommodate 40 students, open by January, 1975.

Gray, 49, a former campus pastor at Portland State University, Ore. and former creative director with N. W. Ayer and Son Inc., a national advertising firm, said the college is seeking funding from individuals "who believe in small, self-financed colleges" and foundations.

Small colleges have produced a disproportionate number of leaders and permit an interchange between faculty and students, lacking in the large universities, but are in jeopardy because of rising costs, Gray said. The goal at World College West is to achieve operational self-support, he said.

THE COLLEGE IS seeking students who are "reasonable adventurers," self-motivated and "mature enough for a learning, living, working situation," he said. "We are not looking for experience collectors," but for those "who want to help build a college."

Students in the larger universities complain that they "don't know what's going on," and "they don't have a chance to make an impact," Gray said.

"I think students today lack a sense of significance," he said.

At World College West, students and faculty "will get together" and living, learning and doing will be related together, he said.

THE IDEA FOR the college "crystallized" within the past two years and the college was incorporated in December, 1971, Gray said.

The site on the Veronda ranch was picked after an 18 month search in Marin because it was large enough, 200 acres, and could be developed as "an ecological model," Gray said.

Five and a half-acres of the site will be developed and the remainder preserved, with vineyards and food-growing areas tended by students.

Tuition will be $1,500 "with room and board about the same again," with the "hope that the student, (through work-study programs) earns two-thirds of what he spends," Gray said.

STUDENTS WILL work at both on-campus and off-campus jobs, under a schedule, which would permit three days of work and three days of study, a six-day week. "Students working up to 25 hours a week do as well or better than those not working at all," Gray declared.

RICHARD M. GRAY
College spokesman

Classroom theory will be integrated with "practical, paid-for work experience as part of the student's college program," he said.

Gray stressed the need for intercultural understanding, one of the college's goals, in the coming decades.

"It became evident in America in the 1960s — the decade of encounter with an awakened black minority at home and a resolute Southeast Asian peasant population abroad — that we no longer live in a world of one color — or one culture."

KNOWLEDGE OF our culture or subculture alone will be no longer be enough, he said. Education must, therefore, focus ". . . not just on cultures of other times but on cultures of other places."

With the aim of liberating men and women "from their provinciality and prejudice," the college will offer students during their sophomore or junior year experience in another culture, with Mexico and Micronesia being considered in the 1975-76 school year.

World College West will be a residential campus with students living in what are described as "living-learning units," each housing 40 students.

EACH STUDENT will have his own room, two students will share a bathroom, every four students will share a small lounge and every 10 students will share a kitchen and dining area. Each building will have its own garden and courtyard.

The themes for the opening year will be communication, and the human condition, Gray said.

"Under Human Condition, we will look at where we are in terms of the past and present, and cover history, sociology, anthropology," he said.

Communication will cover thinking clearly and purposefully, reading critically, writing precisely, speaking persuasively, listening attentively and "even typing well," Gray said.

THE COLLEGE will operate on a 40-week calendar of four terms, a departure from the usual college year.

The three principal officers of the college will be West, spokesman, David H. Newhall, coordinator of studies, and Charles F. Greene, coordinator of resources.

Gray holds a Doctor's Degree in higher education from the University of California at Berkeley. After 16 years with N. W. Ayer, he earned a Master of Divinity Degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo and served for seven years in campus ministry. He is a member of the board of Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Ore., and a member of the seminary board. He is a graduate of Bucknell University in Pennsylvania.

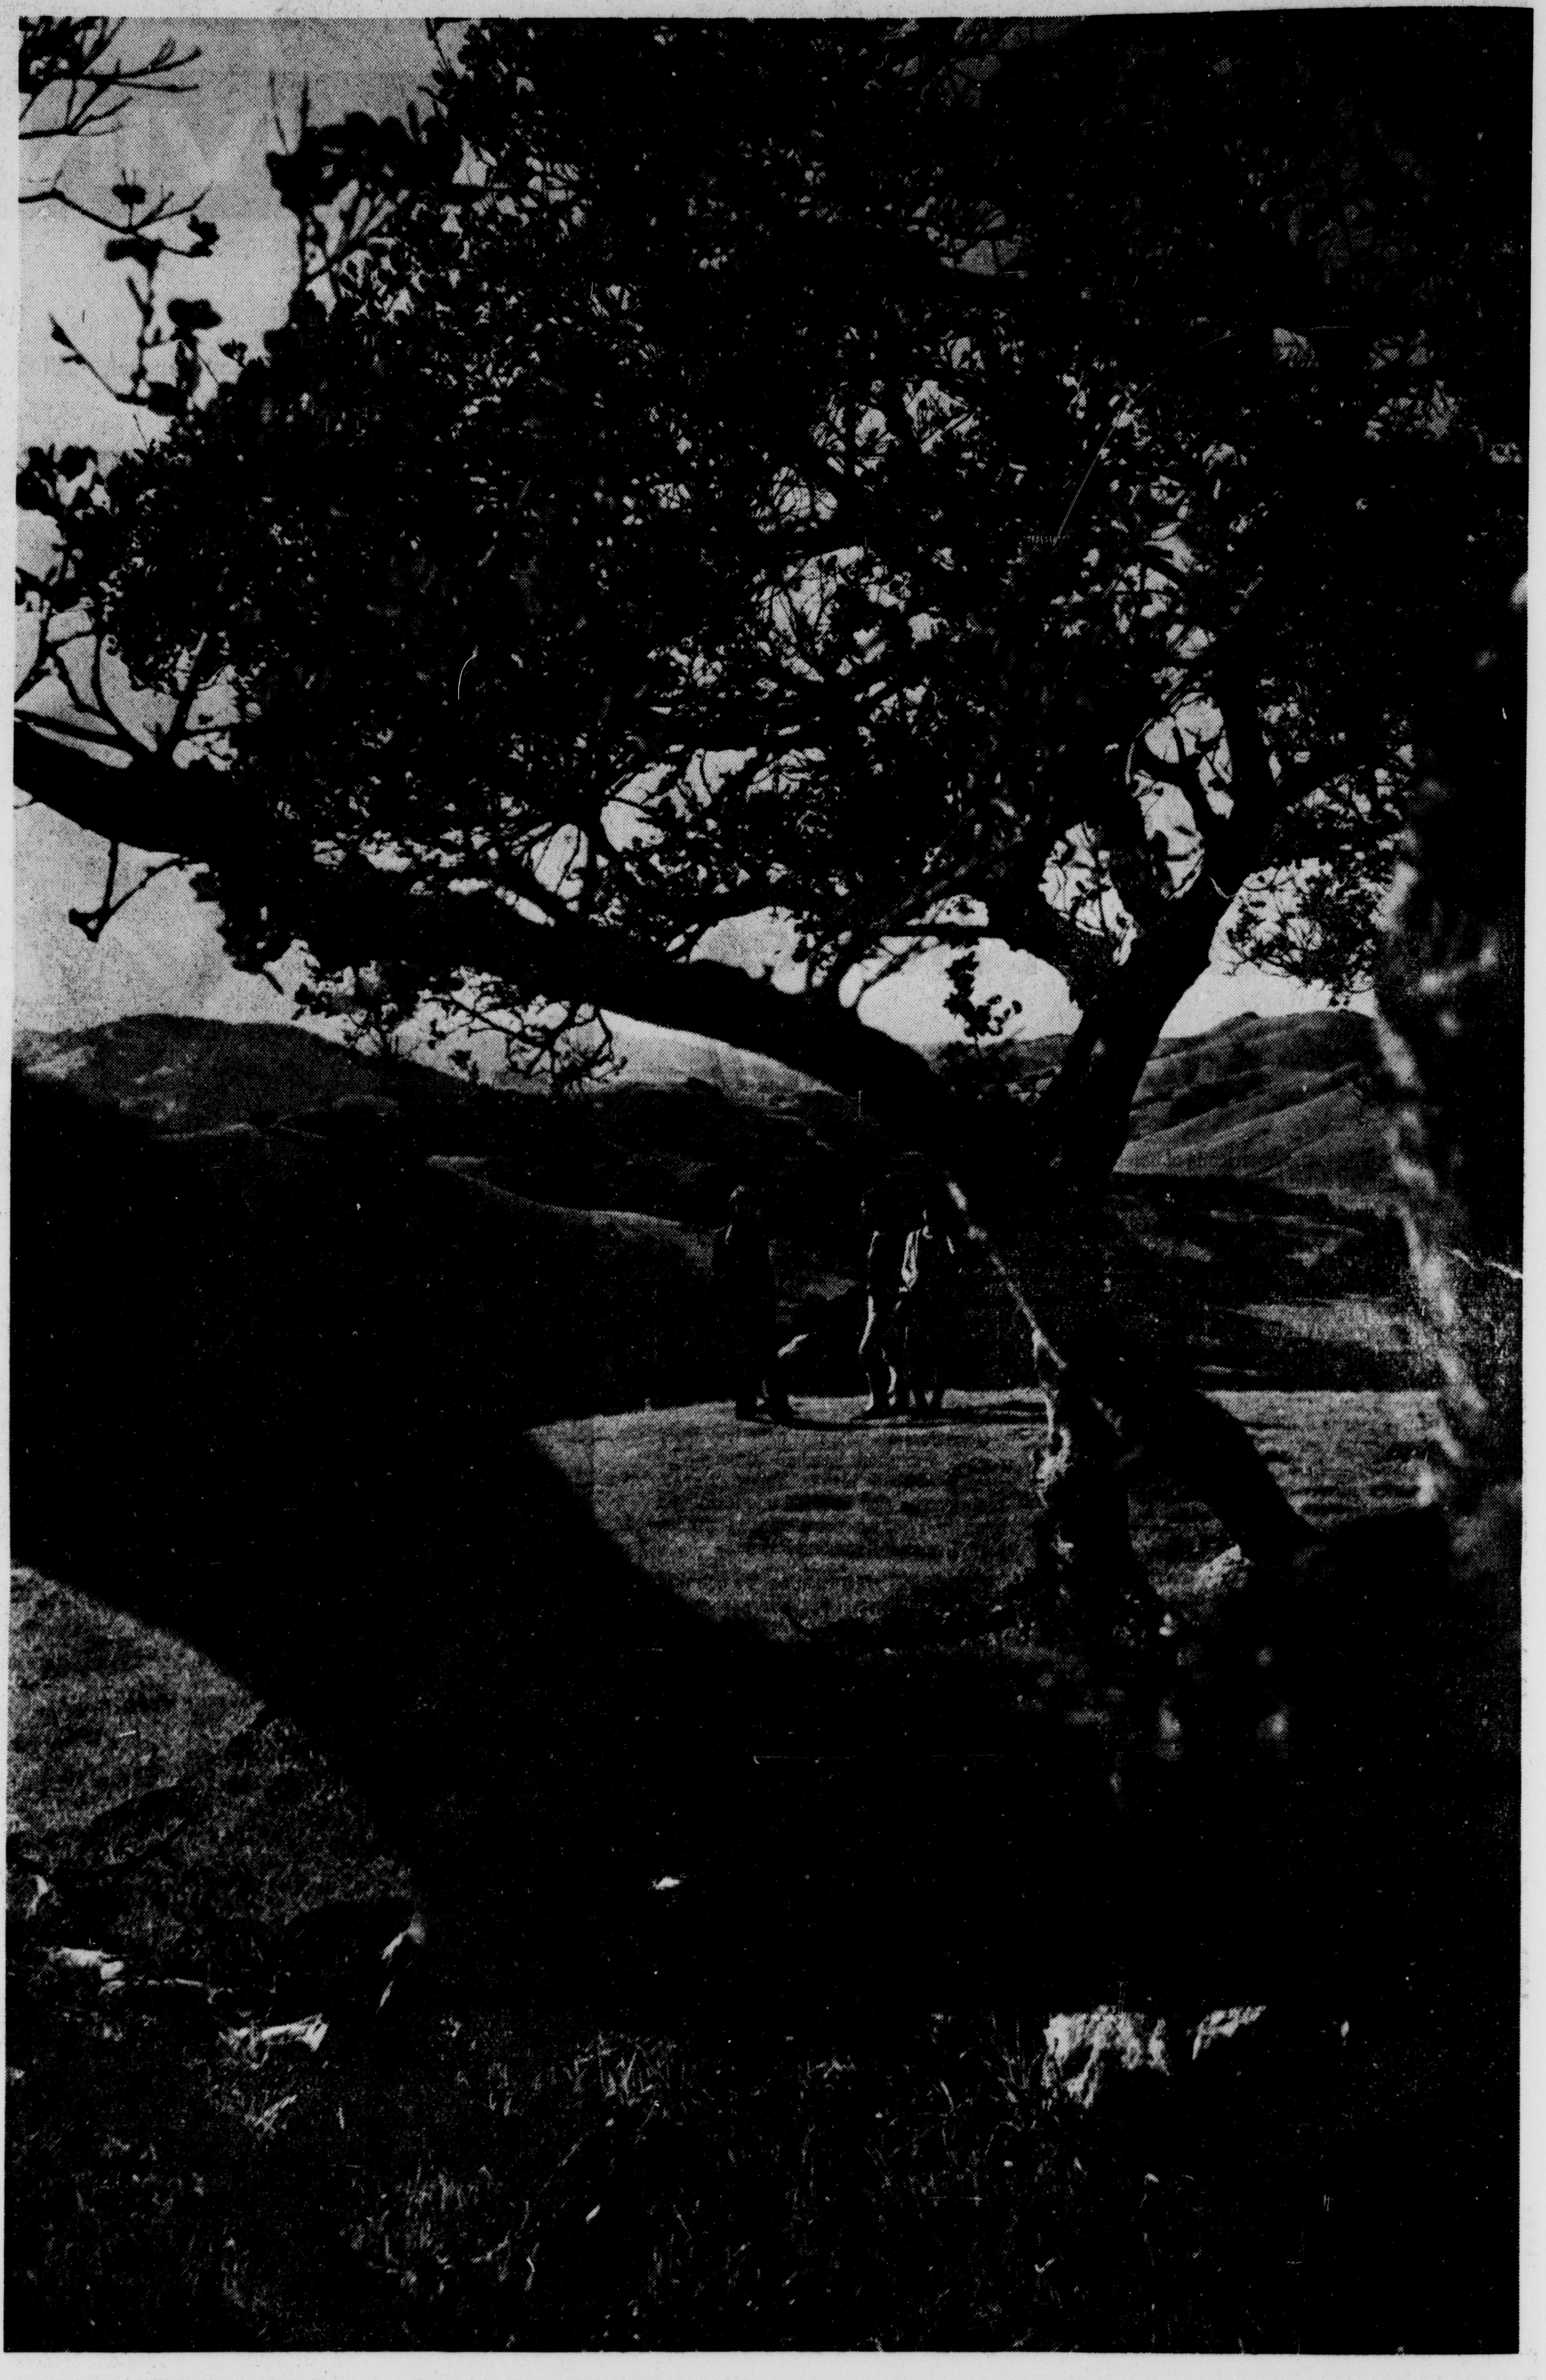
NEWHALL, 55, holds a doctorate in philosophy from Princeton University, and has been a professor of philosophy and department chairman at Portland State University from 1960-72. He formerly was an associate professor at Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa. He graduated from Pomona College and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Greene, 27, holds a Bachelor's Degree in political science from the University of Pittsburgh and a Master's Degree in business administration from Harvard University. He worked in the VISTA program in Long Island, N.Y., and was an administrative intern at Clark College, Atlanta, Ga.

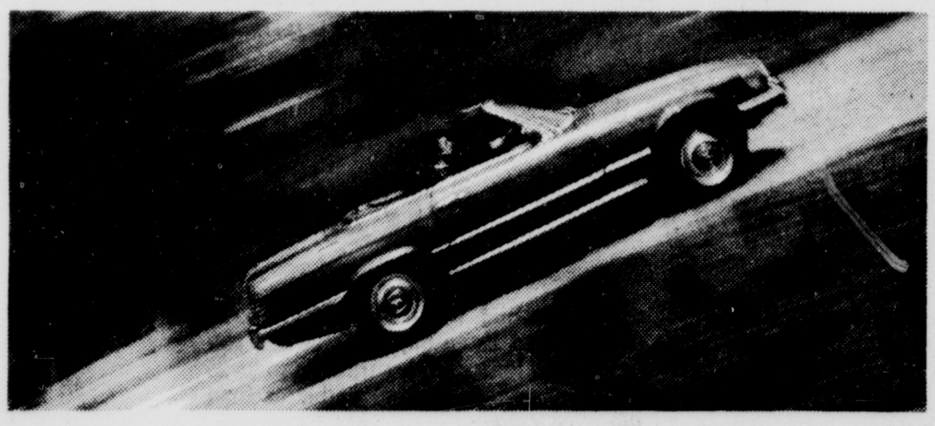
He will head the work-study program, aimed at placing students in jobs throughout the Bay Area.

Members of the college board are Brydon S. Greene, executive vice president, N.W. Ayer and Son Inc., San Francisco; Rev. Charles C. Griffin, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, San Rafael; Paul Heist, chairman, division of higher education, University of California at Berkeley; Harold Hodgkinson, president, American Assn. for Higher Education; William P. Murray Jr., president, Bank of Marin; Gordon L. Ness, of Atherton; Hall Templeton, president, Templeton Foundation, Portland, Ore.; and Rev. John S. Thornton, rector, St. Stephen's Parish, Belvedere.

"We are looking for reasonable adventurers and experience collectors who want to help build a college," say the founders of the new World College West, scheduled to open in Marin in September.



THE ROLLING HILLS with stands of spreading oaks about four miles north of Novato, west of Highway 101 overlooking San Antonio Creek, create a serene atmosphere. The scenic area has been chosen by World College West, a newly founded private college, for a campus, with plans to preserve most of the 200-acre area as an "ecological and recreational preserve." The college will open on a temporary site in September, but the first stage of the new campus is expected to be completed and open by January, 1975.



Road & Track called the 450SL "one of the ten best cars in the world."

Phil Hill called it "the best sports car." Mercedes-Benz agrees.

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience — maybe for the first time in your life — what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

Help For The Students In Their Search For Sense Of Significance

New Liberal Arts College Will Stress The Work-Study Approach To Education

share a kitchen and dining area. Each building will have its own garden and courtyard.

The themes for the opening year will be communication, and the human condition, Gray said.

"Under Human Condition, we will look at where we are in terms of the past and present, and cover history, sociology, anthropology," he said.

Communication will cover thinking clearly and purposefully, reading critically, writing precisely, speaking persuasively, listening attentively and "even typing well," Gray said.

The three principal officers of the college will be West, spokesman, David H. Newhall, coordinator of studies, and Charles F. Greene, coordinator of resources.

Gray holds a Doctor's Degree in higher education from the University of California at Berkeley. After 16 years with N. W. Ayer, he earned a Master of Divinity Degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo and served for seven years in campus ministry. He is a member of the board of Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Ore., and a member of the seminary board. He is a graduate of Bucknell University in Pennsylvania.

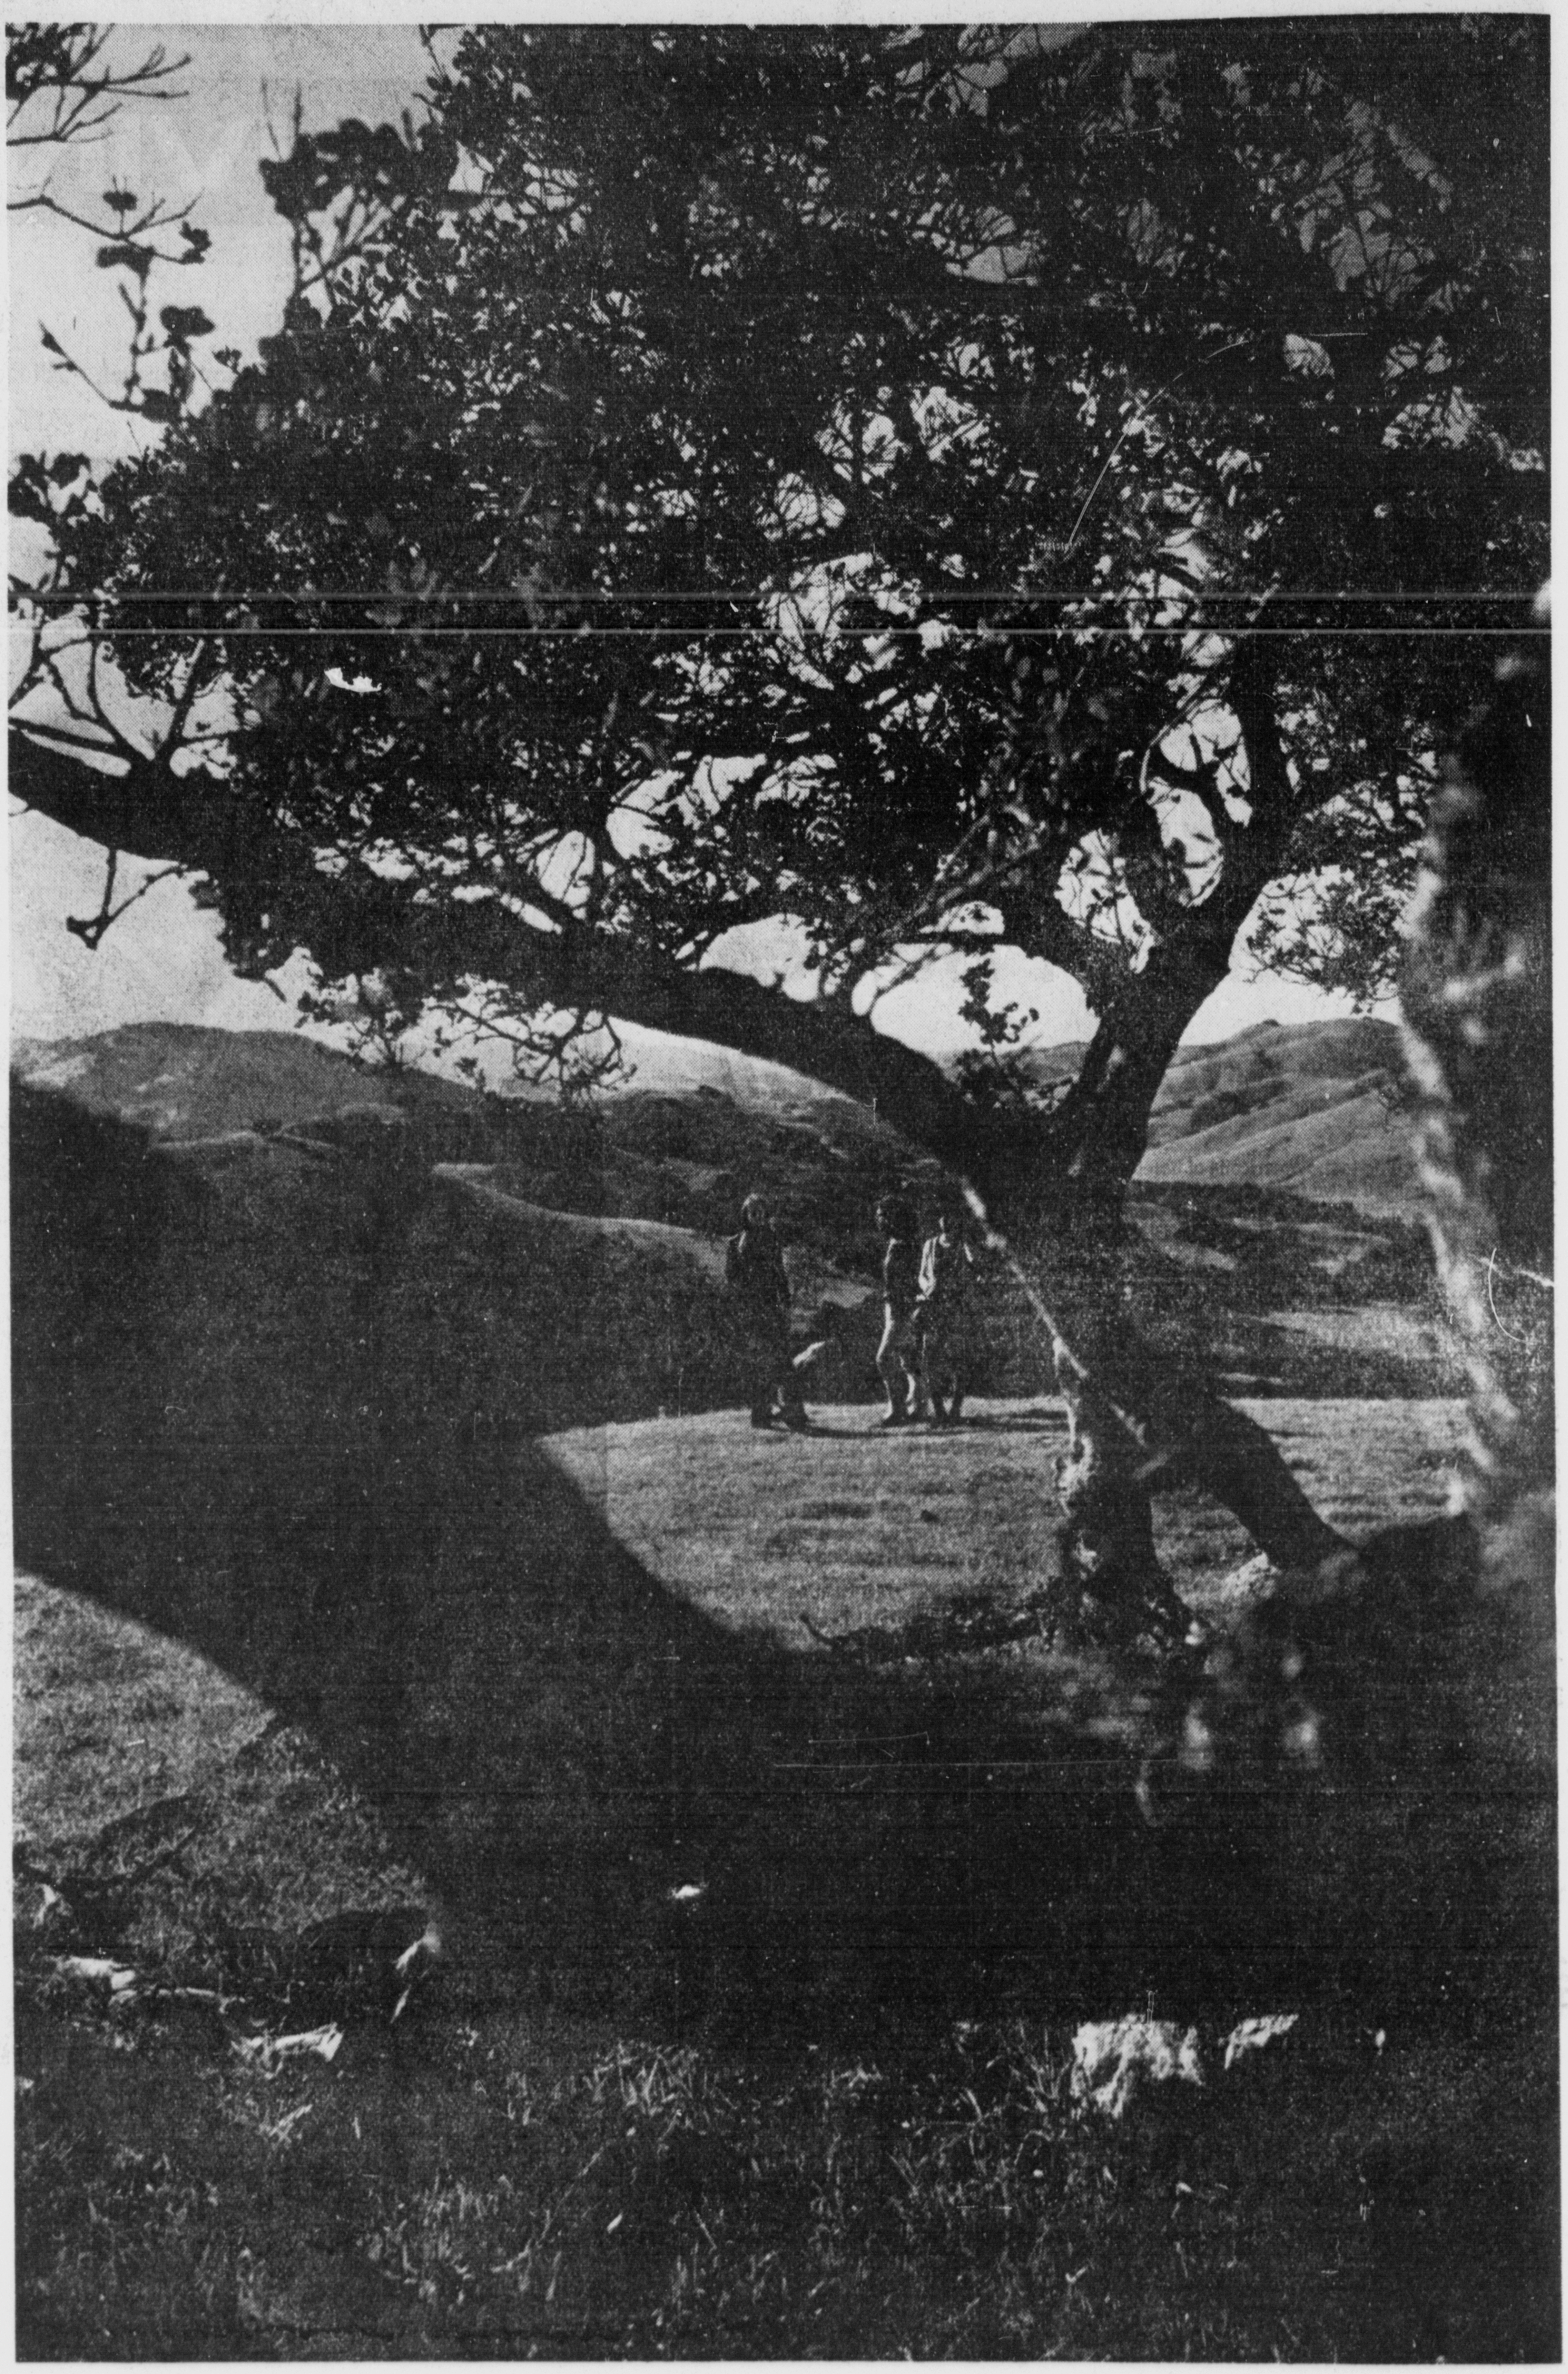
NEWHALL, 55, holds a doctorate in philosophy from Princeton University, and has been a professor of philosophy and department chairman at Portland State University from 1960-72. He formerly was an associate professor at Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa. He graduated from Pomona College and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Greene, 27, holds a Bachelor's Degree in political science from the University of Pittsburgh and a Master's Degree in business administration from Harvard University. He worked in the VISTA program in Long Island, N.Y., and was an administrative intern at Clark College, Atlanta, Ga.

He will head the work-study program, aimed at placing students in jobs throughout the Bay Area.

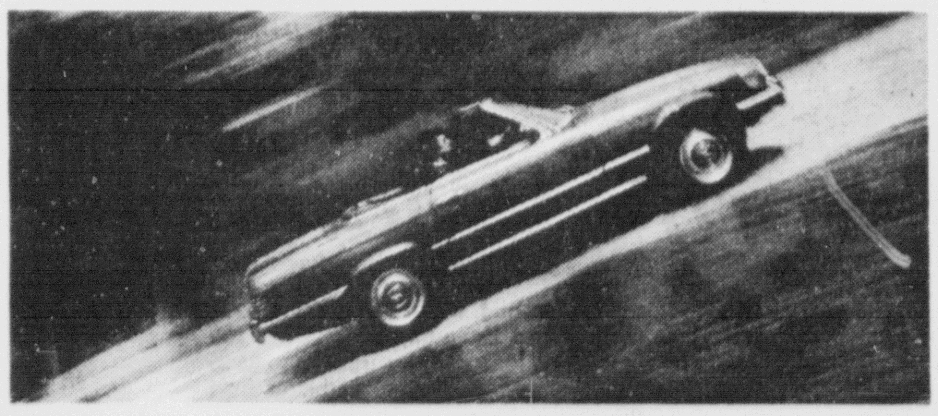
Members of the college board are Brydon S. Greene, executive vice president, N.W. Ayer and Son Inc., San Francisco; Rev. Charles C. Griffin, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, San Rafael; Paul Heist, chairman, division of higher education, University of California at Berkeley; Harold Hodgkinson, president, American Assn. for Higher Education; William P. Murray Jr., president, Bank of Marin; Gordon L. Ness, of Atherton; Hall Templeton, president, Templeton Foundation, Portland, Ore.; and Rev. John S. Thornton, rector, St. Stephen's Parish, Belvedere.

"We are looking for reasonable adventurers and experience collectors who want to help build a college," say the founders of the new World College West, scheduled to open in Marin in September.



THE ROLLING HILLS with stands of spreading oaks about four miles north of Novato, west of Highway 101 overlooking San Antonio Creek, create a serene atmosphere. The scenic area has been chosen by World College West, a newly founded private college, for a campus, with plans to preserve most of the 200-acre area as an "ecological and recreational preserve." The college will open on a temporary site in September, but the first stage of the new campus is expected to be completed and open by January, 1975.

Road & Track called the 450SL "one of the ten best cars in the world."



Phil Hill called it "the best sports car."
Mercedes-Benz agrees.

Now from the engineers of Mercedes-Benz comes a brilliant advance. A car which, in an incredibly short time, has earned the almost extravagant praise of the men who know, drive and live sports cars. Men like Phil Hill, the only American ever to win the World Championship of Driving.

The 450SL is powered by a fuel-injected, overhead-cam V-8 engine. All four wheels are independently suspended. All four wheels have fade-resistant disc brakes. All features you'd expect in a high-performance sporting machine. But consider the following: In the 450SL, air conditioning, power-assisted steering and 3-speed automatic transmission are standard. Hardly the usual features you're given in a sports car.

The 450SL is the product of truly enlightened engineering. Mercedes-Benz engineering. Test drive it and you'll experience — maybe for the first time in your life — what a sports machine should be. Call us. It's surprisingly easy to arrange.

Students will live in clusters of living units, identified as "living-learning" centers, while a community center and recreation center and resource center, including library and a small general store, will form the backbone of the campus. Food production areas and vineyards will be on the flanks of the area, with development to cover only five and a half acres of the site.

THE BATBOY IS A GIRL when the Shamrocks of Novato's Babe Ruth League, national division, are at bat. And Jenny Rucker performs her duties with dispatch. She is properly uniformed for the assignment. And she keeps a neat bat-rack, as is evident in the photograph at right.

THE ACTION IS FAST and furious when Novato's youthful baseball nines take to the diamond. Here the baserunner is Bruce Townsend of the Shamrocks and the fielder Barry Leslie of the Lions. The Shamrocks defeated the Lions 8-2 in the playoff game for the Babe Ruth League's national division title, and then went on to win the city title by outlasting the Machinists in a best two-out-of-three-game championships series. Just last year the Roy Coples-managed Shamrocks had finished in last place.

MARIN LIVING

Youth Baseball Is An Important Part Of Community Life For Novato Citizens

With an upper age limit of 19, Legion ball filled a gap that was left even after Babe Ruth ball had been born the previous year. Ferretti was among the founders of that league for 13 to 15-year-olds as well, but a key man in that organization's history is Ed Salmina.

One of the reasons Babe Ruth ball replaced the Pony League, Salmina explained, is that Pony games were supposed to be played on a smaller diamond, thus relegating it to all-dirt junior high fields.

"We always got good backing from the community," says Babe Silva, the "grandfather" of Little League baseball in Novato. "The support is much stronger than in many communities with bigger populations."

LIKE FERRETTI, Salmina now may call himself an executive, since he sits on the District 9 Babe Ruth board of directors. Bill Dillon previously sat there as well, and if the name is familiar, it's because his son Russ is now pitching professionally.

Since 1961, and full-time since 1968, Salmina has been the one-man sports staff of the weekly Novato Advance, which has contributed to baseball's popularity by running lengthy stories about the youth programs.

Salmina also contributed in another way, helping in 1962 to found the semi-pro Novato Knickerbockers, now managed by Salmina and sponsored by C. L. Moore Insurance.

"Actually, semi-pro is a misnomer," he explains, since the players aren't paid. But it's a step above the youth program and embraces players of any age.

GIVEN AN atmosphere of solicitous adults with their carefully-honed organizations, it was almost inevitable that Novato should produce some exceptional baseball players.

John Dolinsek is an example. It's not even necessary to use his name — just ask how "the hitter" is doing, and somebody is bound to tell you his is hovering around .300 for Denver in the Class AAA American Asociation, just one step away from the big leagues. Whether he will be able to crack the tough Houston outfield of Bob Watson, Cesar Cedeno, Jim Wynn and Tommie Agee is another matter, and at 25, Dolinsek is beginning to worry.

Then there is Russ Dillon, 22, a left-handed pitcher whose fastball seems to have been dipped in fire. He advanced to triple-A level in the Atlanta Braves' chain last year, but this year dropped back to double-A in Savannah, Ga., and is having trouble.

TOM THOMAS, a spry 23, is lurking around .300 in Class A ball in Salem, Va., and hoping the Pittsburgh Pirates will promote him.

The fourth pro was Tom Corder, now 24, who left the Los Angeles Dodgers' chain last year and returned to Novato High as assistant baseball coach, hopeful that his presence would help remedy the one galling omission which would complete the picture of Novato baseball. Despite all that talent, Novato High School somehow has won only one Marin County Athletic League title in the 14 years of the league's existence. (Alas, Corder brought no Dodger luck with him — Novato tied for second in 1973.)

"The purpose of the program is recreation," says Ed Salmina, a key figure in Novato's Babe Ruth League. Nevertheless, the North Marin city's youth baseball produced has produced some standout professionals, and some team championships.

If championships haven't come to the high school, however, they certainly have come to the youth teams.

IN 1965, FOR example, the Little Leaguers under manager Sheridan Moats and coach Ferretti won the Northern California title and advanced to Portland, Ore. for the Western Regionals. The team included pitcher Dave Judnick, one of the best ever to play in Novato, but the tournament star was Stan Ericksen, who pitched a no-hitter for a 1-0 victory over Covina and the unofficial California championship after Novato was knocked out of the running for a World Series berth by a 3-0 loss to South Mountain, Ariz.

In 1967, the Babe Ruth team, with Russ Dillon pitching and Bill Dillon managing, knocked off six straight victories to win the Pacific Southwest title and move on to the World Series in Fairbanks, Alaska. Fairbanks was a disaster area, due to storms, and also because Novato lost to New Orleans, 17-3, and Klamath Falls, Ore., 3-2, and was eliminated. Coaches were Jack Holsclaw and Bob Sisemore.

Babe Ruth has two post-season tournaments, one for 14 and 15-year-olds and one for 13-year-olds.

IN THE LATTER category, Novato has had state championships in 1967 (with Judnick pitching and Paul Chaffee managing) and 1971 (with Bob Simi managing). The '67 title was the highest then available, but the '71 team went on to the Western Regionals and finished third.

The ubiquitous Dillon also was on the Annex Motors Joe DiMaggio team which went to the state finals in 1968, its first year of existence, before losing.

In the last analysis, as Salmina points out, "the purpose of the program is recreation," not the production of major leaguers or the winning of championships. Countless hundreds of men — more than any one newspaper article could possibly mention — have made their contributions.

Some of them include the late Ed Hamann, for whom the Little League field on Olive Street is named; Frank Pinheiro, who leased his land at Cherry and Armstrong streets for a field for $1 a year until a freeway was mapped through the area; Jerry Matheson and Harold Moore, among the early Babe Ruth conspirators with Salmina and Ferretti.

And others, countless others. They know who they are, and they are proud of it.

local high school scene as coach at Marin Catholic.

With an upper age limit of 19, Legion ball filled a gap that was left even after Babe Ruth ball had been born the previous year. Ferretti was among the founders of that league for 13 to 15-year-olds as well, but a key man in that organization's history is Ed Salmina.

One of the reasons Babe Ruth ball replaced the Pony League, Salmina explained, is that Pony games were supposed to be played on a smaller diamond, thus relegating it to all-dirt junior high fields.

"We always got good backing from the community," says Babe Silva, the "grandfather" of Little League baseball in Novato. "The support is much stronger than in many communities with bigger populations."

LIKE FERRETTI, Salmina now may call himself an executive, since he sits on the District 9 Babe Ruth board of directors. Bill Dillon previously sat there as well, and if the name is familiar, it's because his son Russ is now pitching professionally.

Since 1961, and full-time since 1968, Salmina has been the one-man sports staff of the weekly Novato Advance, which has contributed to baseball's popularity by running lengthy stories about the youth programs.

Salmina also contributed in another way, helping in 1962 to found the semi-pro Novato Knickerbockers, now managed by Salmina and sponsored by C. L. Moore Insurance.

"Actually, semi-pro is a misnomer," he explains, since the players aren't paid. But it's a step above the youth program and embraces players of any age.

"The purpose of the program is recreation," says Ed Salmina, a key figure in Novato's Babe Ruth League. Nevertheless, the North Marin city's youth baseball produced has produced some standout professionals, and some team championships.

GIVEN AN atmosphere of solicitous adults with their carefully-honed organizations, it was almost inevitable that Novato should produce some exceptional baseball players.

John Dolinsek is an example. It's not even necessary to use his name — just ask how "the hitter" is doing, and somebody is bound to tell you his is hovering around .300 for Denver in the Class AAA American Asociation, just one step away from the big leagues. Whether he will be able to crack the tough Houston outfield of Bob Watson, Cesar Cedeno, Jim Wynn and Tommie Agee is another matter, and at 25, Dolinsek is beginning to worry.

Then there is Russ Dillon, 22, a left-handed pitcher whose fastball seems to have been dipped in fire. He advanced to triple-A level in the Atlanta Braves' chain last year, but this year dropped back to double-A in Savannah, Ga., and is having trouble.

TOM THOMAS, a spry 23, is lurking around .300 in Class A ball in Salem, Va., and hoping the Pittsburgh Pirates will promote him.

The fourth pro was Tom Corder, now 24, who left the Los Angeles Dodgers' chain last year and returned to Novato High as assistant baseball coach, hopeful that his presence would help remedy the one galling omission which would complete the picture of Novato baseball. Despite all that talent, Novato High School somehow has won only one Marin County Athletic League title in the 14 years of the league's existence. (Alas, Corder brought no Dodger luck with him — Novato tied for second in 1973.)

If championships haven't come to the high school, however, they certainly have come to the youth teams.

IN 1965, FOR example, the Little Leaguers under manager Sheridan Moats and coach Ferretti won the Northern California title and advanced to Portland, Ore. for the Western Regionals. The team included pitcher Dave Judnick, one of the best ever to play in Novato, but the tournament star was Stan Ericksen, who pitched a no-hitter for a 1-0 victory over Covina and the unofficial California championship after Novato was knocked out of the running for a World Series berth by a 3-0 loss to South Mountain, Ariz.

In 1967, the Babe Ruth team, with Russ Dillon pitching and Bill Dillon managing, knocked off six straight victories to win the Pacific Southwest title and move on to the World Series in Fairbanks, Alaska. Fairbanks was a disaster area, due to storms, and also because Novato lost to New Orleans, 17-3, and Klamath Falls, Ore., 3-2, and was eliminated. Coaches were Jack Holsclaw and Bob Sisemore.

Babe Ruth has two post-season tournaments, one for 14 and 15-year-olds and one for 13-year-olds.

IN THE LATTER category, Novato has had state championships in 1967 (with Judnick pitching and Paul Chaffee managing) and 1971 (with Bob Simi managing). The '67 title was the highest then available, but the '71 team went on to the Western Regionals and finished third.

The ubiquitous Dillon also was on the Annex Motors Joe DiMaggio team which went to the state finals in 1968, its first year of existence, before losing.

In the last analysis, as Salmina points out, "the purpose of the program is recreation," not the production of major leaguers or the winning of championships. Countless hundreds of men — more than any one newspaper article could possibly mention — have made their contributions.

Some of them include the late Ed Hamann, for whom the Little League field on Olive Street is named; Frank Pinheiro, who leased his land at Cherry and Armstrong streets for a field for $1 a year until a freeway was mapped through the area; Jerry Matheson and Harold Moore, among the early Babe Ruth conspirators with Salmina and Ferretti.

And others, countless others. They know who they are, and they are proud of it.

Jo Smith, Frances Young Gallery's Unflappable Secretary

By DON KEOWN

Jo Smith works literally surrounded by artists.

And in their Greenbrae home, she, husband Robert P. Smith and their three children live in a house "with wall-to-wall paintings."

Yet Jo Smith, herself, has never done or even attempted a painting.

"I know my limitations," she smiles. "When it comes to art, I'm strictly an art fan, not an artist."

But to Marin's many artists she is something far more than that.

FOR THE PAST six years she has served as secretary of the Frances Young Gallery operated by the Marin Society of Artists on the wooded premises of the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

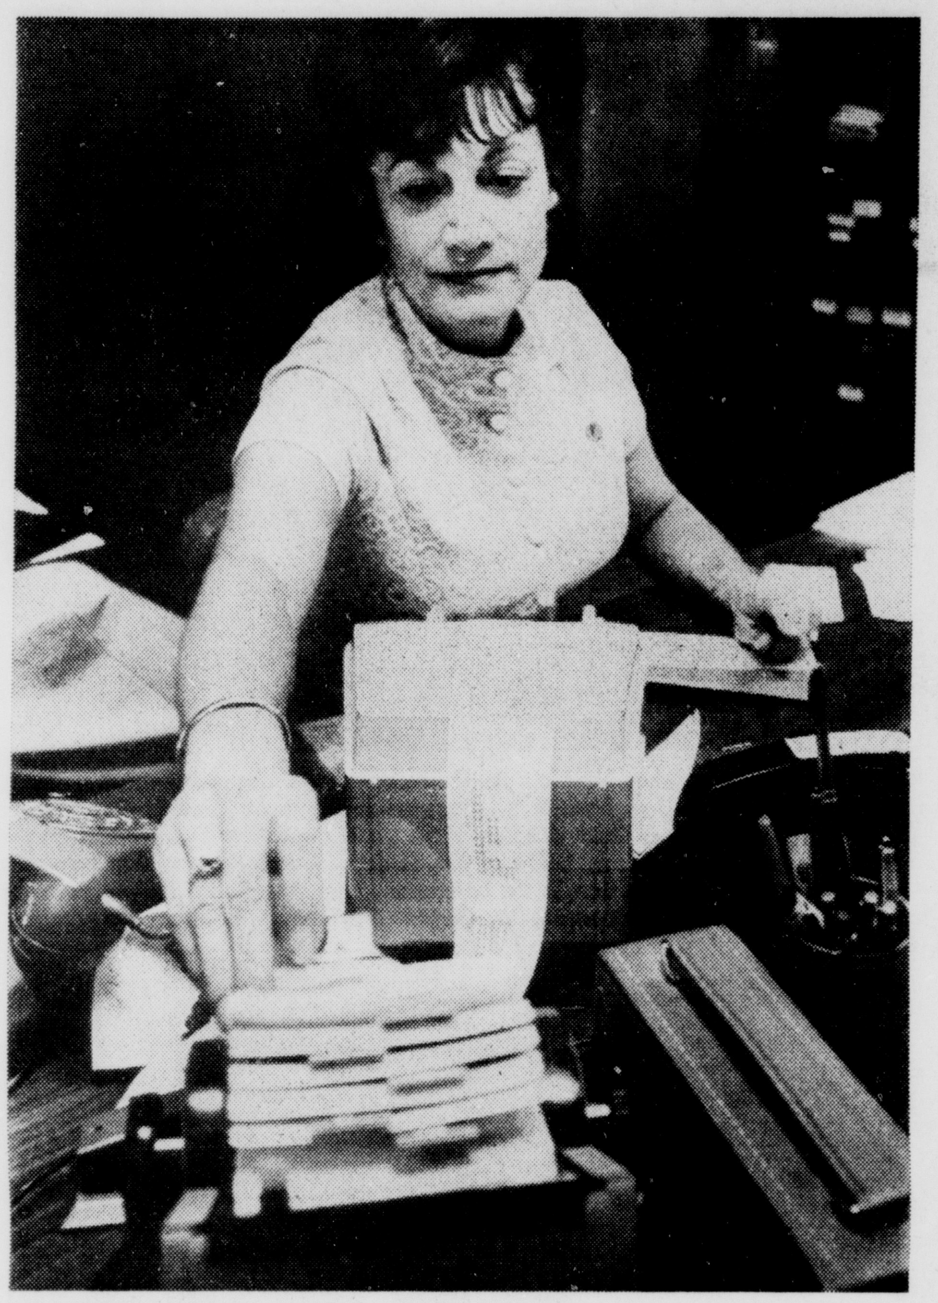
As such, she knows personally the 731 life and regular members of the Society and numbers of many of them among her close friends.

And she works four days a week, Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at her desk at the gallery in the midst of much hustle and bustle created by the coming and the going of the artists and gallery visitors.

She does the bookkeeping and prepares the monthly shows — "the really hectic time is when you are receiving."

AND PERHAPS her toughest assignment is the scheduling of the volunteer work hours required of the Society's membership. She is the Society's lone paid employee. All other effort comes from the members, who must devote two hours per month each to the Society's interests — as gallery attendants, at office work, etc. It is Mrs. Smith's job to use this fount of manpower and womanpower most effectively.

In her six years at the gallery, Jo Smith has developed a glowing admiration for the talents of Marin's artists and craftsmen.



AT HER DESK in the Frances Young Gallery of the Marin Society of Artists in the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, Jo Smith, gallery secretary, uses an adding machine as she tabulates the receipts from sales and rentals of paintings and crafts. Bookkeeping is just one aspect of the job of Mrs. Smith as the art gallery's paid employee. And in addition, she continues to devote much time to her family, and to practice her first chosen profession of model.

"I am continually amazed, even after six years, at the amount of talent involved in the gallery," she says. "It is simply unbelievable."

AND IN THOSE six years she has also deepended and sharpened her own awareness and appreciation of art.

In fact, she admits, fine art played little part in her life or her thinking prior to her association with the gallery and the Marin Society of Artists. Her background has been that of a professional model.

She was born in a small Illinois town some 20 miles north of Chicago — "just say that it was more than 40 years ago."

Upon graduating from high school, she received a scholarship to study designing at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

BUT SHE HAD already had her introduction into professional modeling, beginning at age 15. She was one of the original models for Seventeen Magazine. And after one year of college, she left Northwestern to take up modeling full-time.

She recalls how she and a girl friend won their parents' permission to travel to Florida to look for modeling jobs. There she became one of the first models employed by Burdine's, since grown into a huge department store complex.

After her return to Illinois, she was married to Robert P. Smith, a graduate forester from the University of California at Berkeley, but then in the Marine Corps and stationed in the Midwest.

WITH THE completion of his military service, Smith was anxious to get back into froestry. So the young couple moved to the West Coast. For a time Jo Smith worked for the University of California in its forestry department. And she modeled for the Dorothy Ferrier Agency in San Francisco.

She still does professional modeling from time to time.

But the event that was to point her toward another career field occurred at church on a Sunday six years ago. There she met the late Maria Kincaid, one of the Marin Society of Artists members in charge of the rental gallery at Frances Young. Mrs. Kincaid mentioned that the Society was looking for a paid employee to take over mounting responsibilities and work at the gallery, and that Mrs. Smith might well be the person for whom they were searching.

"IT WAS VERY different from anything I had ever done before," Joe Smith says. "I had no experience with art of any kind, other than my modeling. But I had always been attracted to colors, and to artistic people. And it sounded like fun."

Besides husband Robert had just gone into business for himself as a wholesale lumberman and with three children, the paycheck from the Society of Artists would come in handy.

Jo Smith applied for the gallery job, received it, and has never regretted her decision.

"Now," she says, "I think of myself as a mother and wife first, as a secretary second, and as a model only third."

SON SCOTT IS 19, daughter Carrie 15 and youngest son Colin 12. "And like their mother, none of them paints," Jo says.

But they live in a home so filled with paintings — "of every kind" — acquired by the Smiths since Jo went to work for the artists' society that their hanging must be rotated. "There simply isn't room for them all at one time," she says. "We even have them hanging in the bathroom."

MARIN LIVING

At the Marin Art and Garden Center, Mrs. Smith has witnessed a steady, consistent growth in the Society and its gallery.

"Not only has the patronage of the gallery grown considerably in six years," she says, "but the membership of the Marin Society of Artists has shot up as well."

THIS OCCURRED when the Society decided to open up its membership from the former 500 to a new figure of 700. With an additional 31 life members, this brings the current total of 731.

"I think it was a splendid thing," Jo Smith says of the increase. "It brought in lots of new people with different ideas. It gave us greater versatility."

Jo Smith says: "My job has brought a lot of fun into my life."

"I am continually amazed, even after six years, at the amount of talent involved in the gallery. It is simply unbelievable," says Jo Smith, wife, mother, model and secretary of the Frances Young Gallery in the Marin Art and Garden Center.

She remembers when a director for United Artists came into the gallery to rent paintings for the motion picture "Bullet." He asked the gallery secretary if she would like to do a spot of work as a movie extra. And so, on her day-off, she wound up driving into San Francisco to appear in a tea party scene in one of the beautiful homes of San Francisco.

"IT WAS A great experience," she says. "I would have done it for nothing."

And when actor Robert Redford visited the Marin Art and Garden Center while filming "The Candidate," Jo Smith was asked to pose for publicity shots with him.

"Copies of all those pictures now cover the walls of my daughter's room," she smiles.

This year she was invited to Hollywood by series star Peter Graves to watch the filming of a "Mission Impossible" episode.

"My job has brought a lot of fun into my life," says the Marin Society of Artists' Jo Smith. It has also brought her great personal satisfaction as she has witnessed and participated in the growth of the Society's Frances Young Gallery.

"IT WAS ONE of the funniest days I have ever spent," she says. "The head electrician asked me if I would like to take a ride around the studios and sets. I said sure, assuming a large limousine with chauffeur. My transportation proved to be a bicycle built for two, with a toolbox strapped to the front handlebars. And it was a most interesting tour!"

Mrs. Smith enjoys especially watching the changes that occur in both patrons and artists at Frances Young Gallery.

"Very often the first time a person rents a painting, he or she willl choose a still-life — perhaps a bouquet of flowers. Then the next time it might be a watercolor landscape. And then, before long, they are into impressionistic and abstract paintings."

ARTISTS, TOO, go through the same kind of evolution in their work, expanding in their colors and often moving toward the more and more abstract.

Then, very often, the pendulum will begin to swing back for patron or artists once again in the direction of the traditional and the representational.

Mrs. Smith has experienced a similar change in her own taste for art. "At first, I think I was pretty much hung up on the representational," she says. "But my involvement with these talented people and their work moved me more and more in the direction of the abstracts.

"Nevertheless, I remain a strong admirer of watercolor artists. I think it takes a tremendous amount of creativity to work in watercolors.

REVENUE FROM the rent and sale of paintings at Frances Young Gallery is about 50-50 between the two kinds of transactions, Mrs. Smith says. And very often what started out as a rental winds up becoming a sale.

"When a patron of the gallery rents a pinting for as long as a year, almost invariably he or she ends up buying it," the secretary explains. In such cases, money paid for the rental can be applied to the purchase. While the gallery often rents to businesses and industries, most rented paintings go into homes.

In recent years, craft sales and rentals have becoming increasingly important in gallery proceeds.

THE BIGGEST slice of the receipts from sales and rentals, understandbly, goes to the artists and craftsmen.

Most of the remainder goes to the Marin Art and Garden Center as the Marin Society of Artists' contribution as a member organization to the upkeep and operation of the beautiful cultural center.

The Society retains a smaller portion of the money to help meet its gallery expenses.

Mrs. Smith is especially proud of the improved lighting that the Society has installed in its gallery. "Lighting is so important to art."

IN THE FUTURE whe would like to see the Society use the gallery premises for a program of art classes for children — "my number one hope. We have been talking about it, and I think it will come about."

For the first time the Society has been conducting sketch classes with life models at the gallery on Thursday nights this year — at $1 per session.

And there is the annual auction, an important fund-raising event, in which Jo Smith is deeply involved each year.

But for the most part her job revolves around the day-to-day operations of Frances Young Gallery, open seven days a week to the public, 1 to 4 p.m., and to the once-a-month schedule of shows.

THE MARIN Society of Artists' big prestige show of the year is the annual show, held in the fall, and for which outside judges are brought in. The spring and fall rental shows are also major events.

But all the shows at Frances Young are juried affairs, offering gallery visitors a diversity of high quality art with the added attraction of its local origins. "I think our shows are getting better and better," says Jo.

Are feelings sometimes ruffled when members' work fails to qualify for a show?

"Well, artists are as human as anyone else. So naturally, they are sometimes disappointed by the jurying. They'll come up to me and say: 'Jo, I just can't understand why my painting didn't make it.'"

WHEN THIS occurs, Jo Smith has the perfect and truthful answer. "Gee, I'm not an artist. So I just wouldn't know." In that way, the secretary avoids arguments and remains a neutral.

But Jo Smith disputes the old stereotype of the artist as a difficult and temperamental person.

"In their personalities, they are very much like any other group — very diverse, and each an individual with his or her own special likes and dislikes. They aren't at all as temperamental as the public concept pictures them to be. In fact, they are a delight to work with — gifted, yet warm. And with tremendous backgrounds of awards and achievements."

The men sometimes kid the Society's pretty secretary: "I'd like to paint you in the nude, Jo."

To which she has a stock reply: "But don't you think you might catch cold?"

JO SMITH describes her job as "a fun job," and says one of her special pleasures is the opportunity to work each year with a new and different Marin Society of Artists president and his or her board of directors. The current president is Fred Herschleb.

Jo Smith regularly takes one week of her vacation at Christmas time, when Frances Young Gallery closes, and takes her children skiing, but she had to forego that fun this past winter because she had injured her back and an arm in a fall.

At Easter time the past two years she has taken the children to Hawaii — "where, naturally, this spring I met two of our regular gallery patrons. I run into them everywhere and recognize them as good friends."

AND IN AUGUST the family spends a week at a cabin on the Silver Fork of the American River "that has to be very close to heaven." Located in El Dorado National Forest, it is the only cabin in the area besides a forestry station.

"I look at the magnificent scenery and think of how my artist friends would love to paint it," she says. "And I smile a lot."

Jo Smith smiles a lot, wherever she might be — including her desk at the gallery.

Attractive, unflappable she sits at her desk taking care of bookwork on a busy day when what seems to the visitor to be bedlam rages around her.

"I KNOW IT looks like chaos," she smiles. "But it really isn't. Everyone knows what he or she is doing. And a lot of work is getting done."

And there is a strong element of personal satisfaction in her satisfaction from her work for Jo Smith, non-artist, but art-lover. "Where else could a person put down from $5 to $16 and in exchange for that amount, enjoy the pleasure of a really fine painting in their home for three months?

"One can't help but feel good at being a part of such a system."

FRANCES YOUNG GALLERY secretary Jo Smith, center, joins Alice Scarborough, left, and Mel Cardy in an admiring perusal of some of the artwork done by Marin Society of Artists members. The gallery is open to the public seven days a week, 1 to 4 p.m., and offers a special monthly exhibit in addition to the continuing rental gallery hangings. The gallery also offers Thursday night sketch classes with live models.

REVENUE FROM the rent and sale of paintings at Frances Young Gallery is about 50-50 between the two kinds of transactions, Mrs. Smith says. And very often what started out as a rental winds up becoming a sale.

"When a patron of the gallery rents a pinting for as long as a year, almost invariably he or she ends up buying it," the secretary explains. In such cases, money paid for the rental can be applied to the purchase. While the gallery often rents to businesses and industries, most rented paintings go into homes.

In recent years, craft sales and rentals have becoming increasingly important in gallery proceeds.

THE BIGGEST slice of the receipts from sales and rentals, understandbly, goes to the artists and craftsmen.

Most of the remainder goes to the Marin Art and Garden Center as the Marin Society of Artists' contribution as a member organization to the upkeep and operation of the beautiful cultural center.

The Society retains a smaller portion of the money to help meet its gallery expenses.

Mrs. Smith is especially proud of the improved lighting that the Society has installed in its gallery. "Lighting is so important to art."

IN THE FUTURE whe would like to see the Society use the gallery premises for a program of art classes for children — "my number one hope. We have been talking about it, and I think it will come about."

For the first time the Society has been conducting sketch classes with life models at the gallery on Thursday nights this year — at $1 per session.

And there is the annual auction, an important fund-raising event, in which Jo Smith is deeply involved each year.

But for the most part her job revolves around the day-to-day operations of Frances Young Gallery, open seven days a week to the public, 1 to 4 p.m., and to the once-a-month schedule of shows.

THE MARIN Society of Artists' big prestige show of the year is the annual show, held in the fall, and for which outside judges are brought in. The spring and fall rental shows are also major events.

But all the shows at Frances Young are juried affairs, offering gallery visitors a diversity of high quality art with the added attraction of its local origins. "I think our shows are getting better and better," says Jo.

Are feelings sometimes ruffled when members' work fails to qualify for a show?

"Well, artists are as human as anyone else. So naturally, they are sometimes disappointed by the jurying. They'll come up to me and say: 'Jo, I just can't understand why my painting didn't make it.' "

WHEN THIS occurs, Jo Smith has the perfect and truthful answer. "Gee, I'm not an artist. So I just wouldn't know." In that way, the secretary avoids arguments and remains a neutral.

But Jo Smith disputes the old stereotype of the artist as a difficult and temperamental person.

"In their personalities, they are very much like any other group — very diverse, and each an individual with his or her own special likes and dislikes. They aren't at all as temperamental as the public concept pictures them to be. In fact, they are a delight to work with — gifted, yet warm. And with tremendous backgrounds of awards and achievements."

The men sometimes kid the Society's pretty secretary: "I'd like to paint you in the nude, Jo."

To which she has a stock reply: "But don't you think you might catch cold?"

JO SMITH describes her job as "a fun job," and says one of her special pleasures is the opportunity to work each year with a new and different Marin Society of Artists president and his or her board of directors. The current president is Fred Herschleb.

Jo Smith regularly takes one week of her vacation at Christmas time, when Frances Young Gallery closes, and takes her children skiing, but she had to forego that fun this past winter because she had injured her back and an arm in a fall.

At Easter time the past two years she has taken the children to Hawaii — "where, naturally, this spring I met two of our regular gallery patrons. I run into them everywhere and recognize them as good friends."

AND IN AUGUST the family spends a week at a cabin on the Silver Fork of the American River "that has to be very close to heaven." Located in El Dorado National Forest, it is the only cabin in the area besides a forestry station.

"I look at the magnificent scenery and think of how my artist friends would love to paint it," she says. "And I smile a lot."

Jo Smith smiles a lot, wherever she might be — including her desk at the gallery.

Attractive, unflappable she sits at her desk taking care of bookwork on a busy day when what seems to the visitor to be bedlam rages around her.

"I KNOW IT looks like chaos," she smiles. "But it really isn't. Everyone knows what he or she is doing. And a lot of work is getting done."

And there is a strong element of personal satisfaction in her satisfaction from her work for Jo Smith, non-artist, but art-lover. "Where else could a person put down from $5 to $16 and in exchange for that amount, enjoy the pleasure of a really fine painting in their home for three months?

FRANCES YOUNG GALLERY secretary Jo Smith, center, joins Alice Scarborough, left, and Mel Cardy in an admiring perusal of some of the artwork done by Marin Society of Artists members. The gallery is open to the public seven days a week, 1 to 4 p.m., and offers a special monthly exhibit in addition to the continuing rental gallery hangings. The gallery also offers Thursday night sketch classes with live models.

Young, Dynamic Tel Aviv Has Zoomed To Front As Israel's Cultural Center

TEL AVIV, Israel — Rambunctious and sprawling Tel Aviv is the cultural and economic heart of the State of Israel.

A full 50 per cent of the population of Israel lives in the greater Tel Aviv area and its position in the center of the spreading bedroom suburbs give this city a vitality and personality distinct from all other Israeli cities.

Tel Aviv was born some 60 years ago when friction with the Arab population of Jaffa and the crowded and unsanitary conditions of the older city prompted the Jewish inhabitants to build a new city on the san dunes to the north.

THERE ON A clear summer day, they held a drawing for building lots and what is today some of the nation's prime real estate changed hands among the clot of black-clothed people gathered on the sands.

In time the small community grew and camel caravans carrying bricks and cement crossed from Jaffa as the pace of construction accelerated.

During World War I the xenophobic Turks, fresh from their executions of the Armenians, decided to relocate the Jewish population of Tel Aviv. All but a few were forced to flee overseas or retreat inland to the more secure settlements in Galilee and Jerusalem.

The arrival of the British, victors over the Turks in World War I, changed the atmosphere, and the development of Tel Aviv continued at a rapid pace under the more kindly sponsorship of the mandatory authorities.

STILL, THE BRITISH had their own objectives in the Middle East. It soon became apparent that the late blooming Arab nationalism might convince the British that the development of the Jewish community in the Holy Land was not in the British empirical interest.

It was too late, however, for the British to truly stop the development of Tel Aviv. The village, now a true city, had reached its own take-off point.

Jaffa, while still an important port had fallen behind Haifa in importance and in fact, the people of Tel Aviv had built their own small port at the mouth of the Yarkon River in northern Tel Aviv.

Today Tel Aviv has everything one would expect of a modern city and it is blessed and cursed with the advantages and disadvantages.

TEL AVIV HAS the most dynamic night life in Israel. It has a legitimate theater that has an average of 14 performances of different shows in a given week. Discotheques, restaurants and boutiques abound as Tel Aviv keeps pace with every other modern city. There is a busy publishing industry that meets the needs of one of the best read people in the world. Economically it is the location of the young and active stock market and serves as the financial center of the country.

Traffic jams though, are common, and the housing shortage and air pollution are recognized as problems.

Although Tel Aviv is so young, its face is constantly changing. The Mediterranean shoreline from the Yarkon port in the north to Jaffa port in the south is now witnessing a dynamic face-lifting program. Here great trucks transporting giant boulders are at work lengthening the shoreline by filling in "T" shaped piers.

The existing hotels along Hayarkon Street, not an insignificant number, are being joined by dozens of new hotels with thousands of additional rooms. All are part of a program that will turn the Tel Aviv shore into a miniature Riviera, guaranteeing rooms for the hundreds of thousands who visit Tel Aviv each year.

HOTELS, RESTAURANTS and nightclubs, such as this one, line the shore area of the now merged cities of Tev Aviv and Jaffa that make up Israel's largest population center. Tel Aviv is only about 80 years old. But ancient Jaffa is first mentioned in the Bible as the place from which Jonah set sail. Today they provide tourists with a fascinating contrast in life styles.

Nashville Blends Greek Influence, Country Music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Although guitars and banjos are undoubtedly more popular than lyres, Pericles still would feel quite at home in Nashville — often called the Athens of the South.

Nashville's glory that was Greece is best sampled on a walking tour, reports American Airlines, which serves the city with frequent daily flights.

A good place to get your bearings is the Life and Casualty Tower, the tallest building in town. No Greek influence here, but on a clear day the view from the observation deck extends for up to 30 miles around.

LOOMING IN the distance about 10 blocks from the Casualty Tower is the State Capitol, an imposing Greek revival structure. President James Polk is entombed on the capitol grounds, and there are statues of Andrew Jackson, Sgt. Alvin York and Sam Davis, boy hero of the Confederacy.

An hour's walk from the capitol leads to Nashville's most striking example of Greek influence — the world's only replica of the Parthenon. Built for the Tennessee centennial of 1898, it is said to be the exact color of the original temple in Athens.

Nashville's Parthenon is filled with reproductions of the Elgin Marbles and other well-known items from Greece's Golden Age. It also houses a collection of works by modern artists. The temple is open daily and admission is free.

ALTHOUGH GREEK predominates, Nashville also boasts fine models of other architectural styles.

For example, William Strickland, the architect who designed the capitol, went Egyptian for the Downtown Presbyterian Church. The church has been rebuilt twice since its construction in 1816, but the original form has been intricately retained.

Just off the downtown business district is Rymer Auditorium, an antiquish building with a vague Gothic facade. Rymer is the former home of the Grand Ole Opry, which last year moved outside of Nashville proper to a 28-million-dollar family amusement complex called Opryland USA.

The Country Music Wax Museum, featuring lifelike figures of 50 country music stars, is around the corner from the Rymer Auditorium. The museum is open daily. Admission is $1.40 for adults and 75 cents for children.

FOR LOCAL HISTORY exhibits, visit the Children's Museum on Second Avenue and the Tennessee State Museum in the War Memorial Building.

Fort Nashborough is also along the riverfront. It's a reproduction of the stockade that protected Nashville's first settlers in 1780. Open daily, admission is free.

Still, country music a la Grand Ole Opry, reigns as Nashville's biggest tourist attraction. American Airlines has a three-day Grand Ole Opry tour priced from just $39.50 per person, plus air fare. Included are hotel accommodations, a ticket to the Opry and admission to Opryland USA. Opryland operates on a daily basis from May 30 through Nov. 5.

ALSO VISIT THE Country Music Hall of Fame which stands as the country music industry's monument to itself and its performers. A gold-lettered sign inside the Hall bears this inscription:

"Here lives country music ... its spirit, its soul and its history; its people and its songs ... so that all may see and hear and learn of the heritage of musical Americana." And that's the glory that is Nashville.

Catalina Island: Easier To Reach, Charming As Ever

AVALON (Catalina Island) — Here on Catalina Island, Southern California's oldest "holiday island," whose discovery predates the establishment of the United States by over 200 years, the resident population is in the midst of another season of summer visitors experiencing the unique "get away from it all" feeling of being on an island.

More Northern California visitors than ever before are being attracted to the island of Catalina, and to the 26-mile (one and three-quarter hours) passage between Long Beach and Catalina via Long Beach-Catalina Cruises' fleet of luxurious boats.

THE RECENT launching of the sleek $800,000, 700-passenger Long Beach King increased Long Beach-Catalina Cruises' passenger facilities substantially. The boat joins in service the 500-passenger Long Beach Prince and the 149-passenger Eagle. All three offer the most up-to-date, comfortable water transport to be found anywhere.

In addition to many contemporary recreation facilities, notable dining and lodging spots, and various creature comforts, visitors approaching Catalina today enjoy much the same natural, unspoiled scenic magnificence that proved a memorable and welcome sight some 431 years ago to the Portuguese navigator Don Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo and the Spanish crewmen that became Catalina's first visitors.

A diary of that initial visit in 1532 might reveal those explorer-tourists enjoyed during their stay on the island much the same pleasures that today's visitors enjoy ... splashing in the gentle surf; sunning and relaxing on the beach; exploring among native trees, flowers, rock formations, and shorelife; hiking or strolling the varied terrain; sampling native fruits and berries; and finding a form of refreshment unlike that to be found anywhere else.

THE ISLAND's 76 square miles have weathered several changes in ownership over the years, but her surface has changed very little. Her terrain is dominated by rugged peaks, verdant valleys, secluded coves and indigenous flora and fauna, touched ever-so-slightly by Catalina's 1,200 year-round residents.

Even today, Cabrillo and his men might find Catalina's Avalon harbor an interesting refuge in which to dry their sails.

Now more easily accessible than ever before, Catalina visitors arrive each day for vacation adventure, fun in the sun, relaxation, recreation, and refreshment.

Additionally, due to special summer schedules between Long Beach and Avalon (the only city on Catalina), visitors may now enjoy extended hours on the islands.

THE LONG BEACH KING passes the Queen Mary enroute on its 26-mile voyage between Long Beach on the California mainland and offshore Catalina Island. The $800,000 Long Beach-Catalina Cruises craft built specifically for the Catalina run contains 7,500 square feet on three decks, with inside seating for 500 persons plus open-air seating, and with refreshment facilities. The same firm also operates the Long Beach Prince and the Eagle between Long Beach and Catalina.

IF YOU GIVE A HOOT —

More about owls than most people want to know can be learned by visiting the summer show at New York's Eastman Kodak Gallery and Photo Information center in Mid-Manhattan.

Collecting owls in many variations of sculptured and pictorial forms is a current fad. The gallery features 60 pictures showing just about every type of owl.

Jamaica Is The Place For Waterfall Buffs

The waterfalls that roar, splash, tumble and foam over and out of the limestone rocks of Jamaica are so numerous nobody has ever counted them.

Some are rushing rivers, spilling over with a perpetual crash into the Caribbean Sea; others are threadlike trickles seeping out of underground streams; still others are like Roman fountains, billowing into pools at the foot of a cliff and then bubbling up again.

A WATERFALL buff could be catching the pure spring water of a quiet mountain roadside "drinking fountain" at one moment, and a few minutes later arrive at Dunn's River Falls to discover two or three camera crews knee-deep in misty foam, busily shooting a television show or a shampoo commercial. This celebrated waterfall is only one of many in the lovely mid-North Coast resort area of Jamaica called Ocho Rios.

Although in Spanish Ocho Rios means "eight rivers" — and the area probably has that many — the name is believed to be a mispronunciation of "Las Chorer-as," or "the spouts."

However, for all its fame, some other parts of the island almost match it for built-in bubble baths, especially in the Blue and the John Crow mountains, which form the high spine of Jamaica.

IN THE PARISH of Portland east of Ocho Rios are the Somerset Falls, which rival Dunn's for coolness, splashiness, jungle beauty and refreshment. The Jamaica Tourist Board has undertaken to provide walks and handrails and places to pause for pictures or just looking. And it is quiet — totally quiet — except for the hypnotic roar of the cascading waters.

To the west, over near Montego Bay, there is another place that has become popular with photographers and casual visitors, a cool, mossy glen with a perpetual natural shower head.

Called Annie Palmer's Waterfall after the lady who was once mistress of nearby Rose Hall, it has an aura of the mystery surrounding its namesake, who has become known as "the white witch."

BY TRAVELING about 25 miles still farther west, it is possible to dine beside a torchlighted waterfall. To reach this, people ride canoes up the Great River, a popular pastime three evenings a week.

But to reach the many unknown waterfalls of Jamaica, it is simply a matter of exploring the mountainous terrain of Jamaica by car or by train. There is more than an even chance of discovering an unnamed waterfall around the very next bend of the road or beyond the next hill.

ON A WARM day, there is nothing quite like plunging into one of Jamaica's many beautiful built-in bubble baths.

Jamaica Is The Place For Waterfall Buffs

The waterfalls that roar, splash, tumble and foam over and out of the limestone rocks of Jamaica are so numerous nobody has ever counted them.

Some are rushing rivers, spilling over with a perpetual crash into the Caribbean Sea; others are threadlike trickles seeping out of underground streams; still others are like Roman fountains, billowing into pools at the foot of a cliff and then bubbling up again.

A WATERFALL buff could be catching the pure spring water of a quiet mountain roadside "drinking fountain" at one moment, and a few minutes later arrive at Dunn's River Falls to discover two or three camera crews knee-deep in misty foam, busily shooting a television show or a shampoo commercial. This celebrated waterfall is only one of many in the lovely mid-North Coast resort area of Jamaica called Ocho Rios.

Although in Spanish Ocho Rios means "eight rivers" — and the area probably has that many — the name is believed to be a mispronunciation of "Las Chorreras," or "the spouts."

However, for all its fame, some other parts of the island almost match it for built-in bubble baths, especially in the Blue and the John Crow mountains, which form the high spine of Jamaica.

IN THE PARISH of Portland east of Ocho Rios are the Somerset Falls, which rival Dunn's for coolness, splashiness, jungle beauty and refreshment. The Jamaica Tourist Board has undertaken to provide walks and handrails and places to pause for pictures or just looking. And it is quiet — totally quiet — except for the hypnotic roar of the cascading waters.

To the west, over near Montego Bay, there is another place that has become popular with photographers and casual visitors, a cool, mossy glen with a perpetual natural shower head.

Called Annie Palmer's Waterfall after the lady who was once mistress of nearby Rose Hall, it has an aura of the mystery surrounding its namesake, who has become known as "the white witch."

BY TRAVELING about 25 miles still farther west, it is possible to dine beside a torchlighted waterfall. To reach this, people ride canoes up the Great River, a popular pastime three evenings a week.

But to reach the many unknown waterfalls of Jamaica, it is simply a matter of exploring the mountainous terrain of Jamaica by car or by train. There is more than an even chance of discovering an unnamed waterfall around the very next bend of the road or beyond the next hill.

ON A WARM day, there is nothing quite like plunging into one of Jamaica's many beautiful built-in bubble baths.

Robert Creeley On His Work

CONTEXTS OF POETRY: INTERVIEWS 1961-1971 by Robert Creeley; Four Seasons Foundation, 213 pages, paperback, $3. Reviewed by Phillip Holtzman.

Here are 10 interviews with Robert Creeley spanning 10 years in which his own poetry is seen in contexts of biography, craft and environment in the broadest sense. For the most part, the book enjoys the relaxed tone, pace and structure of conversation.

"The questioners, of course, had their own preoccupations," and are instrumental in shaping the book. Linda Wagner enters a "colloquy" with Creeley going right to the heart of this poet's craft, and proceeds with a continuity which issues from attentively following each response and leading it to its full development. The Wagner-Creeley interview in itself establishes the book's value for me; the entire discussion works toward the same thrust into the art and craft of Creeley's writing.

Interviewers such as O'Regan and Allan, or Flaherty9and Bradford, however, seem to slip into a niche where details of Creeley's experiences, or explanations of his views, become authoritive or exemplary because of some acknowledged respect for him as a writer — a celebrity interview. These very interviews seem to me the most strained, awkward or disjointed.

Creeley repeatedly refers to specific influences from Pound, Olson and particularly Williams. He explains that "in the immediate and particular . . . the universal is to be embodied, if anywhere," and cautions against generalized emotions of "poor quality." In writing, "I'm telling myself something that I didn't have the knowing of previously." Writing is "the primary articulation that's possible for me."

He explains that he writes a poem at one sitting. "For me personally poetry is an intense instant which is either gained or lost in the actual writing."

In both poetry and prose, "I don't revise as a rule, I find it necessary to begin at the beginning, to go forward, so to speak." In the last interview, Creeley discusses one of his poems, "I Know A Man," which is a tangible addition to the book, almost an illustration. He discusses his novel "The Island," and relates detail of its organization and writing.

Linda Wagner calls Creeley one of the most honest and intense men alive, as his poetry makes evident. This book is evidence, then, that Creeley is extremely knowledgable and conversant about his own work and its full contemporary context.

THE COOKBOOKS

From The Exotic To The Down-To-Earth

By MAXINE KEOWN

The words "Caribbean cooking" in themselves carry an attractive aura of the festive and exotic. Elisabeth Lambert Ortiz, cookbook author and writer for Gourmet and other magazines, fulfills those expectations in her "The Complete Book of Caribbean Cooking (Evans, $10).

After some brief direction on the cooking techniques of the islands, she leads you into such tempting concoctions as Coconut Soup from St. Kitts, Chicken Pelau from Trinidad, Stuffed Bananas from Haiti, Deep Fried Eggs Cuban style, Curried Rabbit from the Leeward Islands, Red Beans and Rice from Cuba, Banana Pudding from Martinique, Guava Pie from Jamaica and Mrs. Bessie Byam's Mango Relish from Trinidad.

Mrs. Ortiz, educated in the West Indies, returned to the islands for six years of study of their cuisines in preparation for this excellent book. She stresses the catholic nature of Caribbean cooking, with its roots in many lands — Europe, Britain, India, Africa, China, the U.S., South America. Rather surprisingly, except for some decorative line drawings by Moneta Barnett, there are no illustrations. What you do get are 450 pages with as many recipes, imaginatively chosen, and handily arranged for the cook interested in bringing a special flair into her kitchen.

THE TITLE "Farmhouse Kitchen" on the other hand, promises substantial, hearty, Anglo-Saxon eating. And the $6.95 book by Audrey Ellis and Mabel Cavaiani, published by Henry Regnery, also delivers.

Miss Ellis is an English author specializing in cookbooks and Miss Cavaiani is a dietician and home economist who earlier produced "The Low Cholesterol Cookbook."

In their book they delve into the traditional recipes of rural Britain and America — favorites like Bread and Butter Pickles, Mincemeat Pie, Scrapple, Quince Butter, Crumpets, Oatmeal Cookies, Apple Wine, Tomato Relish, Chili Sauce, Huckleberry Jam and Pralines. They offer guidance, too, on country kitchen techniques such as canning, drying, pickling, winemaking, cheesemaking, curing, preserving and freezing.

"The farmhouse kitchens of my childhood were warm, welcoming places," Miss Ellis begins the introduction. "I remember them with love, for there I first learned to enjoy cooking . . ." Enough said.

"THE NATURAL Breakfast Book" is a $2.95 paperback aimed at the health food-minded, and produced by the editors of Rodale Press, the publishers of Prevention Magazine.

"You can make breakfast the most popular meal of the day," claim the editors, and they look to whole grains, eggs, the protein foods of meat, fish and cheese as the staples for appealing recipes and menus. The book proposes, too, the substitution of honey for sugar as your sweetener, the inclusion of homemade yogurt on your breakfast menu, and the incorporation of fruits, fruit juices and herb teas into your first meal of the day.

For dieters, there is this warning: "If you are skipping breakfast to lose weight, stop! You are defeating your purpose. You are running the motors of your metabolic machinery at low speed. What you want to do is shift into high . . ."

Some sample breakfast dishes: Oatmeal Bread, Kidney Omelet, Raw Strawberry Jam, Baked Soybeans, Fruit Yogurt Salad, Egg Foo Yung, Baked Breakfast Rice and Date-Nut Nog. All, we are assured, chuck full of the things essential to our well-being.

"THE HARVEST Home Steak Cookbook" is a $1.25 softcover booklet compiled by Jean H. Shepard and published by Stephen Greene Press, and with a flavor that reflects its New England origins. There is basic information on steak cookery and carving, and then an assortment of recipes ranging from Sirloin Steak Slices Morocco to Steak and Kidney Pie, from Planked Steak with Duchess Potatoes to Tournedos Rossini. It is a part of a series of Harvest Home cookbooks from Stephen Greene that has included such tempting titles as "Real Old-Time Yankee Apple Cooking" "Store-Cheese Cooking," "Cook With Honey!" and "Real Old-Time Yankee Maple Cooking."

IN "MANNA FOODS of the Frontier" (101 Productions, San Francisco), Gertrude Harris serves you up a large helping of the kinds of dishes that kept our pioneer forefathers hale and hardy. A Richmond resident, Mrs. Harris proposes that a return to the kind of cooking practiced on the frontier should be very much a part of the current movement back to the Good Earth and simpler things.

Her book, she says, "is meant as a reasonable, workable guide for those who wish to take the first step toward a richer, purer, simpler life."

Her recipes include the likes of Irish Soda Bread and a Midwestern Frontier Rye Bread, Hangtown Fry, Pickled Eggs, Corn Chowder, Deep Fried Catfish with Hush Puppies, Brunswick Stew, Roast Turkey, Chili con Carne, Potted Tongue, Squash Pies, Onion Pie, Western Fried Rice, Buttermilk Cottage Cheese, Bread and Butter Pickles, Baked Indian Pudding, Maple Sugar Sauce and Tomato Preserves. Thrown in, too, is some instruction on making soap and candles.

It's a delightful piece of Americana. And a most useful cookbook as well, the product, we are told, of 30 years of collecting by Mrs. Harris. She has collected and chosen well.

A Farewell Effort By A Master

PARADOX LOST by Fredric Brown; Random House, 210 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Albert E. Nussbaum.

Fredric Brown is dead. He died in 1972 after a long career as a writer of crime and science-fiction novels and short stories.

His fiction is wildly imaginative, the plots often as insanely funny as they are impossible to predict. His novel "What Mad Universe" has become a classic of the science fiction genre, and "The Fabulous Clipjoint" won the Mystery Writers of America's prestigious Edgar Allan Poe Award for the year it appeared.

His short fiction has been anthologized countless times in collections of "best" and "outstanding" stories.

"Paradox Lost," Fredric Brown's farewell to his readers, is a selection of 13 of his science fiction short stories. A couple of them seem sadly dated, at least one is actually a quality story masquerading as science fiction, a couple are certainly examples of Brown at his best, and the remainder are just average efforts.

However, Fredric Brown's average efforts are well above average, and he shares with Ray Bradbury the ability to write science fiction that a reader doesn't have to have a degree in physics to enjoy.

Fredric Brown will be missed. He was a master of the genre.

The American Homefront Of World War II

DAYS OF SADNESS, YEARS OF TRIUMPH by Geoffrey Perrett; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 512 pages, $10. Reviewed by Jim Williams.

Geoffrey Perrett, a 31-year-old historian, has done his homework extremely well.

His "Days Of Sadness, Years of Triumph," the six historical years between 1939 and 1945 for the American people, has an excellent ring of authority. It's not a book about the war but about the homefront — the man on the street and what he was thinking in these critical years.

Perrett is not hesitant to knock sacred cows. He takes after the liberal establishment for what he calls hypocrisy. He also describes the suffering of the blacks and Jews during the six year period, as well as documenting what he labels as injustices of the Japanese interment camps on the West Coast.

His book is an excellent companion to the many books on the war itself. It is well documented. It was five years labor of research and writing. And it deserves attention.

BASEBALL'S "BAD BOY" Bo Belinsky was photographed at the heyday of his brief but flamboyant athletic career in his convertible and ready to live up to his playboy reputation. Baseball's 'Bad Boy' Tells All About Away-From-The-Diamond Conquests

BO: PITCHING AND WOOING by Maury Allen with Bo Belinsky; Dial Press, 308 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lew Coddington.

If J. D. Salinger had botched "Catcher In The Rye," he would have ended up with something resembling this autobiography of Bo Belinsky.

Belinsky, one will recall with some effort, was a pitcher for several major and minor league teams in the 1960s. He had considerably more conquests off the field than on. His only major baseball achievement was a no-hitter pitched for the then-Los Angeles Angels on May 5, 1962. But it made him an instant hero of the Hollywood Jet Set and a constant topic in gossip columns. Belinsky reveled in the fame.

The book, written by New York sportswriter Maury Allen with Bo's "uncensored cooperation," is largely devoted to his extracurricular activities, and we don't mean baseball. It's not recommended for anybody under 12 — which, Bo does not hesitate to point out in great detail, is the age when he first succumbed to the charms of a female.

You can take the sex or leave it, but the book suffers from two important literary defects. Its attempts at psychological insights into the nature of ballplayers sound pallid after "Ball Four." And its efforts at nostalgia are decidedly inferior to "The Boys of Summer."

How The Executive Can Fight Back —

THE CORPORATE EUNUCH by O. William Battalia and John J. Tarrant; Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 180 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

The corporate life style, a comparatively recent mode of behavior, is a long way from the free-wheeling individualism that sparked the rise of American business and industry.

The authors, contending that the corporate system has made "eunuchs" of many executives, present some strategies for them to use to regain their decision-making power and feeling of worth.

When a consultant is called in and advises a manager how his job should be done, the manager has been rendered impotent, they claim.

Under the corporate system, men are promoted into jobs for which they have neither the experience or ability, and are often in relative isolation from reality.

Perhaps more demoralizing, executives have discovered they are disposable when recession looms for they are no longer serving as contributors to the business.

In "playing the corporate field," they advise executives to make their own career decisions. "If you do not make the decisions for yourself, they will be made for you by other people and by outside circumstances."

A Spokesman For The Northwest Sportsman

THE INSIDE ON THE OUTDOORS by Enos Bradner; Superior Publishing Co., 256 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Richard B. Lyttle.

Don't be put off by the appearance of this volume.

The scrapbook format does give it a cheap look, and the reproduction of newspaper columns suggests that the publisher could not take the pains to reset the book in less cramped text. But the fact is that anyone interested in fishing or hunting will be fascinated, and the format does fit the style.

Outdoorsmen who did not grow up in the Northwest within range of the Seattle Times will get a chance here to meet Enos Bradner, an interesting fellow indeed. Bradner launched his writing career in 1943, sharing a desk with a veteran sportswriter in one corner of the newsroom. He had never been in a newspaper office before in his life. He was 50 year old.

In his 26 years with the Times, he became the leading spokesman for outdoorsmen in the Pacific Northwest, and his desk — he soon got one of his own — became the clearing house for fishing and hunting new for the territory.

Here we have the outstanding articles of Bradner's writing career. Some of them require a knowledge of the Pacific Northwest area for full appreciation, but many will interest readers anywhere.

In all, Bradner's zeal for his subject shines through.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

NOT I, SAID THE SPARROW by Richard Lockridge; Lippincott, 228 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Merton Heimrich of the New York State Police and wife Susan are the guests of an aging and wealthy suburbanite who has a surprise for those attending his party — his announcement that he is going to marry his much younger, and very pretty, secretary.

The next morning Arthur Jameson is found dead on his estate, an arrow through his throat.

Inspector Heimrich proceeds with an investigation in which assorted relatives and other characters are suspects, and in which the finding of the bow that fired the fatal arrow is a necessity.

Its a low-key, civilized and pleasant little mystery by the always competent Richard Lockridge, who alone, or with wife Frances, has produced something like 80 books.

THE CATERPILLAR COP by James McClure; Harper & Row, 245 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Hugo Coutandin.

The locale is South Africa where James McClure describes in subtle style with excellent insight the apartheid society.

The author neither defends nor condemns — he illuminates, as Lt. Trompie Kramer of the South African police, a true original, goes about solving the slaying of a child. McClure is more interested in crafting a first class mystery novel than in making a moral judgment.

Kramer is assisted by Sgt. Michey Zondi, a Bantu, and McClure vividly describes a collaboration that has definite advantages in the complex South African society.

Don't look for clinches here. On virtually every page the author provides new insights into a character, a situation or a locale. It is, then, much more than just another mystery novel.

McClure's first novel, "The Steam Pig," which won the British Crime Writers' Gold Dagger as best novel of the year, featured the same locale and protagonist. Apparently we can look forward to a series.

OPERATIONS MIDAS by Anne O'Grady; Harper & Row, 186 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Mary Craig.

When Josh signs on as skipper of the 140-foot yacht Matilda, he embarks on a secret treasure hunt in the Auckland Islands that yields him more thrills than he bargained for.

Once away from Sydney, screaming winds, treachurous currents, a lunatic wielding a machine gun, and a miscellany of natural cataclysms assail the narrator in breakneck sequence.

The author has done superb homework on locale. Even the gold is real, an unrecovered bounty from the General Grant, sunk in 1886.

The readers problem is breathing between catastrophes. The accelerated pace of the story complicated by the problems of a weakly motivated cast of passengers provides emotional overkill.

In fariness, sailors fascinated by the perils of the sea, especially the rugged area of the Kuckland Islands, might ignore such shortcomings for a challenging yarn of the briny deep.

Touchstone Press, the active little publishing house based in Beaverton, Ore., has issued two new books aimed at outdoors enthusiasts.

"80 Northern Colorado Hiking Trails" is the work of Don and Roberta Lowe, their fourth in a series of such guides, with more to come. Priced at $4.95 and printed in high quality softcover format, with photos and maps, the book proposes hikes that range from a mile and a third to 10 miles, at elevations of from 100 feet to 4,400 feet, and each of them personally covered on foot by the Lowes in 1972.

The co-authors, whose enjoyment of hiking is relflected in their texts and Don Lowe's camera work, figure they have walked some 6,000 miles over trails the last five years, qualifying them as experts.

Also from Touchstone: "55 Oregon Bicycle Trips" by Nick and Elske Jankowski, this one costing $3.95 and describing bike treks from six to 62 miles in length, plus some sound background information for serious long distance cyclists. Again there are illustrations and maps.

CAPRA PRESS of Santa Barbara has two new booklets in its Chapbook Series. Ross Macdonald, just about tops among American crime novel writers and himself a Santa Barbara resident, has produced "On Crime Writing," focusing his expertise upon the genre, analyzing the work of others and offering insight into his own. Leon Elder has done "Hot Tubs: How to Build, Maintain and Enjoy Your Own," a lighthearted yet detailed guide on how to build and enjoy hot tubs — the popular offshoot of Japanese-style soaking. The Macdonald book is $2.50, the Elder book $2.95.

WITH A limited audience, but one intensely interested in its subject matter, "An Heraldic Alphabet," prepared by J. P. Brooke-Little with the impressive title of Richmond Herald of Arms. The publisher of the $8.95 book, Arco, stresses that the generously illustrated (300 line drawings plus four pages of full color plates) book represents the most contemporary, up-to-date practices and ideas in the evolving field of heraldry. His short fiction has been anthologized countless times in collections of "best" and "outstanding" stories.

"Paradox Lost," Fredric Brown's farewell to his readers, is a selection of 13 of his science fiction short stories. A couple of them seem sadly dated, at least one is actually a quality story masquerading as science fiction, a couple are certainly examples of Brown at his best, and the remainder are just average efforts.

However, Fredric Brown's average efforts are well above average, and he shares with Ray Bradbury the ability to write science fiction that a reader doesn't have to have a degree in physics to enjoy.

Fredric Brown will be missed. He was a master of the genre.

The American Homefront Of World War II

DAYS OF SADNESS, YEARS OF TRIUMPH by Geoffrey Perrett; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 512 pages, $10. Reviewed by Jim Williams.

Geoffrey Perrett, a 31-year-old historian, has done his homework extremely well.

His "Days Of Sadness, Years of Triumph," the six historical years between 1939 and 1945 for the American people, has an excellent ring of authority. It's not a book about the war, but about the homefront — the man on the street and what he was thinking in these critical years.

Perrett is not hesitant to knock sacred cows. He takes after the liberal establishment for what he calls hypocrisy. He also describes the suffering of the blacks and Jews during the six year period, as well as documenting what he labels as injustices of the Japanese interment camps on the West Coast.

His book is an excellent companion to the many books on the war itself. It is well documented. It was five years labor of research and writing. And it deserves attention.

BO: PITCHING AND WOOING by Maury Allen with Bo Belinsky; Dial Press, 308 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lew Coddington.

If J. D. Salinger had botched "Catcher In The Rye," he would have ended up with something resembling this autobiography of Bo Belinsky.

Belinsky, one will recall with some effort, was a pitcher for several major and minor league teams in the 1960s. He had considerably more conquests off the field than on. His only major baseball achievement was a no-hitter pitched for the then-Los Angeles Angels on May 5, 1962. But it made him an instant hero of the Hollywood Jet Set and a constant topic in gossip columns. Belinsky reveled in the fame.

The book, written by New York sportswriter Maury Allen with Bo's "uncensored cooperation," is largely devoted to his extracurricular activities, and we don't mean baseball. It's not recommended for anybody under 12 — which, Bo does not hesitate to point out in great detail, is the age when he first succumbed to the charms of a female.

You can take the sex or leave it, but the book suffers from two important literary defects. Its attempts at psychological insights into the nature of ballplayers sound pallid after "Ball Four." And its efforts at nostalgia are decidedly inferior to "The Boys of Summer."

How The Executive Can Fight Back —

The corporate life style, a comparatively recent mode of behavior, is a long way from the free-wheeling individualism that sparked the rise of American business and industry.

The authors, contending that the corporate system has made "eunuchs" of many executives, present some strategies for them to use to regain their decision-making power and feeling of worth.

When a consultant is called in and advises a manager how his job should be done, the manager has been rendered impotent, they claim.

Under the corporate system, men are promoted into jobs for which they have neither the experience or ability, and are often in relative isolation from reality.

Perhaps more demoralizing, executives have discovered they are disposable when recession looms for they are no longer serving as contributors to the business.

In "playing the corporate field," they advise executives to make their own career decisions. "If you do not make the decisions for yourself, they will be made for you by other people and by outside circumstances."

Don't be put off by the appearance of this volume.

The scrapbook format does give it a cheap look, and the reproduction of newspaper columns suggests that the publisher could not take the pains to reset the book in less cramped text. But the fact is that anyone interested in fishing or hunting will be fascinated, and the format does fit the style.

Outdoorsmen who did not grow up in the Northwest within range of the Seattle Times will get a chance here to meet Enos Bradner, an interesting fellow indeed. Bradner launched his writing career in 1943, sharing a desk with a veteran sportswriter in one corner of the newsroom. He had never been in a newspaper office before in his life. He was 50 year old.

In his 26 years with the Times, he became the leading spokesman for outdoorsmen in the Pacific Northwest, and his desk — he soon got one of his own — became the clearing house for fishing and hunting new for the territory.

Here we have the outstanding articles of Bradner's writing career. Some of them require a knowledge of the Pacific Northwest area for full appreciation, but many will interest readers anywhere.

In all, Bradner's zeal for his subject shines through.

Inspector Heimrich proceeds with an investigation in which assorted relatives and other characters are suspects, and in which the finding of the bow that fired the fatal arrow is a necessity.

Its a low-key, civilized and pleasant little mystery by the always competent Richard Lockridge, who alone, or with wife Frances, has produced something like 80 books.

The locale is South Africa where James McClure describes in subtle style with excellent insight the apartheid society.

The author neither defends nor condemns — he illuminates, as Lt. Trompie Kramer of the South African police, a true original, goes about solving the slaying of a child. McClure is more interested in crafting a first class mystery novel than in making a moral judgment.

Kramer is assisted by Sgt. Michey Zondi, a Bantu, and McClure vividly describes a collaboration that has definite advantages in the complex South African society.

Don't look for clinches here. On virtually every page the author provides new insights into a character, a situation or a locale. It is, then, much more than just another mystery novel.

McClure's first novel, "The Steam Pig," which won the British Crime Writers' Gold Dagger as best novel of the year, featured the same locale and protagonist. Apparently we can look forward to a series.

Once away from Sydney, screaming winds, treachurous currents, a lunatic wielding a machine gun, and a miscellany of natural cataclysms assail the narrator in breakneck sequence.

The author has done superb homework on locale. Even the gold is real, an unrecovered bounty from the General Grant, sunk in 1886.

The readers problem is breathing between catastrophes. The accelerated pace of the story complicated by the problems of a weakly motivated cast of passengers provides emotional overkill.

In fariness, sailors fascinated by the perils of the sea, especially the rugged area of the Kuckland Islands, might ignore such shortcomings for a challenging yarn of the briny deep.

Touchstone Press, the active little publishing house based in Beaverton, Ore., has issued two new books aimed at outdoors enthusiasts.

"80 Northern Colorado Hiking Trails" is the work of Don and Roberta Lowe, their fourth in a series of such guides, with more to come. Priced at $4.95 and printed in high quality softcover format, with photos and maps, the book proposes hikes that range from a mile and a third to 10 miles, at elevations of from 100 feet to 4,400 feet, and each of them personally covered on foot by the Lowes in 1972.

The co-authors, whose enjoyment of hiking is relflected in their texts and Don Lowe's camera work, figure they have walked some 6,000 miles over trails the last five years, qualifying them as experts.

Also from Touchstone: "55 Oregon Bicycle Trips" by Nick and Elske Jankowski, this one costing $3.95 and describing bike treks from six to 62 miles in length, plus some sound background information for serious long distance cyclists. Again there are illustrations and maps.

CAPRA PRESS of Santa Barbara has two new booklets in its Chapbook Series. Ross Macdonald, just about tops among American crime novel writers and himself a Santa Barbara resident, has produced "On Crime Writing," focusing his expertise upon the genre, analyzing the work of others and offering insight into his own. Leon Elder has done "Hot Tubs: How to Build, Maintain and Enjoy Your Own," a lighthearted yet detailed guide on how to build and enjoy hot tubs — the popular offshoot of Japanese-style soaking. The Macdonald book is $2.50, the Elder book $2.95.

Plants Create Indoor Beauty

Grandmother's antique soup tureen looks great with a Grape Ivy spilling over the side. The huge demijohn, which is big enough for displaying a model ship, looks terrific as a terrarium.

And, the discarded milk can and tall Weeping Fig that's planted in it, transform the bare corner into a thing of beauty.

ALL OF THE above are representative of current indoor gardening practices.

People are growing plants indoors in unprecedented numbers — and in unprecedented types of containers. The enthusiast that grows a wee fern in a perfume bottle, or the individual that crowds five different kinds of plants into a crock that will accommodate but one or two, resist such horticultural principles as good drainage and adeqauate spacing. They are interested more in immediate beauty and enjoyment — and are involved in a hard-to-explain relationship between people and plants.

For some, the relationship is ultra-personal; nobody is terming such interest as a passing fancy. As people are becoming aware of the role of plants in our lives and environment, the greater the interest there is in plants suitable for growing indoors.

Successful indoor plant growing is dependent on many things — including the planter mix used in containers. Ordinary soil or heavy potting soils can pack, or sour, in a relative short time. The ideal planting medium is a rich, light planter mix — one which duplicates the tropical growing habitat of exotic indoor plants.

NURSERIES HAVE ready-to-use planter mixes for indoor plants, and many offer for sale a soil mix that incorporates organic ingredients to help provide drainage and promote good growth.

Watering and feeding are also important considerations in growing plants indoors. Very important to the health and long life of a plant is the amount of light it receives.

The amount of natural daylight that enters a home through the windows is only a small fraction of the light outdoors. Outdoors, on a clear summer day, the noon-time sun may produce as much as 10,000 foot-candles of light (a foot-candle being the amount of light cast by a candle on a surface one foot away). Inside a home, plants in a sunny window may receive only 4,000 foot-candles. A few feet from the window, the level may drop to 200 foot-candles or less. Even further inside the interior of a room the average light may range between 10 and 100 foot-candles.

A BOOK CAN be read comfortably in a room illuminated by the equivalent of 50 foot-candles of light. Many indoor plants tolerate similar low light levels.

Your nurseryman may not be able to relate to foot-candles, but he can show you plants for most any indoor situation — where little light exists, or where available light is no problem, and growth habitat is more of a consideration. Most nurseries also offer an attractive supply of containers — ranging from the traditional to far out creations that fill contemporary interests. Plant-and-container combinations do enhance the beauty of indoor rooms and serve as living accessories to enrich the environment and lives of those who grow them.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen has a four-page brochure, which provides cultural information along with many pictures of popular indoor plants, which it will send to interested persons. For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to "Plants Create Beauty Indoors," 1005 8th St., Sacramento, Calif., 95814.

Water — A Must For All Roses

The long, wet rainy season of late 1972-early 1973 proved one thing to Californians beyond any doubt: Roses like water.

Rose gardeners have enjoyed bumper crops of bloom and the bushes themselves have never looked healthier.

If a lesson has been learned from this, it is time to apply the principles. Summer is here and watering should be the first consideration in the rose garden. Roses resent wet feet, but without adequate moisture they cannot take up nutrients from the soil nor continue to push out new growth on which new blooms will be carried.

REGULAR WATERING shouid be the objective. Be sure it's thorough enough to penetrate deep to the roots.

Some gardeners apply a thick summer mulch around the plants. Nurseries offer ready-to-use organic mulches which not only conserve moisture and reduce watering, but control weeds, as well.

Feeding is a second item to consider in the rose garden. Light monthly applications of a commercial Rose Food are preferred to periodic heavy feedings. There are both dry and liquid forms of fertilizer to encourage sturdy growth and bloom.

INSECT PESTS can invade the rose garden in summer, hence controlling the invaders is also an important consideration during the warm months. They can appear seemingly overnight to feed on new growth and reduce the quality and vigor of foliage or, the entire plant, depending upon the insect.

Mildew and rust are also more or less prevelant in summer.

When it comes to insect and disease control and growing roses in the home garden, many opinions exist. Whether one takes the organic approach, prefers biological controls, or relies on the modern plant protection chemicals, the California Assn. of Nurserymen points out it is usually necessary to take immediate action to preserve the beauty and quality of the plants.

Being prepared to take a course of action, along with providing adequate water, and monthly feedings, can assure continued and plenteous color from roses.

Hit 'Em While They're Still Asleep

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

One thing I've discovered about the bugs that prey on our garden, they're late sleepers who don't like to get up in the morning.

Who does? Well, I do. Just after sunrise is the fresh, fragrant hour when a garden is most exhilarating. Everything but the bugs is stirring to life.

That's when I find clusters of sucking pests underneath the leaves, sleeping off last night's binge of plant juice. And the chewers are sleepily digesting the feast on which they gorged.

If we must have bugs of prey, I like to catch them in stupor. A couple of passes with the hose spray gun, nozzle set to shoot upward to douse the undersides of the leaves with Isotox and the bugs begin curling up or dropping to the ground. They're too dopey to fly or crawl at that hour of the morn.

THERE'S ANOTHER advantage to this early-bug spraying, as I call it. The leaves are cool and fresh. The Malathion and Isotox, my old reliables among the insecticides, never burn the edges of tender new leaves, as sometimes happens with mid-day spraying. Less spray seems to go farther early in the morning.

Just why, I don't know, but that's been my experience over many years.

There's another kind of early-bug spraying that I practice. It may be contrary to the book, whose authorities advise spraying only as a last resort when the insect population has exploded and is threatening the very life of the plants. I don't agree.

MY STRATEGY is to spray as a first resort, not as a last resort. That's when I spot one bug hiding under a fuchsia leaf or on a rose bud. So far, I've never found just one bug; there are always two bugs or multiples thereof. They do what comes naturally and in a few days I find a hundred bugs, or maybe a thousand.

Before that happens I give them a hose spray gun shower bath, which wipes out the herd while it is few in numbers. This early-bug spraying saves a lot of later spraying. Meantime, the plants have retained much sap that goes into making more gorgeous flowers.

I just haven't been able to see the logic of waiting until plants are fighting a losing battle before hitting the insect pests with sprays. In our garden, the suckers and chewers prefer lush plants that evidently have more delicious juices. I want my plants to stay lush and I want the delicious juices to go into blossoms, not into insect stomachs.

Next time you indulge in a soft drink — especially one with citric acid — pour a bit into your vase of cut flowers. They will enjoy it too.

It seems that the citric acid and carbonation help control micro-organisms affecting stem firmness. And the sugar in the pop improves the life of the flowers.

The way to do it is to mix equal parts of water and the soft drink, add half a teaspoon of bleach to each quart of the mixture. The bleach fights growth of bacteria, say University of Michigan horticulturists.

Your Garden Before And After Vacation

If you are planning to be gone on vacation for a week, or less, chances are good no special help may be needed in your garden.

Thoroughly soaking the garden should carry it through your week's absence, unless you have a quantity of tubbed or potted plants. These will need watering on the same schedule you follow. Make the job easier for the caretaker by moving all the containers into one area where it will be easier to water them.

You'll be less concerned about the garden back home if you've mulched around moisture-loving shrubs such as camellias, fuchsias and azaleas.

If the vacation is an extended one, be sure to leave a detailed list of instructions for the interim gardener. Walk the garden with him to make sure he understands what he is expected to do. Specify how long sprinklers should be run.

Caution the caretaker, too, about over-watering.

When you return from vacation there are a few quick steps to follow to revive any garden. First, mow the lawn. Then start running the sprinklers. Next, feed the lawn and the garden. Pull obvious weeds and, finally, fill-in garden bare spots with quick-color annuals like marigolds, zinnias and periwinkle.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENER

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Begonias are shade plants, but don't overdo it. Deep, dense shade makes for spindly plants, which often drop their buds.

✓Set out bedding plants for late summer bloom. Petunias, Marigolds, Asters, Zinnias, Dwarf Dahlias, Periwinkle, and Scarlet Sage are available in nursery flats.

✓Keep up a regular watering schedule, being sure to soak deeply. Frequent watering of Azaleas, Camellias, and other moisture-loving plants may be necessary. Don't neglect hanging baskets.

✓Use a canvas soaker on sloping lawns, or banks, if water from the sprinkler runs off as fast as you put it on.

✓Add interest to summer barbecues with home-grown herbs. Garlic, Dill, Parsley, Mint, Basil, plus a host of others, are easy to grow in the garden, or in pots where they can be displayed as patio decorations.

A Screen To Seclude The Sideyard

Control of wheeled and foot traffic approaching a home can be achieved by judicious placement of screening that also provides privacy for outdoor living.

Outside partitioning is especially helpful to visitors when two entrances are plainly visible from the front. And it can enclose a side patio as a pleasurable bonus.

Wood materials and patterned design will erase that walled-out effect guests might have felt, and reflect the host's friendly concern while steering them to the proper entrance.

AT ONE HILLSIDE home, a driveway curves up from the street to the house. Visitors parking by the garage had a more direct view of the side door leading to the utility room and kitchen than they did of the front entry.

Addition of a solid screen of one-by-four inch V-groove western cedar boards on a frame of four-by-four-inch cedar concealed the kitchen entry and directed visitors to the front entry, recessed and jogged under an overhang.

For added interest, the screen was built in two sections, separated about three feet, and an ornamental pine was planted in the opening. The screen also is used as a backdrop for other plantings.

The screen and tree partially enclose a patio area off the kitchen large enough for a table and chairs for informal meals. In one corner the screen makes an in-ground garbage can less conspicuous.

THE PATIO ALSO is a pleasant place to sit and read, out of the wind.

Wood screens are versatile in landscaping, and varying the design makes them useful in different situations. They can be built solid, or the boards can be slightly spaced, louvered, or set in other patterns and combinations of sizes.

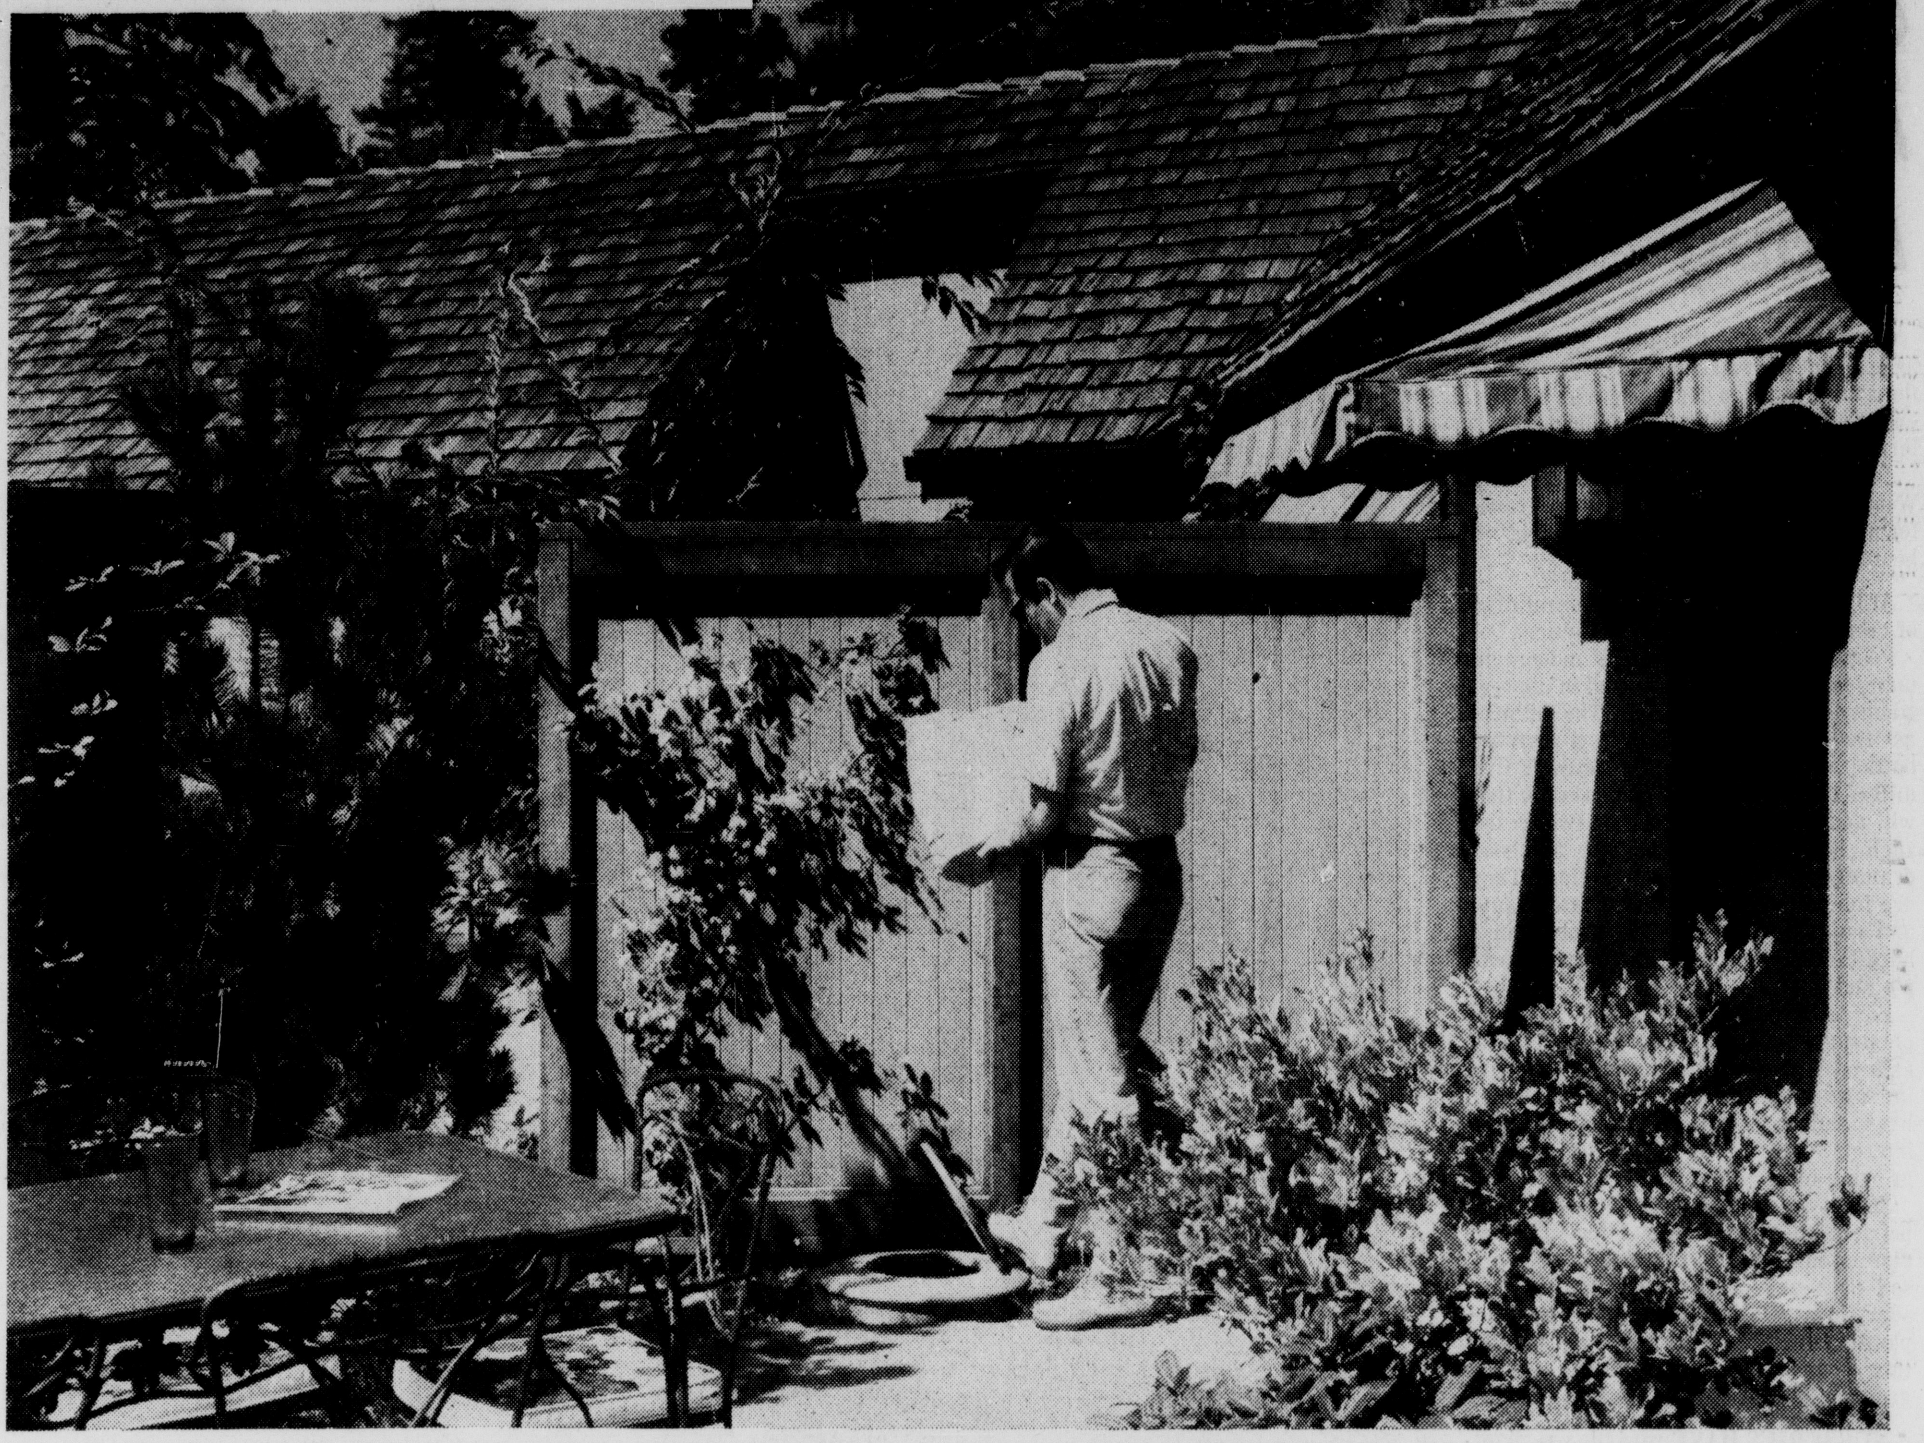
Screens will shield a window from the street, stretch out the horizontal lines of a house, create separate living areas in a flat back yard, and add beauty and utility in many other ways.

A LATH HOUSE FOR YOU, PLANTS

An enlarged lath house with benches or chairs makes a serene garden sitting place as well as a spot for propagating shade-loving plants.

The roof should be larger and higher than for a simple lath house, and can be constructed of one-by-two inch Douglas fir or western red cedar instead of thinner lath material.

Walls of the spaced one-by-twos are nailed directly to posts of four-by-four inch cedar set in the ground. The floor is raked gravel.



A SOLID SCREEN built of one-by-four boards on a frame of four-by-four posts has been combined with plants to separate the patio next to the kitchen door from the entry drive along the side of the house. It helps direct visitors to the main entry, which is at the front of the house beneath the overhang. And, not incidentally, it blocks the view of the sunken garbage can.

The Ventilating Fan Can Do A Big Job For You

Strategically placed, its whirling blades can spell the difference between fresh-smelling air and stale odors inside the home.

By DOROTHEA BROOKS

If your guests can tell you had onions for dinner, or that your husband's smoking cigars again; if there are times you just have to throw open all the windows, no matter that it's dead of winter, or that the air conditioner is laboring to keep out a heat wave, give some thought to ventilating fans.

Chosen and installed properly, in rooms where there is an odor or moisture problem, or where heat builds up, ventilating fans can keep air circulating and keep it sweet and fresh.

CHARLES KENNEY, who concerns himself with residential ventilating products at Scovill Manufacturing Company's Nu-Tone Division in Cincinnati, suggests ventilating fans for:

Kitchens, laundries, bathrooms, where heat and airborne odors, grease and smoke, as well as moisture, are a problem.

Basements, which may be underground with poor natural ventilation and the likelihood of dampness.

Attics, where air often is stagnant and summer temperatures soar.

Rooms, such as family rooms, where people congregate for parties and smoke and heat may be a problem.

Workshops and hobby rooms, garages, where air may contain pollutants that not only are unpleasant but may be dangerous as well, such as certain sprays, fumes from paints, solvents and adhesives, and carbon monoxide.

KENNEY SAYS there are two basic types of ventilating fans. One is mounted inside the room on the wall or in the ceiling, and can be included in combination with a light or with a light and a supplementary heat source. There also are exterior mounted wall or roof units which leave completely silent the room where the ventilator is located.

He says: "Location is the key to proper use of a ventilating fan. Ideally, a built-in wall or ceiling fan should be placed directly across the room from an incoming supply of air, such as a doorway. The moving air will ventilate the entire room as it is drawn through the exhaust fan to the outside . . ."

Kenney warns against "shortcircuiting" of air movement. This is particularly true in bathrooms where tub and toilet areas should lie in the path of the air movement as it travels to the exhaust. Short-circuiting, he explains, means the air cuts a corner instead of venting the entire room.

ATTIC FANS CAN be particularly valuable. "An attic cooling fan placed on the roof," Kenney says, "circulates air through the attic by bringing it in through openings in eaves, overhang or gables."

"This results in more evenly balanced tempertures throughout the home, and protects building materials from deteriorating effects of excessive heat and moisture." Kenney says.

"Air conditioning equipment operates less frequently and for shorter periods of time. With such a fan, the whole house, air conditioned or not, will stay more comfortable."

In the kitchen, Kenney explained, a range hood that has a funneling action is superior to a wall or ceiling fan.

THERE ARE THREE types of range hoods:

Ducted, with built-in power unit; will exhaust smoke, odors, grease-laden air, moisture and some heat.

Ducted, with exterior-mounted roof or wall fan; not only draws all air contaminants or effects of cooking to the outside, but is quieter and makes more efficient use of its power than the fan motor built into the hood.

Non-ducted; stops smoke, grease and odor with a bank of charcoal, fiber glass or aluminum filters, then feeds cleansed air back into the kitchen.

Kenney says the size of a ventilating fan depends on the particular circumstances. You would need a different fan for use in a baby's room where diaper odor might be the problem and a workshop where spray painting is done.

EACH ROOM SHOULD be checked if necessary, to be sure the right fan is picked for the job to be done, and that it is installed properly. Even one or two fans, in the right places, can make for easier breathing.

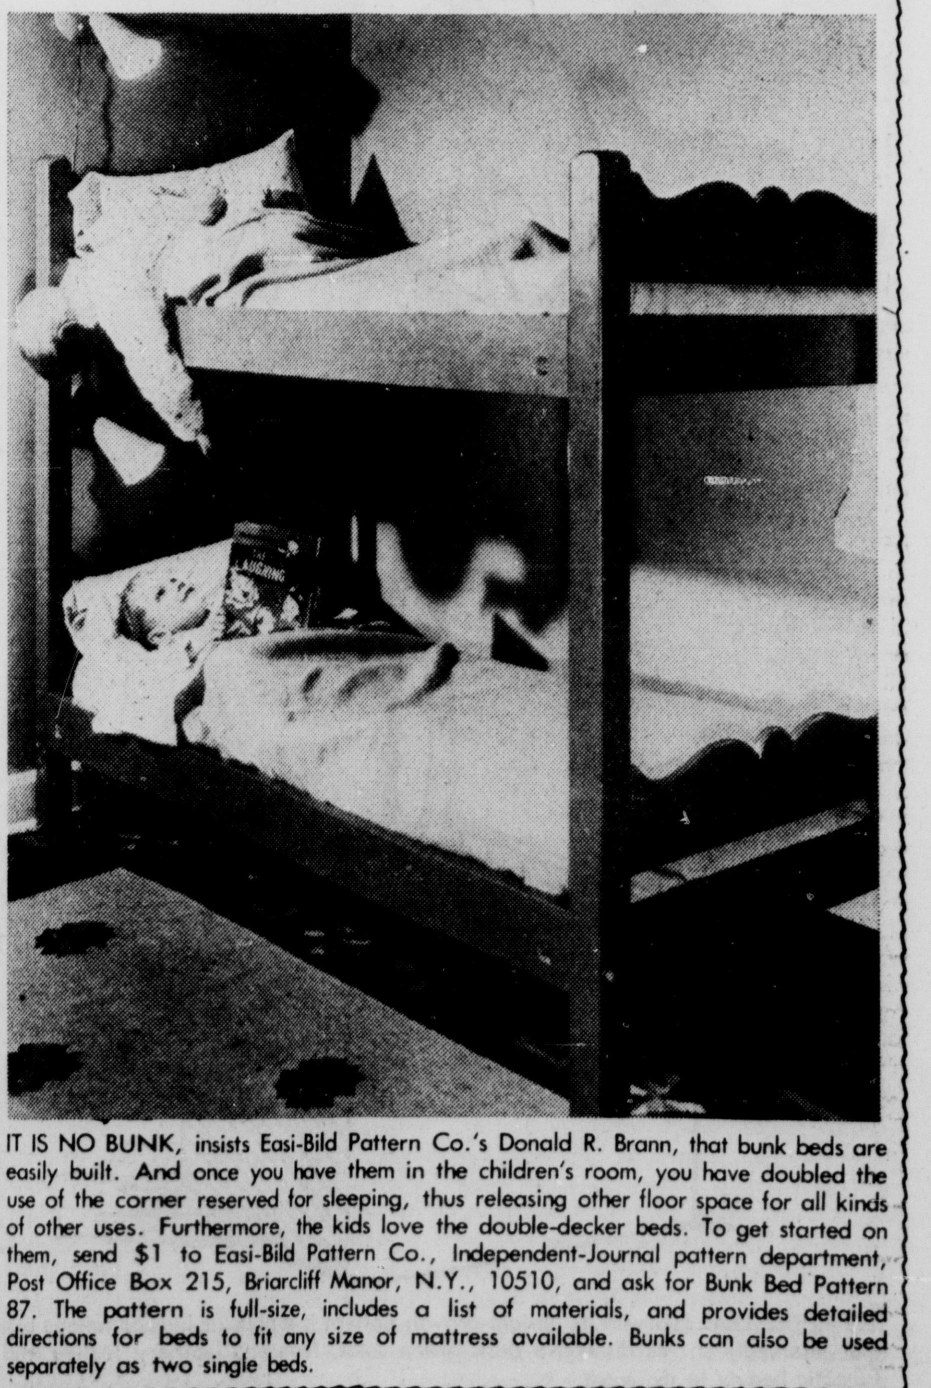
Bring New Life To An Old Trunk

Redoing an old trunk for decorative purposes?

Rid the trunk of its musty smell, and significantly increase its usefulness, by lining it with aromatic red cedar lining.

The beautiful wood, tantalizingly pungent, will provide moth-free storage when all interior surfaces are covered. Aromatic red cedar has a tongue-and-groove feature that simplifies installation, even by the neophyte do-it-yourselfer.

DOUBLE THE SLEEPING



IT IS NO BUNK, insists Easi-Bild Pattern Co.'s Donald R. Brann, that bunk beds are easily built. And once you have them in the children's room, you have doubled the use of the corner reserved for sleeping, thus releasing other floor space for all kinds of other uses. Furthermore, the kids love the double-decker beds. To get started on them, send $1 to Easi-Bild Pattern Co., Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Bunk Bed Pattern 87. The pattern is full-size, includes a list of materials, and provides detailed directions for beds to fit any size of mattress available. Bunks can also be used separately as two single beds.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

An Office In The House Can Qualify As Necessity Today

By CAROLYN MURRAY

There are many kinds of homework.

Some of it we expect to perform at home, so there's little mental adjustment and physical discomfort involved. But occasionally we have to steal our precious at-home time in order to accomplish an office-oriented task. And that's what seems to throw a monkey wrench into the peace and quiet of the family lifestyle.

Part of the problem is that few of us have even considered an at-home office as a family necessity. Yet shouldn't such a space become as common as the dining room?

WHERE WOULD you set up a home office if you decided that it would really solve lots of problems for the family?

I'd probably choose the master bedroom first, the dining room second. Since both rooms are used primarily during specific hours, the person planning the homework could have a reasonable schedule to follow. And family traffic during daylight hours would discomfort the worker a minimum amount of the time.

A good home office requires two basic kinds of space. One is storage space. This can be below-counter storage or be wall-hung.

THE WALL-HUNG seems sensible, since often we waste hundreds of square feet of space on the wall or, at best, just hang a painting right smack in the middle of it. Shelves and storage cupboards can surround a painting or important wall decoration if you don't want to remove it.

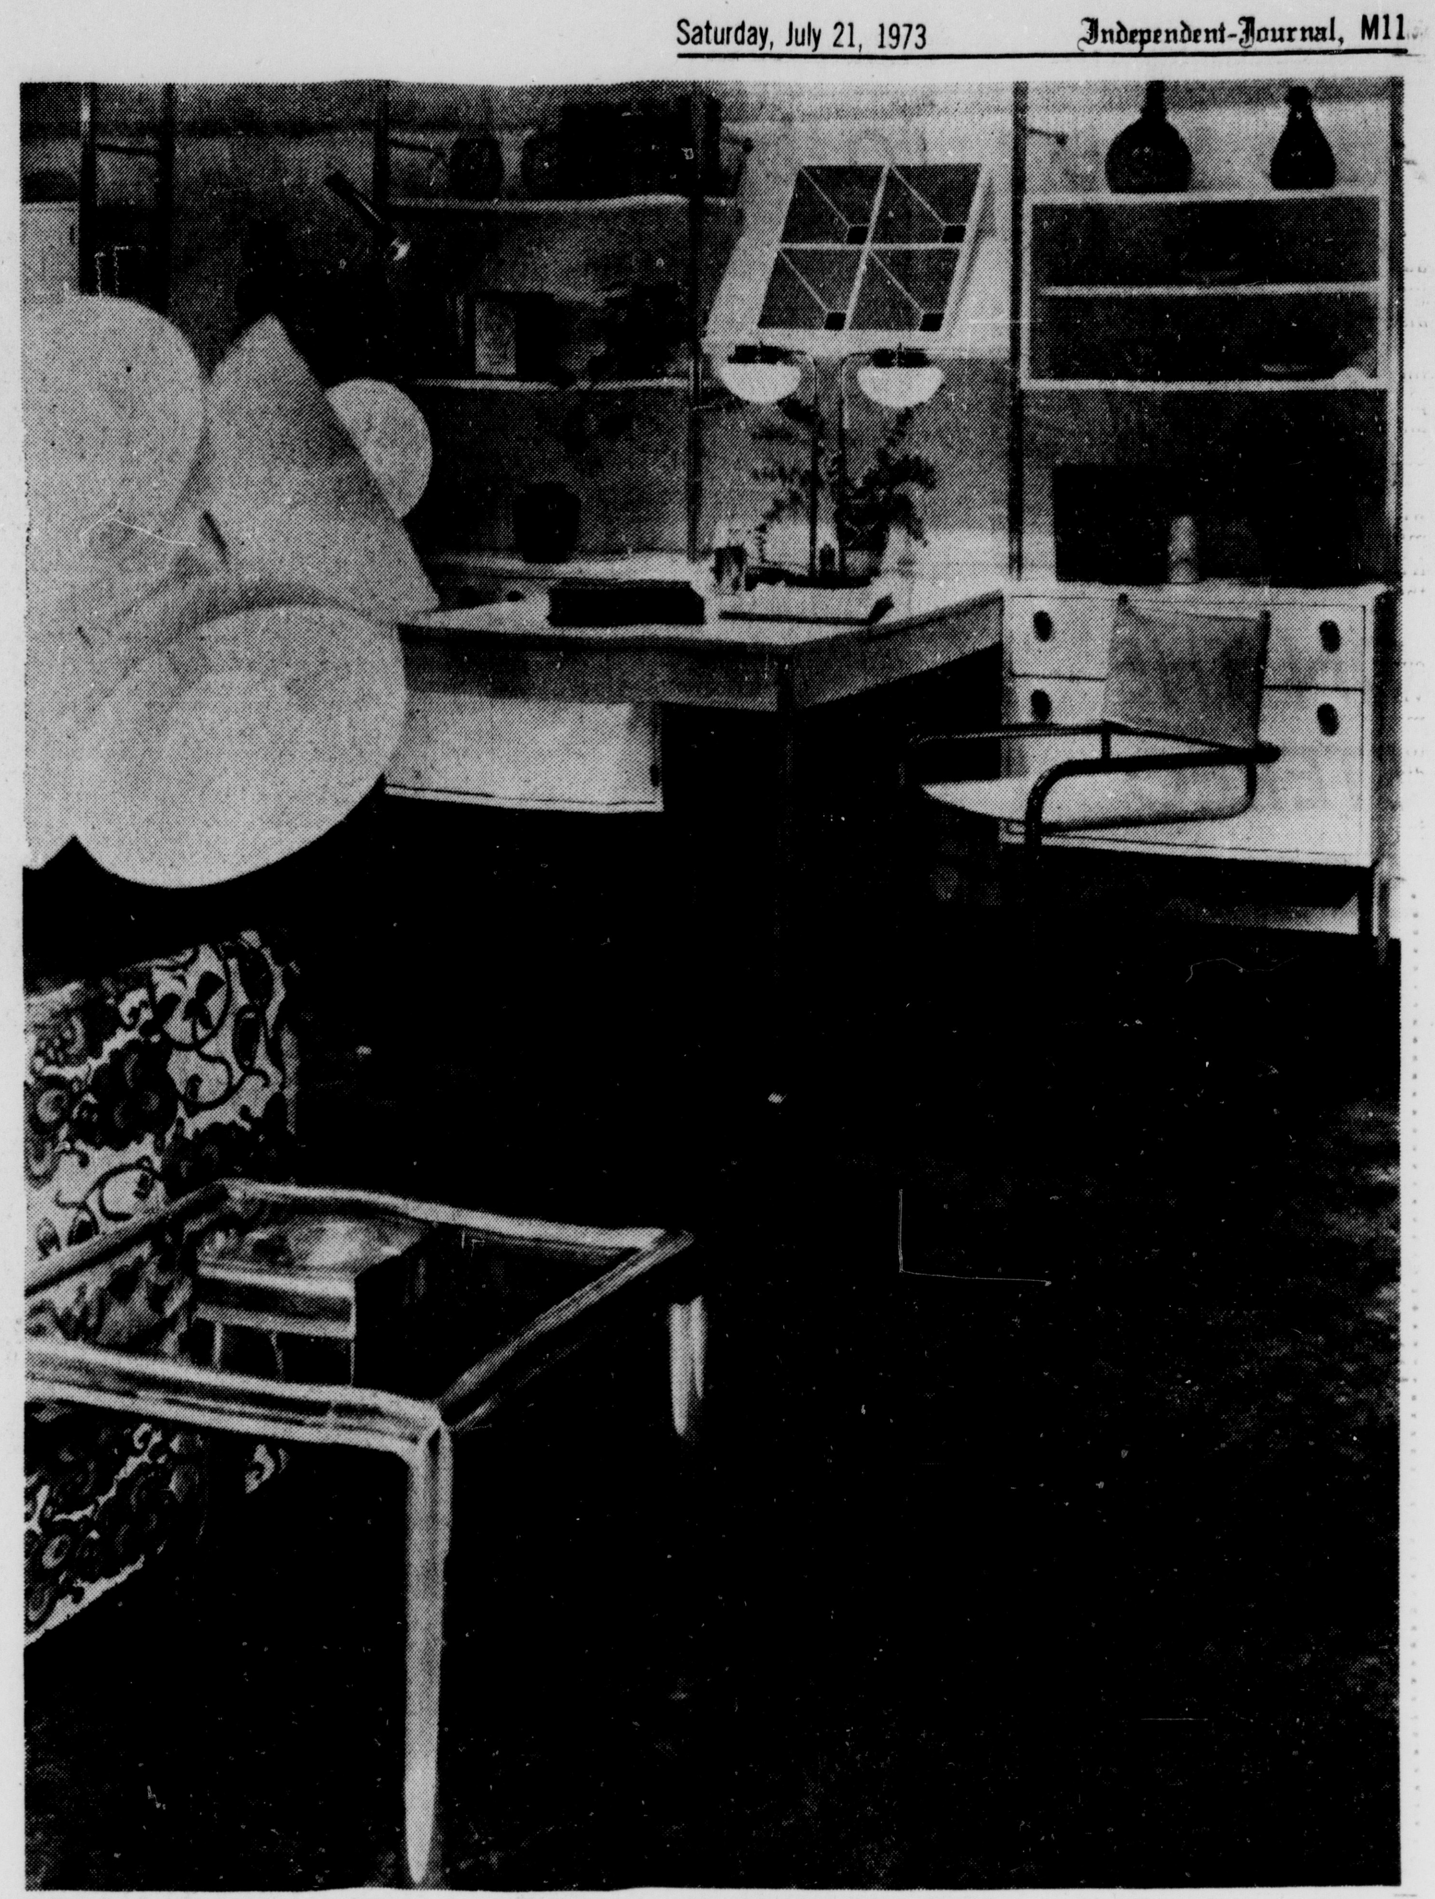
You'll find the whole wall looks better and is more coordinated if you use this device.

You'll also need floor space for a desk against the wall or in an island position connected, as conveniently as possible, to the storage. (I prefer the island, since it gives freedom to walk around the space, and allows another person to sit opposite or assist in the work session.)

A QUIET environment is important to at-home work periods, so a carpeted area is perhaps better than one with surfaces that multiply and reverberate sounds. Even the noise of a typewriter can interfere with the enjoyment of television viewing in the next room.

The at-home office shown at right was installed in a guest bedroom, right off the main living room area. The sofa is a convertible one, so there is more floor space available than in an ordinary bedroom. A new kind of carpeting was installed and it's made of exceptionally dense carpet yarns woven of rugged and practical Antron II nylon.

It has a cut-pile surface that almost simulates fur. So there is a plush luxury look — but none of the tender loving care required. Called Fortale, it's made by Karastan Rug Mills of New York and has been popularly received for heavy-duty residential use as well as for office buildings. And it just naturally soaks up sound — a superior aid to keeping the at-home worker in tune with his family.



EVEN IF YOU RESENT the working, you can't help feeling comfortable in this well-planned at-home workroom. One wall has been transformed into an office through the imaginative use of Directional's modular units. And the floor is covered with a new and rugged Karastan carpet that feels like fur to the feet. If one must work at home, why not do it in surroundings such as these?

Extra Room Offers Ideal Opportunity To Show Creativity

By ANDY LANG

Nowhere else in the house is there more opportunity to exercise your imagination as a decorator than in the so-called extra room.

While you might hesitate about making any departures from the norm in places like the living room and dining room, you can proceed boldly in the extra room. Sometimes it's the family room, sometimes a guest room, sometimes a former nursery, sometimes a hobby room.

If it's a room not yet in existence — such as one in an attic or basement you intend to finish — so much the better. For then you can start from scratch without the necessity of making changes.

I HAVE SEEN some excellent examples of imaginative decor in recent months. You might think of some of them as "far out", but most of them were better in the seeing than the talking.

One neighbor of mine has an entire wall in an attic covered with colorful tile — but not wall tile. He used the same vinyl asbestos floor tile as he had used on the floor. The effect was less garish than you might suppose and, in a room intended for young persons, it satisfied the youthful desire for something different.

Many one-wall treatments are possible.

A KIND OF "family album wall" was striking and interesting. The home owner had taken about a dozen photos of the type usually seen in a family album, had framed them and hung them in — where else? — the family room. The trick here is to select a limited number of good photographs. Too many might be overpowering.

Novel paint effects can be achieved by putting on wall paint, then flicking it with a whiskbroom, a brush, a rag or even a feather duster while the paint is still wet. If any member of the family has any artistic talent, a wall mural is another possibility.

In finishing a basement, it is sometimes difficult to hide certain of the plumbing lines. They can be effectively disguised by wrapping bamboo blinds around them and then staining them to match the walls.

OTHER POSSIBILITIES — a complete room in a special decor that could be nautical, Mediterranean, in the period of the Gay Nineties or an old English tavern.

Pick your own "thing" and then shop around for the paraphernelia that will give the scene authenticity.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," helpful in making those everyday repairs. You can get it by sending $1 to Andy Lang at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666).

HERE ARE YOUR ANSWERS —

By ANDY LANG

Q. We have an old player piano which we use for playing music rolls. While we don't use the piano keys, they have a yellowish appearance which we haven't been able to change with soap and water. We'd like to try something stronger on them, but are afraid it will only make them worse. Is there something we can use on them to take off the yellow without damaging the keys?

A. — You can safely rub the keys with denatured alcohol. But there's no guarantee it will take off the yellow. Sometimes it does, sometimes it doesn;t.

Q. — We bought some unfinished patio furniture. The wood is white pine. We'd like to varnish it. Will the varnish hold up, since the patio is exposed to the weather all the time?

A. — It depends on what you mean by "hold up." A spar or exterior varnish must be used. But experience shows that no varnish will retain its initial appearance as long as a good exterior paint. You may have to revarnish the furniture within a year or two.

Q. — I want to put down an underground sprinkling system under our very large lawn. I have heard that some communities do not allow anyone except a plumber to do anything to the water lines. Would this fall under a rule like that?

A. — I have never yet run into any situation where there is a prohibition against the do-it-yourself installation of an underground sprinkler. But there are so many thousands of differing codes within states, cities, towns and villages that I hesitate to make an over-all statement about it. You can easily check with your local authorities.

All The Home Handyman Needs To Know

"The Complete Wise Home Handyman's Guide" has sold more than three million copies since it was first published in the late 1940s.

Now this bible of the do-it-yourselfer, edited by Hubbard Cobb, known for his books and radio show, "Fix It Yourself," has been reissued in a revised, updated edition by the Thomas Y. Crowell Co.

The price is $7.95 for an awful lot of helpful guidance.

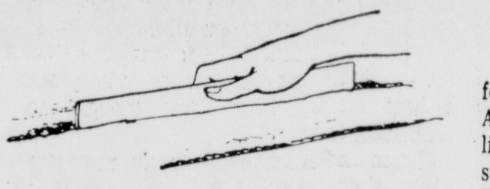
From unclogging the drain to fastening pictures to the wall, from painting ceramic tile to laying cement sidewalk, from building shelves to insulating an attic, from modernizing the bathroom to plugging the basement leak, this big book covers the field well, with text and drawings. It offers, too, some advice for the house buyer: "If the house is to have its own septic treatment plant, ask to see a percolation test report for the site where your house is to be located." And: "Wood shingles are considerably more expensive than the asphalt type and indicate, when used, that the builder is not pinching pennies."

But the great value of the book is for those who already have that home, and are seeking to hold it together. In these days when professional services come high, the man who can unclog a stopped-up sewer or weatherstrip the windows or reupholster the eay chairs is going to be dollars — a good many dollars — ahead of the game. But he had better know what he is doing. Hence, "The Complete Home Handyman's Guide." D.K.

SHADES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN

SUMMER BRINGS with its sunshine an almost irresistible urge to get out onto the water. If you are a yacht-owner, your problem is solved. But if you are a youngster and with a father not that fortunately endowed, then you have the problem of what to use as your watercraft. Huck Finn and pal Tom Sawyer had a good idea when they built themselves a raft. You can build this modern version of their creation with a minimum investment of time and money. Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., and ask for Huck Finn Raft Pattern No. 534. You will get along with the pattern a complete list of the required materials, plus step-by-step directions. It is a project the youngster can tackle for himself with only a very little help from dad. Even without the two inner tubes lashed to the plywood underside, the styrofoam flotation will support 150 pounds. With the inner tubes, it will carry as many as four pint-sized sailors. The whole thing weighs only 50 pounds, and can be transported easily on top of the family car. What you have is a perfect swimming and diving platform for your pool, but also one that you can take along with you to the lake or shore for fishing or just plain fun. And, of course, there is always rafting on the creek — with proper supervision. It's a stable, safe craft, used sensibly. There are some other Steve Ellingson patterns designed for your water pleasure that you might want to try. Pattern 450, at $1, is a 10-foot sailboard. Pattern 398, at $2, is a five-foot sailboat. So if rafting isn't your game, then how about a spot of sailing?

Line Drawer With Cedar



There are all kinds of plans available for adding drawer space under twin beds. And no matter what plan you decide on, line the drawer of your under-the-bed storage unit with aromatic red cedar. This will provide storage for your moth-free linens and woolens.

The aroma of the red cedar, which paralyzes moths in the larvae stage, eliminates the need for poisonous moth deterrents. Cedar lining is available at most building materials stores.

But occasionally we have to steal our precious at-home time in order to accomplish an office-oriented task. And that's what seems to throw a monkey wrench into the peace and quiet of the family lifestyle.

Part of the problem is that few of us have even considered an at-home office as a family necessity. Yet shouldn't such a space become as common as the dining room?

WHERE WOULD you set up a home office if you decided that it would really solve lots of problems for the family?

I'd probably choose the master bedroom first, the dining room second. Since both rooms are used primarily during specific hours, the person planning the homework could have a reasonable schedule to follow. And family traffic during daylight hours would discomfort the worker a minimum amount of the time.

A good home office requires two basic kinds of space. One is storage space. This can be below-counter storage or be wall-hung.

THE WALL-HUNG seems sensible, since often we waste hundreds of square feet of space on the wall or, at best, just hang a painting right smack in the middle of it. Shelves and storage cupboards can surround a painting or important wall decoration if you don't want to remove it.

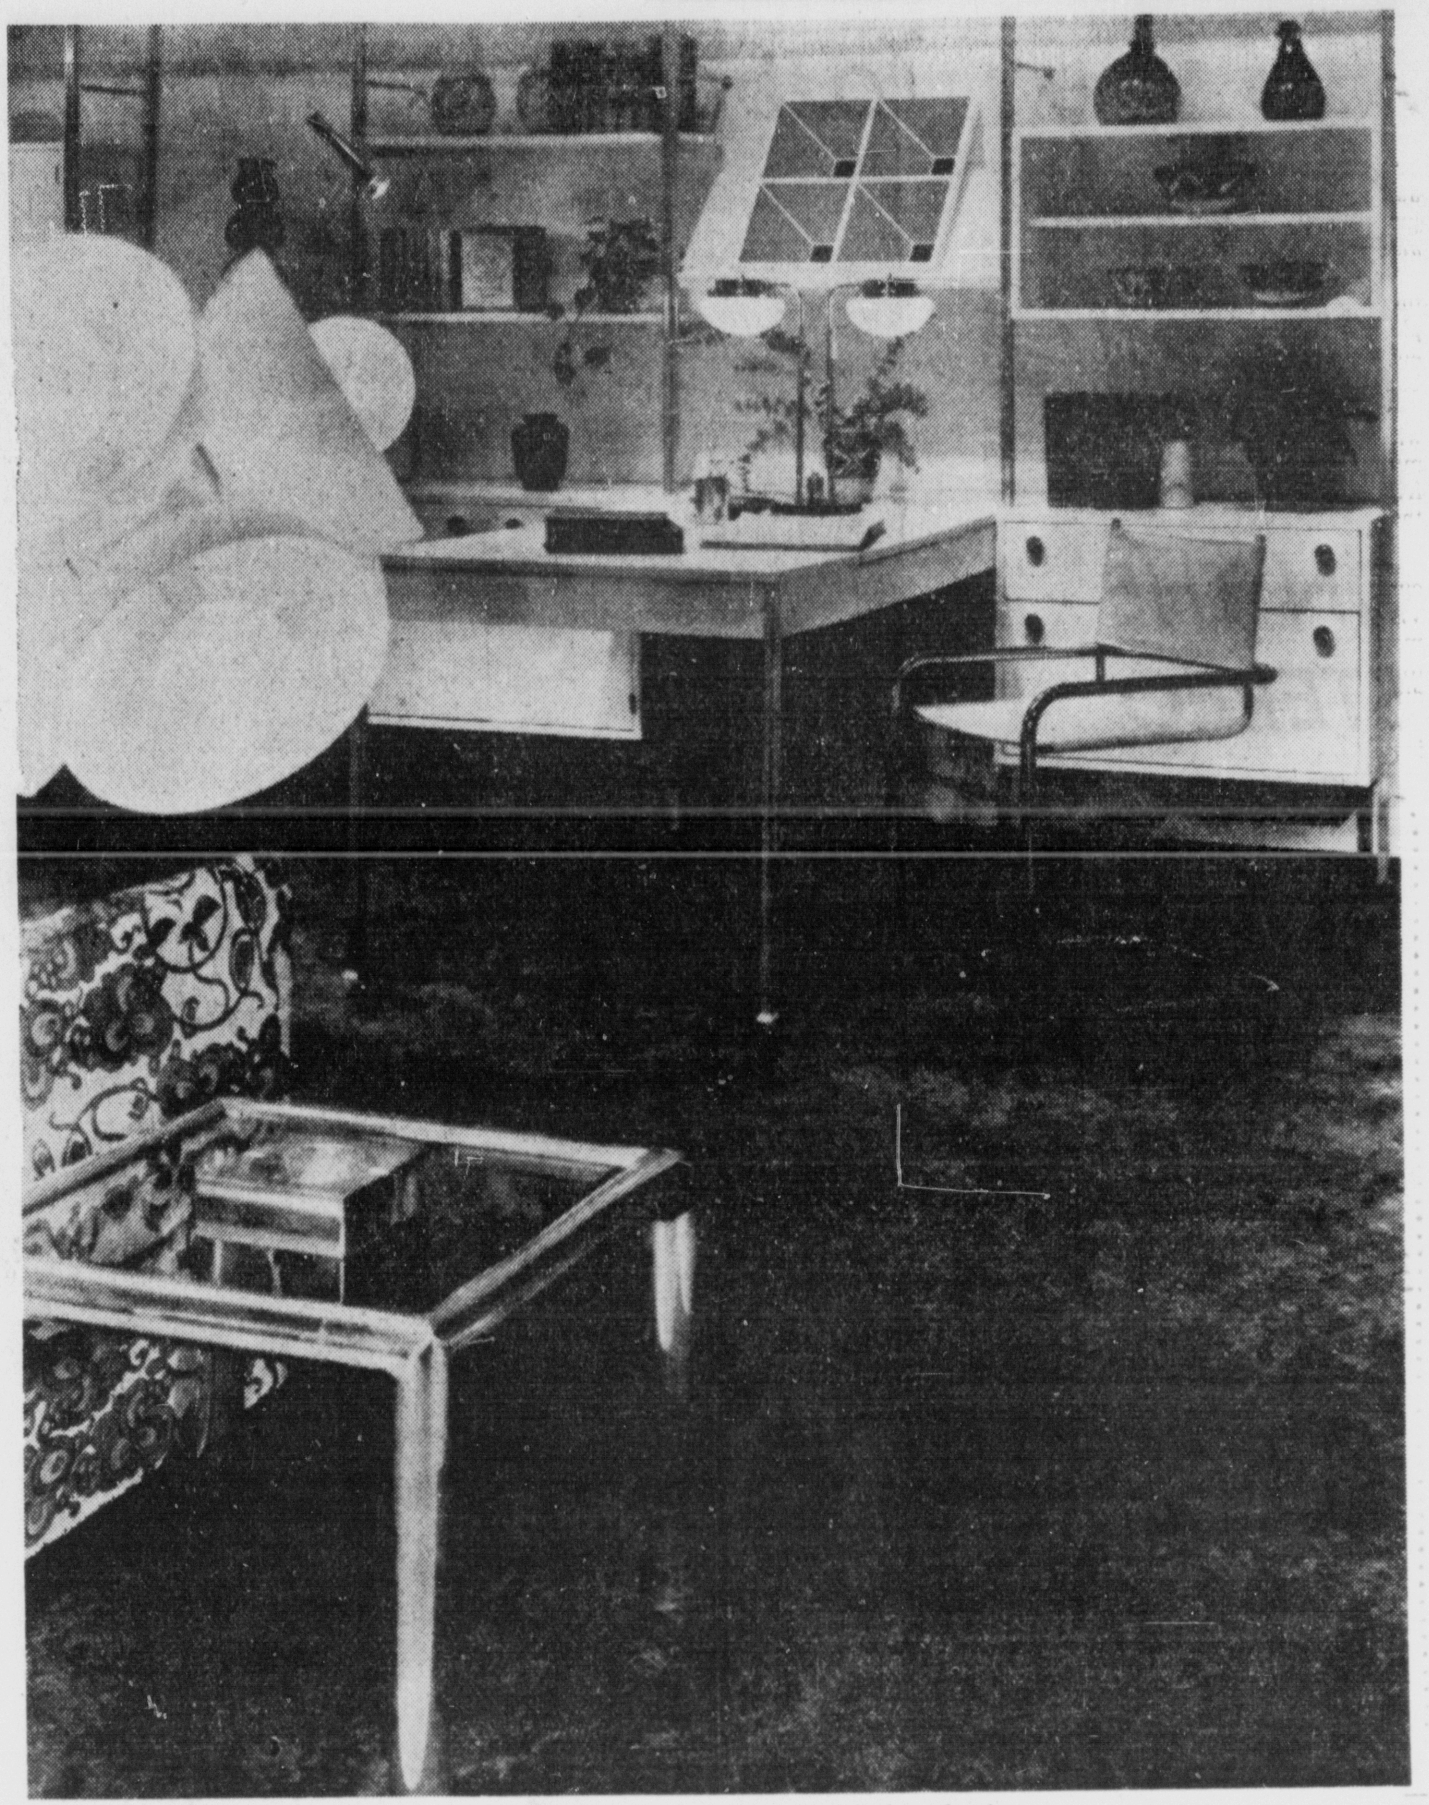
You'll find the whole wall looks better and is more coordinated if you use this device.

You'll also need floor space for a desk against the wall or in an island position connected, as conveniently as possible, to the storage. (I prefer the island, since it gives freedom to walk around the space, and allows another person to sit opposite or assist in the work session.)

A QUIET environment is important to at-home work periods, so a carpeted area is perhaps better than one with surfaces that multiply and reverberate sounds. Even the noise of a typewriter can interfere with the enjoyment of television viewing in the next room.

The at-home office shown at right was installed in a guest bedroom, right off the main living room area. The sofa is a convertible one, so there is more floor space available than in an ordinary bedroom. A new kind of carpeting was installed and it's made of exceptionally dense carpet yarns woven of rugged and practical Antron II nylon.

It has a cut-pile surface that almost simulates fur. So there is a plush luxury look — but none of the tender loving care required. Called Fortale, it's made by Karastan Rug Mills of New York and has been popularly received for heavy-duty residential use as well as for office buildings. And it just naturally soaks up sound — a superior aid to keeping the at-home worker in tune with his family.



EVEN IF YOU RESENT the working, you can't help feeling comfortable in this well-planned at-home workroom. One wall has been transformed into an office through the imaginative use of Directional's modular units. And the floor is covered with a new and rugged Karastan carpet that feels like fur to the feet. If one must work at home, why not do it in surroundings such as these?

Extra Room Offers Ideal Opportunity To Show Creativity

By ANDY LANG

Nowhere else in the house is there more opportunity to exercise your imagination as a decorator than in the so-called extra room.

While you might hesitate about making any departures from the norm in places like the living room and dining room, you can proceed boldly in the extra room. Sometimes it's the family room, sometimes a guest room, sometimes a former nursery, sometimes a hobby room.

If it's a room not yet in existence — such as one in an attic or basement you intend to finish — so much the better. For then you can start from scratch without the necessity of making changes.

I HAVE SEEN some excellent examples of imaginative decor in recent months. You might think of some of them as "far out", but most of them were better in the seeing than the talking.

One neighbor of mine has an entire wall in an attic covered with colorful tile — but not wall tile. He used the same vinyl asbestos floor tile as he had used on the floor. The effect was less garish than you might suppose and, in a room intended for young persons, it satisfied the youthful desire for something different.

Many one-wall treatments are possible.

A KIND OF "family album wall" was striking and interesting. The home owner had taken about a dozen photos of the type usually seen in a family album, had framed them and hung them in — where else? — the family room. The trick here is to select a limited number of good photographs. Too many might be overpowering.

Novel paint effects can be achieved by putting on wall paint, then flicking it with a whiskbroom, a brush, a rag or even a feather duster while the paint is still wet. If any member of the family has any artistic talent, a wall mural is another possibility.

In finishing a basement, it is sometimes difficult to hide certain of the plumbing lines. They can be effectively disguised by wrapping bamboo blinds around them and then staining them to match the walls.

OTHER POSSIBILITIES — a complete room in a special decor that could be nautical, Mediterranean, in the period of the Gay Nineties or an old English tavern.

Pick your own "thing" and then shop around for the paraphernelia that will give the scene authenticity.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," helpful in making those everyday repairs. You can get it by sending $1 to Andy Lang at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666).

HERE ARE YOUR ANSWERS —

By ANDY LANG

Q. We have an old player piano which we use for playing music rolls. While we don't use the piano keys, they have a yellowish appearance which we haven't been able to change with soap and water. We'd like to try something stronger on them, but are afraid it will only make them worse. Is there something we can use on them to take off the yellow without damaging the keys?

A. — You can safely rub the keys with denatured alcohol. But there's no guarantee it will take off the yellow. Sometimes it does, sometimes it doesn;t.

Q. — We bought some unfinished patio furniture. The wood is white pine. We'd like to varnish it. Will the varnish hold up, since the patio is exposed to the weather all the time?

A. — It depends on what you mean by "hold up." A spar or exterior varnish must be used. But experience shows that no varnish will retain its initial appearance as long as a good exterior paint. You may have to revarnish the furniture within a year or two.

Q. — I want to put down an underground sprinkling system under our very large lawn. I have heard that some communities do not allow anyone except a plumber to do anything to the water lines. Would this fall under a rule like that?

A. — I have never yet run into any situation where there is a prohibition against the do-it-yourself installation of an underground sprinkler. But there are so many thousands of differing codes within states, cities, towns and villages that I hesitate to make an over-all statement about it. You can easily check with your local authorities.

All The Home Handyman Needs To Know

"The Complete Wise Home Handyman's Guide" has sold more than three million copies since it was first published in the late 1940s.

Now this bible of the do-it-yourselfer, edited by Hubbard Cobb, known for his books and radio show, "Fix It Yourself," has been reissued in a revised, updated edition by the Thomas Y. Crowell Co.

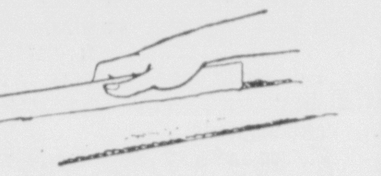
The price is $7.95 for an awful lot of helpful guidance.

From unclogging the drain to fastening pictures to the wall, from painting ceramic tile to laying cement sidewalk, from building shelves to insulating an attic, from modernizing the bathroom to plugging the basement leak, this big book covers the field well, with text and drawings. It offers, too, some advice for the house buyer: "If the house is to have its own septic treatment plant, ask to see a percolation test report for the site where your house is to be located." And: "Wood shingles are considerably more expensive than the asphalt type and indicate, when used, that the builder is not pinching pennies."

But the great value of the book is for those who already have that home, and are seeking to hold it together. In these days when professional services come high, the man who can unclog a stopped-up sewer or weatherstrip the windows or reupholster the eay chairs is going to be dollars — a good many dollars — ahead of the game. But he had better know what he is doing. Hence, "The Complete Home Handyman's Guide." D.K.

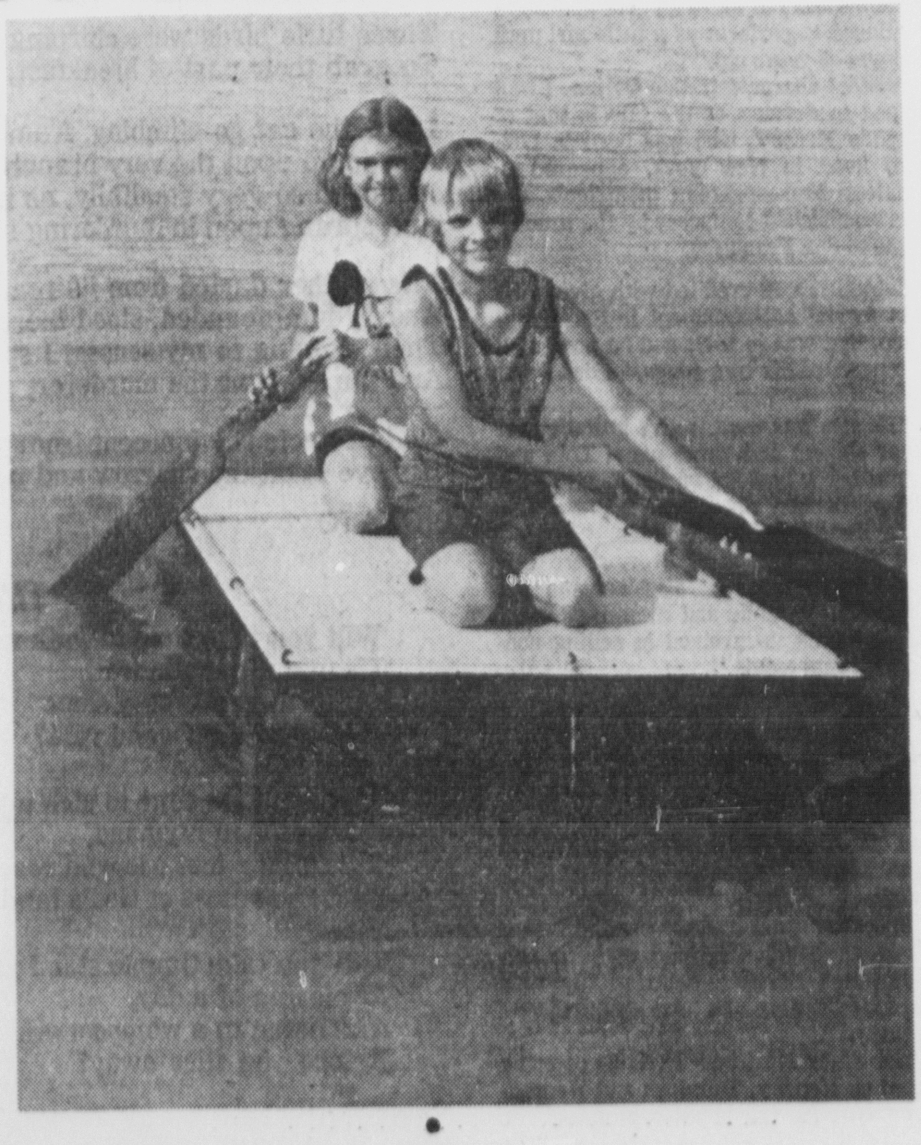
Line Drawer With Cedar



There are all kinds of plans available for adding drawer space under twin beds. And no matter what plan you decide on, line the drawer of your under-the-bed storage unit with aromatic red cedar. This will provide storage for your moth-free linens and woolens.

The aroma of the red cedar, which paralyzes moths in the larvae stage, eliminates the need for poisonous moth deterrents. Cedar lining is available at most building materials stores.

SHADES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN



SUMMER BRINGS with its sunshine an almost irresistible urge to get out onto the water. If you are a yacht-owner, your problem is solved. But if you are a youngster and with a father not that fortunately endowed, then you have the problem of what to use as your watercraft. Huck Finn and pal Tom Sawyer had a good idea when they built themselves a raft. You can build this modern version of their creation with a minimum investment of time and money. Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., and ask for Huck Finn Raft Pattern No. 534. You will get along with the pattern a complete list of the required materials, plus step-by-step directions. It is a project the youngster can tackle for himself with only a very little help from dad. Even without the two inner tubes lashed to the plywood underside, the styrofoam flotation will support 150 pounds. With the inner tubes, it will carry as many as four pint-sized sailors. The whole thing weighs only 50 pounds, and can be transported easily on top of the family car. What you have is a perfect swimming and diving platform for your pool, but also one that you can take along with you to the lake or shore for fishing or just plain fun. And, of course, there is always rafting on the creek — with proper supervision. It's a stable, safe craft, used sensibly. There are some other Steve Ellingson patterns designed for your water pleasure that you might want to try. Pattern 450, at $1, is a 10-foot sailboard. Pattern 398, at $2, is a five-foot sailboat. So if rafting isn't your game, then how about a spot of sailing?

Four Sneaky Dutchmen Who Hook You

By BRUCE MEYER

It was all a trap — and now they've got me.

Here I am, in the middle of the living room floor, flipped out over the polyrhythmic, semi-tonal jamming of four Dutchmen who call themselves Focus.

By all rights I should be listening to Flash Cadillac and the Continental Kids or some equally disreputable American group. But no, suddenly I'm enjoying "sophisticated rock" which I always thought that was a contradiction in terms.

MARIN LIVING

IF YOU HAVE Focus' second album, "Moving Waves," you know how sneaky these four Dutchmen were. You probably bought it on the basis of that taut-steel first track, "Hocus Pocus," which has been doing so well as a single, and discovered it was a come-on.

The rest of "Moving Waves" has little in common with that first cut; it's a whole different kind of music, much of the time. I felt cheated, the first time I listened to it. But I listened a couple of more times, and when the new album, "Focus 3" Sire SAS-3901, arrived I put it on, too. But then I was hooked.

Europe — that is, the Continent — has produced amazingly few top-notch bands, considering the popularity of rock over there.

ONLY A HANDFUL of European groups have ever had albums released on this side of the Atlantic — and none of them has enjoyed any significant commercial success. Perhaps the language barrier has been the main problem.

Like most European groups who have tried to break the fantastically lucrative American market, Focus has circumvented the problem by concentrating on instrumentals.

The two creative forces behind Focus are Jan Akkerman, lead guitarist, and Thijs Van Leer, who plays keyboards and flute, and handles the few vocals; Van Leer is the guy who does the Spike Jones yodeling and gulping routine in the middle of "Hocus Pocus."

AKKERMAN IS A truly gifted musician, a guitarist of technical excellence in the same class as John McLaughlin, though with different roots and none of the McLaughlin's mystical leanings. He loves traditional English music, but he's primarily a rocker.

Van Leer is pure innovator; most of that which is most unusual in Focus' music is due to his influence. From Akkerman's rock base, Van Leer builds some delicately beautiful melodies, usually without getting lost in his own complexities.

In their first two albums, Focus seemed to be groping around; their musicianship was evident, of course, but the albums did not flow as well as the individual cuts suggested they should. They danced far too close to boredom.

"FOCUS 3" IS flawed in the same ways — but the mistakes are much fewer. For the most part, "Focus 3" overcomes the dangers inherent in drawn-cut instrumentals through sheer creative power.

Actually, sides one and two of the two-disc set would have made a fine album by themselves — perhaps a better one than it is with the second record. It would have been better to hold on to the 27-minute "Anonymous II" for later release, and to have dropped the last cut, "House of the King," entirely.

ADDING AUTHENTICITY AND COLOR to the re-creation of early San Francisco at the Old San Francisco Waterfront Fair and Nautical Exposition, Thursdays through Sundays through August, at the Hyde Street Pier, State Maritime Historical Park, are the efforts of Corinne Swall of Kentfield as a consultant. A popular concert singer in her own right, Miss Swall is also an authority on California music of the Gold Rush days. Here, at right, she imparts some of her enthusiasm for those spirited songs to three of the Waterfront Fair and Nautical Exposition cast members, left to right: Michael Hubbert as composer and impresario Stephen Massett, Donna Dubane as the legendary Lola Montez and Cathy Cahn as Lotta Crabtree.

Music Of Gold Rush Days

There has, perhaps, never been any city that showered gold on its entertainers, acquired a sophisticated taste so rapidly for music and cuisine while still traipsing mud on plush carpets, nor created lavish decors of crystal chandeliers, French mirrors and fine silver in a setting of shacks and unpaved streets as San Francisco during the 1850s.

And, there is, perhaps, no greater authority on the music of those boisterous Gold Rush days nor "re-creator" of the song styles of that period than the Bay Area's own soprano Corinne Swall.

THE HISTORY of San Francisco from 1850 to 1900 and its maritime heritage is now dramatically being brought to life at the Old San Francisco Waterfront Fair and Nautical Exposition Thursdays through Sundays during July and August at the Hyde Street Pier State Maritime Park, to which Miss Swall has added her stamp of authenticity.

As a consultant to the fair, Corinne Swall has used her talents, research and extensive private collection of music which these first intrepid entertainers lured to San Francisco by gold fever performed to good advantage. Her contributions are helping to bring to life, once again, such famous and legendary personages as Lola Montez and Lotta Crabtree with an historical accuracy and charm seldom available to such characterizations.

A resident of Kentfield and the wife of Dr. Halnan A. White, Corinne is a member of the University of California music department faculty at Berkeley and a prominent concert singer in her own right. She has appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Fiedler Fieldler and with many other orchestras as well as appearing in musicals in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Berkeley and Europe.

BORN IN ROSS, Miss Swall is a fourth generation American with one great grandmother who walked across the Isthmus of Panama and one great grandfather who crossed the continent in a covered wagon.

"I can remember hearing many stories, and I presume that is how I first became interested in the music and entertainment of the Gold Rush days and the histories of those entertainers," she muses.

"It was an exciting period when thousands of men flocked here. Gamblers, convicts and sailors mingled and worked alongside ministers, college professors and clerks from New York.

"Suffering rheumatism from panning gold in rivers and the privations of mining camps, men would come to San Francisco and sleep with the rats on the mudflats; and seek comfort from the damp and chill in the lavishly upholstered Bella Union Melodeon, the city's most famous gambling hall. The few private rooms in the city rented for $1000 a month — in advance; a barrel of bath water was $5; and an egg was $1.00. They played faro and drank champagne; sent their laundry to China; and wine and cigars were free in the Bella Union."

"IT WAS CERTAINLY a place to attract adventuresome entertainers for the miners would throw bags of gold dust and Mexican silver coins upon stages in the theatres and saloons; and the mere sight of a child or pretty female would draw forth gold nuggets from the miners' pockets," she added. "There was only one woman for every thousand men, then."

And what was the music the miners heard?

"The miners became sophisticated audiences, quickly, as divas and concert musicians performed bravura coloratura arias by Rossini, Bellini, Mozart and Donicetti; and parlor ballads of the times, narrowing to the repertoire of local composers such as George Evans and Stephen Massett," Miss Swall points out.

CORINNE SWALL has spent seven years gathering the original parlor music of the 1850s and now has, perhaps, the only extensive collection of its kind in the world.

She first started assembling her collection of original old music when she began writing skits in preparation for concerts, but soon discovered the sheet music was just not readily available.

"I originally went to libraries and historical societies, but they generally only had the titles and not the music. I would find some music tucked away and forgotten in historical society archieves; many times in antique shops and old book stores. And, as public awareness of my interest in this music became known, individuals would either send such old sheet music to me, or exchange with me. Some of my students uncover original music and bring it to me, now," she explains.

CORINNE SWALL now gives concerts of historically authentic musical portraits in which she is billed as "The Nighingale of the Gold Rush Days."

These concerts include little insights and anecdotes about the various divas and performers who came to San Francisco to perform.

She is now in the midst of a summer concert tour in Alaska, her consultations and groundwork for the Old San Francisco Waterfront Fair completed.

The Juilliard School of Music graduate who holds a Master's Degree in Music from San Francisco State College and a Bachelor of Arts Degree in English Literature from University of California at Berkeley, has been consulting at the fair on such particular entertainers as Lola Montez (being portrayed by Donna DuBane); Lotta Crabtree (enacted by Cathy Cahn); and Stephen Massett (played by Michael Hubbert).

"LOLA MONTEZ was born in Ireland as Marie Gilbert and after an early and disastrous marriage, lived a notorious life, becoming the mistress of King Ludwig of Bavaria until the revolution encouraged her trip to San Francisco," Miss Swall relates.

"She was received with immediate acclaim, did her dances of a sort, including a "spider dance" in which she covered herself with imaginary spiders. And, when the men would shout 'there he is misses. . . higher up,' she would curse.

"Lola eventually married Patrick Hull, editor of The Whig, then moved to Grass Valley. In her latter years, she moved to the East Coast where, suffering mental deterioration, she gave lectures on preserving female beauty and became quite religious.

"Lotta Crabtree grew up in Grass Valley and was befriended by Lola Montez who taught her to ride horses and, perhaps, to dance.

"LOTTA BEGAN entertaining at mining camps at the age of six and would ride from camp to camp, often sleeping on her mule. Her mother capitalized on her and held such tight watch dog reins that Lotta never married, but she earned over four million dollars, dying in the East in 1924."

"Lotta could sing and danced well," Miss Swall adds, "performing from 1855 to 1900. As a little girl, of course, the miners showered her with gold and Lotta continued to perform as a little girl until she was 45 years old."

Another characterization Corinne Swall helped to develop at the fair is that of Stephen Massett, who was born in London, lived in New York, appeared in amateur Shakespearean theatricals and was a published composer by the time he came to San Francisco.

"MASSETT IS credited with giving the first formal entertainment in San Francisco, that was in 1849; and he presented a concert of his own songs," Miss Swall notes.

"He also was wont to give imitations of other singers and wrote about Lola and Lotta; but is best known for his autobiography "Drifting About" which is a collector's item today," she adds. "Massett had the ability to be everywhere and know everybody. He also became the city's notary public and commissioner of deeds; and was involved in selling non-existent real estate."

The Old San Francisco Waterfront Fair re-enacts in three distinct periods: 1850 to 1865; 1866 to 1880, and 1881 to 1900.

MANY OF San Francisco's fabled and legendary characters are portrayed up and down the length of the Pier along each side of which an old street with wooden buildings has been constructed.

And, the park's four historic ships serve as the setting and stages, with performers bringing them to life with "seamen" at work and singing sea "shantys."

The State Maritime Park is open as usual on Monday, Tuesdays and Wednesdays when the fair is not in progress.

POET'S CORNER

GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE

Today from out cimmerian ocean caves
Collossal columns raise their arms of stone
To cable spans unmindful of the moan
Of ghost-like treachery upon the waves,
Or siren beckoning ships into their graves;
This feat whose praise shall ring from zone to zone
Above the seas abysmal roar and groan.
Now shows that man with mighty thought out-braves
Derisive mockery, with a dream fulfilled.
What greater deed by man was ever planned?
Thus progress speeds and all her wonders sate
The eyes of travelers, where the sunsets gild
Marin's brown hunch-back hills that wedded stand
Beside the entrance to the Golden Gate.

CORTE MADERA — MYRTLE ALICE McCARCY

ONCE UPON A MORNING

Once upon a morning, having risen from my rest,
I saw a mother robin, attending to her nest.
Three little birds were chirping and yawning to the break,
To grab their part of breakfast, fast as lightning's streak.

I saw the cat go climbing, from ground to lower limb.
And jump upon the very branch with nest of robins in.
It moved so very stealthily, as not to stir a leaf,
And sprang upon in murdering scene that filled myself with grief.

The mother darted from its reach of claws and licking jaw
And I, dumbfounded, stood there, watching all with awe.
Then, coming to my senses, I spied a stone to throw,
And hurled it at the murderer, scattering it with my blow.

God protects the innocent from many an unjust cause,
His eye is on the sparrow and not on feline claws.

NOVATO — ROBERT J. EDDY

TIME

Will you take time to walk with me
Upon a mountain trail,
Or sit atop a grassy slope
And view a peaceful vale?

Will you take time to pick a poppy
And put it in my hand,
Or look for just one wild rose
In the vastness of God's land?

Will you take time to stand real still
At closing of a day,
And listen to a whippoorwill
Before she flies away?

She is now in the midst of a summer concert tour in Alaska, her consultations and groundwork for the Old San Francisco Waterfront Fair completed.

The Juilliard School of Music graduate who holds a Master's Degree in Music from San Francisco State College and a Bachelor of Arts Degree in English Literature from University of California at Berkeley, has been consulting at the fair on such particular entertainers as Lola Montez (being portrayed by Donna DuBane); Lotta Crabtree (enacted by Cathy Cahn); and Stephen Massett (played by Michael Hubbert).

"LOLA MONTEZ was born in Ireland as Marie Gilbert and after an early and disastrous marriage, lived a notorious life, becoming the mistress of King Ludwig of Bavaria until the revolution encouraged her trip to San Francisco," Miss Swall relates.

"She was received with immediate acclaim, did her dances of a sort, including a "spider dance" in which she covered herself with imaginary spiders. And, when the men would shout 'there he is misses. . . higher up,' she would curse.

"Lola eventually married Patrick Hull, editor of The Whig, then moved to Grass Valley. In her latter years, she moved to the East Coast where, suffering mental deterioration, she gave lectures on preserving female beauty and became quite religious.

"Lotta Crabtree grew up in Grass Valley and was befriended by Lola Montez who taught her to ride horses and, perhaps, to dance.

"LOTTA BEGAN entertaining at mining camps at the age of six and would ride from camp to camp, often sleeping on her mule. Her mother capitalized on her and held such tight watch dog reins that Lotta never married, but she earned over four million dollars, dying in the East in 1924."

"Lotta could sing and danced well," Miss Swall adds, "performing from 1855 to 1900. As a little girl, of course, the miners showered her with gold and Lotta continued to perform as a little girl until she was 45 years old."

Another characterization Corinne Swall helped to develop at the fair is that of Stephen Massett, who was born in London, lived in New York, appeared in amateur Shakespearean theatricals and was a published composer by the time he came to San Francisco.

"MASSETT IS credited with giving the first formal entertainment in San Francisco, that was in 1849; and he presented a concert of his own songs," Miss Swall notes.

"He also was wont to give imitations of other singers and wrote about Lola and Lotta; but is best known for his autobiography "Drifting About" which is a collector's item today," she adds. "Massett had the ability to be everywhere and know everybody. He also became the city's notary public and commissioner of deeds; and was involved in selling non-existent real estate."

The Old San Francisco Waterfront Fair re-enacts in three distinct periods: 1850 to 1865; 1866 to 1880, and 1881 to 1900.

MANY OF San Francisco's fabled and legendary characters are portrayed up and down the length of the Pier along each side of which an old street with wooden buildings has been constructed.

And, the park's four historic ships serve as the setting and stages, with performers bringing them to life with "seamen" at work and singing sea "shantys."

The State Maritime Park is open as usual on Monday, Tuesdays and Wednesdays when the fair is not in progress.

POET'S CORNER

GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE

Today from out cimmerian ocean caves
Collossal columns raise their arms of stone
To cable spans unmindful of the moan
Of ghost-like treachery upon the waves,
Or siren beckoning ships into their graves;
This feat whose praise shall ring from zone to zone
Above the seas abysmal roar and groan.
Now shows that man with mighty thought out-braves
Derisive mockery, with a dream fulfilled.
What greater deed by man was ever planned?
Thus progress speeds and all her wonders sate
The eyes of travelers, where the sunsets gild
Marin's brown hunch-back hills that wedded stand
Beside the entrance to the Golden Gate.

CORTE MADERA — MYRTLE ALICE McCARCY

ONCE UPON A MORNING

Once upon a morning, having risen from my rest,
I saw a mother robin, attending to her nest.
Three little birds were chirping and yawning to the break,
To grab their part of breakfast, fast as lightning's streak.

I saw the cat go climbing, from ground to lower limb.
And jump upon the very branch with nest of robins in.
It moved so very stealthily, as not to stir a leaf,
And sprang upon in murdering scene that filled myself with grief.

The mother darted from its reach of claws and licking jaw
And I, dumbfounded, stood there, watching all with awe.
Then, coming to my senses, I spied a stone to throw,
And hurled it at the murderer, scattering it with my blow.

God protects the innocent from many an unjust cause,
His eye is on the sparrow and not on feline claws.

NOVATO — ROBERT J. EDDY

TIME

Will you take time to walk with me
Upon a mountain trail,
Or sit atop a grassy slope
And view a peaceful vale?

Will you take time to pick a poppy
And put it in my hand,
Or look for just one wild rose
In the vastness of God's land?

Will you take time to stand real still
At closing of a day,
And listen to a whippoorwill
Before she flies away?

Sir Lew Takes U.S. TV Pulse

SIR LEW GRADE
Emmys and a knighthood

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — It is a curious fact that some of the more ambitious television that reaches American screens starts its life in the quiet of morning in an office near London's Hyde Park.

Sir Lew Grade is an early riser because he finds his mind slips into high gear while most people are still yawning at the new day. His limousine drops him at the Associated Television ATV building usually at 7 a.m. sharp.

And it is while he is brewing coffee in the silver pot on his desk that he mulls over the programs that, among other things, earned him eight U.S. Emmys this year — seven for the "Julie Andrews Hour" and the other for "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

SIR LEW'S television activities also won him a knighthood in recognition of the tens of millions of dollars his programs have earned to help the British balance of trade. This year, with Britain in the Common Market, Sir Lew sees the possibility of even greater opportunities and he has already sold a number of important shows to the United States.

As a theatrical agent, Sir Lew made the London Palladium so famous a vaudeville theatre that Americans felt no career was complete without headlining there. He took this trans-Atlantic knowledge with him when he became head of ATV. And now, with Britain in the Common Market, he is aiming at Europe and the United States as well as his homeland.

Chatting in his office over coffee and biscuits one early morning, Sir Lew ticked off his accomplishments for the coming seasons.

"WE'VE RECORDED the Royal Shakespeare Company production of Antony and Cleopatra," he said, "and we're soon recording Lord Laurence and Lady Olivier in 'The Merchant of Venice' with the players of the National Theatre Company. Both of these have been sold to ABC-TV.

"ABC-TV has also signed for six hours of television starring Julie Andrews. This is a remarkable deal in that every show will have a different format, style, presentation and length. ABC-TV, of course, also bought our 'The Strauss Family.'

"NBC-TV has purchased 'The Zoo Gang,' a series based on the 1973 adventure of four wartime Resistance Fighters with Barry Morse of the Fugitive, Brian Keith, Lili Palmer and John Mills as stars. Paul and Linda McCartney are writing and performing the music."

SIR LEW said he hadn't forgotten CBS-TV.

That network has purchased his series of six one-hour shows called "The Law Giver" with Burt Lancaster as Moses. And there is, he says, American interest in his $6,250,000 co-production (with Italian television) of "The Life of William Shakespeare" as well as in a series tentatively titled "The Origin of the Mafia."

RACHEL CARSON, the late author, talked with correspondent Eric Sevareid on the landmark 1963 "CBS Reports" telecast, "The Silent Spring of Rachel Carson," about her controversial book dealing with pesticides' effect on man and his environment. The telecast will be seen again on "CBS News Retrospective" Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

Finding Comedy In War's Folly

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will the success of "M-A-S-H" and the end of an unpopular war in Vietnam spark a revival of the military service comedy on television?

The question was put to "M-A-S-H" co-producers Gene Reynolds and Larry Gelbart, who are following their hit with "Roll Out!" a new show for CBS about the Red Ball Express, a World War II truck outfit. They promptly shot that theory full of holes with a surplus M1 rifle.

"IT'S JUST A coincidence," Reynolds insisted. "We'd long been interested in the Red Ball Express. We see in it another opportunity for absurd situations. Men under enormous stress strangely enough offer enormous comedic possibilities.

"It's a show that uses mostly black talent. So when we were kicking around what we were going to do for next year the Red Ball Express came up. We just kind of jumped at it."

Then, mock confession, he said, actually, we had a lot of olive drab paint left over and were casting around for a war. The War of 1812 also offered possibilities."

AS FAR BACK as the classic "You'll Never Get Rich," the Sgt. Bilko show starring Phil Silvers, the military comedy has been a TV staple. Virtually every branch and possibility was explored, from "McHale's Navy" to the old cavalry of "F Troop" to prisoners of war in "Hogan's Heroes."

But with the Vietnam War the military comedy fell into disfavor. It took a new twist to get such a show back on, and "M-A-S-H" offered it.

Gelbart acknowledges a debt to the movie which spawned the TV series. "They showed us the way." he said, "Not using the war as a sound effect, a distant rumble of cannon, but to get an element of reality.

"THAT'S WHAT attracted us to it. We wanted to do a service comedy that wasn't simply Bilko '73. We show that people get hurt in war and in one show that they actually get killed."

Reynolds said, "I hope that we treat it as real and show the way that people actually behave so that it's more recognizable. We have a point of view, on our good days, of humanity vs. the folly of war."

The producers say most of the comedy in "Roll Out!" will arise from the differences between the two black leads. Sweet, played by Stu Gilliam, is a street-wise hustler. Hilly Hicks as Jed is the square country boy whose father told him to always obey orders.

"ROLL OUT!" is a broader comedy," Reynolds said. "It's more detached from World War II than "M-A-S-H" is from the Korean War. 'M-A-S-H' has a more serious tone. 'Roll Out!' is a little less real and more romanticized because of the detachment time now lends to World War II."

Gelbart said, "We're here to entertain but these things do have laments of comment, whether you like it or not. It will reflect the segregated army of that time and there will be some ethnic humor."

TUNING IN ON TV

By JACK GAVER

There are some summer television repeats that one can live with in a second viewing and that those who missed them first time around certainly should see. Such are three of the "GE Monogram Series," which will have encores via the Hughes Television Network. "Conquista," a recreation of what it was like for the American Indian to discover the horse and its uses in the 16th century, is due the week of Aug. 6, with Richard Boone narrating. "Bighorn: Rocky Mountain High," about the life of the sheep of that name, is for the week of Aug. 20. Singer John Denver sings his own songs and narrates. Gregory Peck narrates for "Land of the Small," listed for the first week in September, a study of the insect world.

ABC in September will initiate a new series of primetime investigative reports titled "ABC News Close-up." Topics of the moment will be probed to a depth that is not possible on regular newscasts.

Ken Curtis, the Festus of "Gunsmoke" on CBS, received the Buffalo Bill Award at the Nebraskaland Days celebration in North Platte, Neb. This annual honor goes to the western star of television or films who has contributed to over-all family entertainment in "The Buffalo Bill Cody tradition."

Another sign of the times: "Shelly Novack becomes a distaff agent on ABC's "The FBI" in the fall as the series starts its ninth season. She plays agent Chris Daniels, a new assistant to Inspector Lewis Erskine, played, as always by Efrem Zimbalist Jr. Is there a woman agent on the real FBI staff?

KPIX Grabs Six Awards

KPIX-TV led with six awards, twice as many as any other television station in the state, in the 21st Annual California Associated Press Television-Radio Assn. News Competition.

The Group W station took top honors in four of the seven categories, which were open to competition from television stations throughout California.

MARILYN MONROE is a song and dance girl in "Let's Make Love," a stylish Cinderella story. Songs include "Incurably Romantic" and "My Heart Belongs to Daddy." The movie will be shown Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.

He Makes Pictures To Make Money

By VERNON SCOTT

Moviemakers who consider cinema as an art have proved going broke is also an art, and now there is a man who considers cinema strictly business and hopes to make profitable pictures.

He is Peter Traynor of Lester-Traynor Productions, Hollywood, who has some old fashioned slogans to apply to movies:

"We want a product we can be proud of, but it's purely a business venture." "Art for art's sake is for others."

Traynor raises money for his movies by selling interest in them to laymen. Each angel kicks in $10,000. The profits are skimmed off the top and repaid — with interest — to the backers.

SO FAR THE corporation has made only one film, "The Steel Arena." It has been released in the southeastern part of the United States.

"In the first six weeks it earned $400,000," said Traynor. "Our investors have received between $50,000-$100,000 for their original outlay. From now on the rest is profit."

Traynor hopes his film about daredevil thrill show automobile drivers will do as well in big cities as it has in the boondocks.

He may not find out for another year or two.

"WE ONLY MADE 50 prints of the film instead of the usual 500," he explained. "We are releasing the picture in relatively small areas at a time.

"That way we have complete control over the advertising, publicity and exploitation of the picture. We use limited saturation booking in each area. It may take two years for us to distribute the film nationally."

Traynor is a youngish man with a perpetual sun tan. He speaks rapidly and often. He has been a successful business man and is convinced he can apply his skills to the motion picture crafts.

"WE WANT TO make action films," he said. "The important thing is recreation and entertainment.

"You can take the best product in the world and it won't sell. You have to package it correctly and then really get out and sell it. Movies aren't any different from other products in that respect."

Clearly, Traynor is not out to collect any Oscars. His next movie is titled "Truck Stop Woman," due for release this summer.

His actors aren't stars. He can't afford them.

"WE REFUSE TO make any picture that costs more than $500,000," he said. "If we spend any more than that it takes longer to get the money back to our investors."

Traynor, it would appear, is more concerned with enriching his backers than he is in improving the lot of the movie patron.

His logic is that if a movie doesn't show a profit, then there won't be any finances available for more movies. One cannot argue with his conclusion except that movie-goers may balk altogether and refuse to see $500,000 films about daredevils freaking out in cars.

"There are 12 million thrill show fans in this country, maybe more," Traynor countered. "The biggest sporting event in this country, the Indianapolis 500, is a thrill show, and look at the business that does."

BIT PARTS: George Segal has signed in "The Terminal Man" for Warner Bros. . . . Hugh Downs has proposed a national conference of television broadcasters to explore sex education on local video channels . . . Jack Lemmon has been elected to the board of the Motion Picture Academy . . .

BERT JONES from Louisiana State will quarterback the College All-Stars against the Miami Dolphins in the annual Chicago Solider Field football classic Friday, 6:30 p.m., on Channels 7 and 11.

How Hec Ramsey Does His Relaxing

While some actors take other acting assignments during production hiatus from their regular television shows, Richard Boone relaxes at his St. Augustine, Fla., home.

But Boone's form of relaxation is quiet different from most people.

Boone, star of NBC-TV's "Hec Ramsey" series, teaches drama and is actively involved in the affairs of his new home community. As a member of the U.S. Bicentennial Committee, Boone hopes to ensure St. Augustine's prominent participation in the celebration by the nation's oldest city.

Rob Reiner Yearned For Baseball Career

He wanted to be a cowboy or a baseball player, but ended up a "meathead."

As a youngster, Rob Reiner had many ambitions, and, in his late teens, chose to be a writer and actor. He has achieved fame as Archie Bunker's "meathead" son-in-law on "All in the Family" on the CBS Television Network.

But, in the back of his mind, one dream keeps popping up — the dream of being a baseball player.

Even though Reiner was a better than average ballplayer, circumstances deemed he wasn't professional material. That didn't quell his love or interest in the game, however. Whenever he has a spare moment, Reiner can usually be found on or near a baseball field.

He plays in a weekend softball league, participates in most celebrity baseball games and avidly watches the sport on television and from the stands.

Recently, part of his dream became a reality. He worked out with his favorite professional baseball team — the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I was a kid all over again," he said. "You can't imagine how excited and nervous I was in that Dodger uniform going through the pre-game exercises with guys I idolize.

He Makes Pictures To Make Money

By VERNON SCOTT

Moviemakers who consider cinema as an art have proved going broke is also an art, and now there is a man who considers cinema strictly business and hopes to make profitable pictures.

He is Peter Traynor of Lester-Traynor Productions, Hollywood, who has some old fashioned slogans to apply to movies:

"We want a product we can be proud of, but it's purely a business venture." "Art for art's sake is for others."

Traynor raises money for his movies by selling interest in them to laymen. Each angel kicks in $10,000. The profits are skimmed off the top and repaid — with interest — to the backers.

SO FAR THE corporation has made only one film, "The Steel Arena." It has been released in the southeastern part of the United States.

"In the first six weeks it earned $400,000," said Traynor. "Our investors have received between $50,000-$100,000 for their original outlay. From now on the rest is profit."

Traynor hopes his film about daredevil thrill show automobile drivers will do as well in big cities as it has in the boondocks.

He may not find out for another year or two.

"WE ONLY MADE 50 prints of the film instead of the usual 500," he explained. "We are releasing the picture in relatively small areas at a time.

"That way we have complete control over the advertising, publicity and exploitation of the picture. We use limited saturation booking in each area. It may take two years for us to distribute the film nationally."

Traynor is a youngish man with a perpetual sun tan. He speaks rapidly and often. He has been a successful business man and is convinced he can apply his skills to the motion picture crafts.

"WE WANT TO make action films," he said. "The important thing is recreation and entertainment.

"You can take the best product in the world and it won't sell. You have to package it correctly and then really get out and sell it. Movies aren't any different from other products in that respect."

Clearly, Traynor is not out to collect any Oscars. His next movie is titled "Truck Stop Woman," due for release this summer.

His actors aren't stars. He can't afford them.

"WE REFUSE TO make any picture that costs more than $500,000," he said. "If we spend any more than that it takes longer to get the money back to our investors."

Traynor, it would appear, is more concerned with enriching his backers than he is in improving the lot of the movie patron.

His logic is that if a movie doesn't show a profit, then there won't be any finances available for more movies. One cannot argue with his conclusion except that movie-goers may balk altogether and refuse to see $500,000 films about daredevils freaking out in cars.

"There are 12 million thrill show fans in this country, maybe more," Traynor countered. "The biggest sporting event in this country, the Indianapolis 500, is a thrill show, and look at the business that does."

BIT PARTS: George Segal has signed in "The Terminal Man" for Warner Bros. . . . Hugh Downs has proposed a national conference of television broadcasters to explore sex education on local video channels . . . Jack Lemmon has been elected to the board of the Motion Picture Academy . . .

BERT JONES from Louisiana State will quarterback the College All-Stars against the Miami Dolphins in the annual Chicago Solider Field football classic Friday, 6:30 p.m., on Channels 7 and 11.

How Hec Ramsey Does His Relaxing

While some actors take other acting assignments during production hiatus from their regular television shows, Richard Boone relaxes at his St. Augustine, Fla., home.

But Boone's form of relaxation is quiet different from most people.

Boone, star of NBC-TV's "Hec Ramsey" series, teaches drama and is actively involved in the affairs of his new home community. As a member of the U.S. Bicentennial Committee, Boone hopes to ensure St. Augustine's prominent participation in the celebration by the nation's oldest city.

Rob Reiner Yearned For Baseball Career

He wanted to be a cowboy or a baseball player, but ended up a "meathead."

As a youngster, Rob Reiner had many ambitions, and, in his late teens, chose to be a writer and actor. He has achieved fame as Archie Bunker's "meathead" son-in-law on "All in the Family" on the CBS Television Network.

Even though Reiner was a better than average ballplayer, circumstances deemed he wasn't professional material. That didn't quell his love or interest in the game, however. Whenever he has a spare moment, Reiner can usually be found on or near a baseball field.

He plays in a weekend softball league, participates in most celebrity baseball games and avidly watches the sport on television and from the stands.

"I was a kid all over again," he said. "You can't imagine how excited and nervous I was in that Dodger uniform going through the pre-game exercises with guys I idolize.

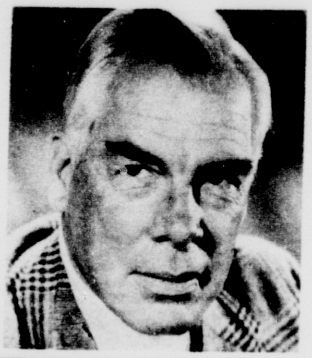
Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR LEE MARVIN,
currently in "The Emperor of the North Pole"

As an ex-Marine who saw plenty of action in the Pacific in World War II, what's your view on amnesty for those who refused to serve in the Vietnamese war?—A. B. K., Nogales, Ariz.



● Total amnesty is the only way. Absolutely! These men ought to be allowed complete flux. Years from now, if they feel bad about it, they'll confess it to a pal over a cocktail. But you can't ask a man not to be afraid. We had two guys in our outfit who used to pull out of every fire fight. And none of us ever called them on it, because we understood.

FOR ROSALIND RUSSELL

Will there ever be a woman President?—C. D., Ft. Collins, Colo.

● Indeed yes, no question about it, and I think it may happen in this century. I certainly wouldn't have any qualms about voting for a woman. Don't forget how many women voters there are, how much money they possess, and how fed up they can get. These women have the power to make a woman President.

● There are health hazards involved in the human consumption of these animals. Horses in Pennsylvania, for example, are not raised to be eaten by humans. They receive medication, such as anti-parasite inoculations, that could prove harmful to humans. We have a responsibility to protect unsuspecting consumers here and abroad.

FOR LESLIE UGGAMS

What do you think of the current crop of black films?—B. Williams, Chattanooga, Tenn.

● They're too much alike. Most have the same plot, the same violence, the same amount of sex. I hate to see that happen. I wish they'd make more films like "Sounder" and "Black Girl."

FOR IRVING WALLACE, author

I've just finished your latest novel, "The Word." I've always wanted to write, but can't seem to discipline myself. How do you do it?—John Davis, Utica, N.Y.

● When I'm concentrating on a novel, I work six days a week. I begin writing at 11 a.m. and continue until around 6 p.m. I usually spend several evenings a week making notes for my next day's work or reading and researching. I admit to pacing a good deal during the day and puffing constantly on an old briar pipe—which keeps everyone out of my study!

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER

What made you decide to go ahead with a face-lifting operation?—P. Sanders, Palo Alto, Calif.

● I saw a still picture of myself taken on the "Sonny & Cher" show. A close-up. And it looked so ugly, I couldn't believe it was me. When you look at yourself in a mirror, you kind of get used to it. But when I studied this picture objectively, I realized I had gone far beyond what I wanted to look like.

FOR DR. BENJAMIN SPOCK

Would you say that the rising divorce rate in the U.S. is a reflection of how we parents brought up our children?—Mrs. Irene Rohr, Devils Lake, N.D.

● It is a reflection of the general ideas and attitudes that children absorb from their parents rather than of the explicit teachings of their parents, or of "permissiveness" of the parents' methods.

FOR NORM CASH, first baseman of the Detroit Tigers

You're the only major-league baseball player I've seen who doesn't wear a protective helmet while batting. Is there a reason for this or are you just "hard-headed"?—Dan Buckley, Alexandria, La.

● I wear a fiber liner in my cloth baseball cap. This is permitted, and I find it more comfortable than the plastic safety helmet.

FOR TWIGGY

Would you ever consent to do an R- or X-rated film?—P. R., Fort Smith, Ark.

● You mean would I take my clothes off? No, I wouldn't.

From Family Weekly (April 29, 1973)

Poignant Letter From a Reader:

"I Want to Be Someone"

John and Karen Landoll

Here's a letter that wasn't written to be published in Family Weekly—or anywhere else. It's a letter full of the yearning To Be Somebody, but perhaps, more significantly, with the yearning simply To Be. Karen Landoll of Galion, Ohio, wrote Family Weekly in the almost desperate hope that she might find someone to help her achieve her ambition to be a singer. It was only after we thought of the incredible odds she faces, and how little we could do to help, that we realized how poignant and widespread unrealized yearnings must be.

Dear Family Weekly,
I suppose I'm writing to that a person

Two Answers to Karen Landoll—One Tough, One Tender

Recently, Family Weekly published a letter from Karen Landoll, a 23-year-old housewife and secretary who yearns to be a singer. Reader mail poured in—some containing advice, some criticism, some offering help.

Even celebrities responded. Below are the quite different letters that came from two famous people. Singer Vikki Carr is one of Karen's idols. Mystery writer John D. MacDonald, author of the famous Travis McGee series, has sold over 60 million books in 14 languages. His latest book, "The Scarlet Ruse," was published by Fawcett on July 3.

Adriana Rowan

Author John D. MacDonald

Sarasota, Fla.

Dear Karen,

Your letter has been a subtle irritant in the back of my mind for this past week, but not for the reasons you might suspect.

Please try to understand when I say that your letter seems to me to be arrogant rather than, as Family Weekly labeled it, poignant.

It is not your fault that you have this warped image of the real world, that you have the belief that somehow the world owes you the chance to start at the top. The Cinderella myth has always been overworked by the flacks of all branches of the entertainment world, because it is far easier to make a Cinderella story interesting than a story of years of hard labor in the boonies. But young people like you, who have an unmeasured, untested talent, believe that if just given a chance, you can prove your right to become an instant Star.

It is not done this way. Rowan and Martin, Mike Douglas and Vikki Carr are not going to open magic doorways for you. I can tell you why. I am privileged to count Dan Rowan a personal friend. He is a sensitive, decent, sympathetic man. Before he and Dick were "discovered," there were 18 years of gigs, club dates, saloons, squalid motels and small money.

I have a neighbor here in Florida named Joy Williams, whose first novel has just been published by Doubleday with much fanfare. It is called "State of Grace." Behind this "discovery" of her talent is an eight-year period of writing, writing, writing, until, within the past couple of years, she acquired sufficient competence to sell shorter pieces to good magazines.

Do you, in your innocence, think that Dinah Shore, Peggy Lee, Eyde Gorme, Vikki Carr, Ella, Streisand, Billie Holliday, earned their right to "sing to the world" by writing plaintive little letters to top entertainers? When each one was "discovered," it was because each one had made herself visible by years of hard, tough work.

Let me tell you what other young women are doing, women who perhaps have a stronger motivation than you. They are singing. They are haunting the local radio and television stations, the lounges, fairs, benefits, clubs, churches, funeral parlors, grabbing at each and every chance to sing for the people, whether it be for a ten dollar bill, a box lunch or two lines in the paper. Each time they sing, they learn things that cannot be learned in 12 years of singing around the house. They learn more about the professional requirements of timing and phrasing, of fitting the voice to various kinds of mikes and speaker systems and dimensions of the halls, of enduring drunks and fools, and jackhammers in the street outside.

These young women do not seek the opinion of friends to learn if they are "good at singing." They learn that the best way, by being asked back, by being given fifteen dollars instead of ten, by being applauded by total strangers.

That's how it really happens, Karen. From no one to someone is never an overnight thing, and writing letters won't do it.

I am astonished that you could live for 23 years and love singing, and not know this already. There are many valid biographies and autobiographies of singing stars available. Have you not been interested enough in how it is done to even read these life stories?

Right now, you have wasted four or five years in an empty yearning to be famous, in "praying for this dream to come true." Can you imagine the wry and amused bitterness in the minds of the girls who have been singing for the people in small places for these five years, trying to make their dream come true, too, when they read of your petulance at having your letters ignored?

I get poignant letters that begin, almost invariably, "I have always wanted to write." Me too, pal. My first two short-story sales brought in a grand total of $70. They cost me one million words of manuscript, untold hundreds of hours, and over $100 in postage, mailing my stories out. I answer those poignant letters by saying in return, "If you always wanted to write, and wanted to badly enough, you would be writing, regardless of whether or not you are selling."

Karen, have you always wanted to sing with such aching need that you were willing to start at the bottom? Or do you just have this romantic image of yourself as a frustrated potential celebrity?

Get out and work for peanuts, or work for free. Or give up the notion.

Sincerely yours,
John D. MacDonald

Singer Vikki Carr

Beverly Hills, Calif.

Dear Karen:

After reading your letter which was recently published in Family Weekly, I was honored by your kind thoughts, and would like to reply.

As you have already begun to learn, being a singer, or just breaking into the entertainment business itself, is pretty difficult. I don't have any information about what you would like to do in your career, and I don't know how much help I can be, but I would appreciate your sending me more information, perhaps including some demo records or tapes.

Looking forward to hearing from you soon.

Warmest regards,
Vikki Carr

Two Answers to Karen Landoll—One Tough, One Tender

Recently, FAMILY WEEKLY published a letter from Karen Landoll, a 23-year-old housewife and secretary who yearns to be a singer. Reader mail poured in—some containing advice, some criticism, some offering help.

Even celebrities responded. Below are the quite different letters that came from two famous people. Singer Vikki Carr is one of Karen's idols. Mystery writer John D. MacDonald, author of the famous Travis McGee series, has sold over 60 million books in 14 languages. His latest book, "The Scarlet Ruse," was published by Fawcett on July 3.

Dear Karen,

Your letter has been a subtle irritant in the back of my mind for this past week, but not for the reasons you might suspect.

Please try to understand when I say that your letter seems to me to be arrogant rather than, as FAMILY WEEKLY labeled it, poignant.

It is not your fault that you have this warped image of the real world, that you have the belief that somehow the world owes you the chance to start at the top. The Cinderella myth has always been overworked by the flacks of all branches of the entertainment world, because it is far easier to make a Cinderella story interesting than a story of years of hard labor in the boonies. But young people like you, who have an unmeasured, untested talent, believe that if just given a chance, you can prove your right to become an instant Star.

It is not done this way. Rowan and Martin, Mike Douglas and Vikki Carr are not going to open magic doorways for you. I can tell you why. I am privileged to count Dan Rowan a personal friend. He is a sensitive, decent, sympathetic man. Before he and Dick were "discovered," there were 18 years of gigs, club dates, saloons, squalid motels and small money.

I have a neighbor here in Florida named Joy Williams, whose first novel has just been published by Doubleday with much fanfare. It is called "State of Grace." Behind this "discovery" of her talent is an eight-year period of writing, writing, writing, until, within the past couple of years, she acquired sufficient competence to sell shorter pieces to good magazines.

Do you, in your innocence, think that Dinah Shore, Peggy Lee, Eyde Gorme, Vikki Carr, Ella, Streisand, Billie Holliday, earned their right to "sing to the world" by writing plaintive little letters to top entertainers? When each one was "discovered," it was because each one had made herself visible by years of hard, tough work.

Let me tell you what other young women are doing, women who perhaps have a stronger motivation than you. They are singing. They are haunting the local radio and television stations, the lounges, fairs, benefits, clubs, churches, funeral parlors, grabbing at each and every chance to sing for the people, whether it be for a ten dollar bill, a box lunch or two lines in the paper. Each time they sing, they learn things that cannot be learned in 12 years of singing around the house. They learn more about the professional requirements of timing and phrasing, of fitting the voice to various kinds of mikes and speaker systems and dimensions of the halls, of enduring drunks and fools, and jackhammers in the street outside.

These young women do not seek the opinion of friends to learn if they are "good at singing." They learn that the best way, by being asked back, by being given fifteen dollars instead of ten, by being applauded by total strangers.

That's how it really happens, Karen. From no one to someone is never an overnight thing, and writing letters won't do it.

I am astonished that you could live for 23 years and love singing, and not know this already. There are many valid biographies and autobiographies of singing stars available. Have you not been interested enough in how it is done to even read these life stories?

Right now, you have wasted four or five years in an empty yearning to be famous, in "praying for this dream to come true." Can you imagine the wry and amused bitterness in the minds of the girls who have been singing for the people in small places for these five years, trying to make their dream come true, too, when they read of your petulance at having your letters ignored?

I get poignant letters that begin, almost invariably, "I have always wanted to write." Me too, pal. My first two short-story sales brought in a grand total of $70. They cost me one million words of manuscript, untold hundreds of hours, and over $100 in postage, mailing my stories out. I answer those poignant letters by saying in return, "If you always wanted to write, and wanted to badly enough, you would be writing, regardless of whether or not you are selling."

Karen, have you always wanted to sing with such aching need that you were willing to start at the bottom? Or do you just have this romantic image of yourself as a frustrated potential celebrity?

Get out and work for peanuts, or work for free. Or give up the notion.

Sincerely yours,
John D. MacDonald

Dear Karen:

After reading your letter which was recently published in FAMILY WEEKLY, I was honored by your kind thoughts, and would like to reply.

As you have already begun to learn, being a singer, or just breaking into the entertainment business itself, is pretty difficult. I don't have any information about what you would like to do in your career, and I don't know how much help I can be, but I would appreciate your sending me more information, perhaps including some demo records or tapes.

Looking forward to hearing from you soon.

Warmest regards,
Vikki Carr

George Foreman on His Love for America:

How I Beat My Invisible Enemy, "They"

And then he said the words that really turned George Foreman around: "If he likes to fight so much," he told his staff, "put him in the ring down in the rec hall and let him get it out of his system that way."

Wide World

By George Foreman

World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

In my business, boxing, I know a lot about giving hard knocks, and getting them, too. That's the kind of business it is. I accept it for being that. But knocking the American system, that I can't take.

If there is give and take in life, and I know for sure there is, and some of it rough stuff, a man has to find out early how much of each he has capacity for.

I found out early, though, that you don't get much of anywhere by knocking success. The really smart guy tries to find out why it works, and how he can get in that kind of action, and then tries to make it work for him.

Casting about for places to put blame for the troubles a person has is an old human trait. "They" is an easier word to use than "I" when things don't go right. But the messes a man gets into don't hunt him up; he goes looking for them, whether he always knows it or not.

Nobody got me down in the street, for example, held my nose, and poured cheap wine down my throat when I was a kid. Not at all. I got the bottle, tipped it up, and drank it myself. Who would believe me if I said somebody forced me to drink that stuff? I don't force that easy. The memory of that wine is so clear to me that the smell of it now makes me sick to my stomach.

And when I was going after my first record—which was how many windows I could break in a row without getting caught—I can't lay that idea on anybody else's doorstep. It was all my own, and I got all the way up to 200 before the Houston police looked me up to talk about it.

These were things that happened when I thought I had nothing going for me, but it was mostly my own attitude toward life that made it so. There was the high school there in the bloody Fifth Ward of Houston. I dropped out of it in the ninth grade. It was my decision, not the school's. That and the other things caused my mother—bless her for all the suffering she endured for me—to have a nervous breakdown. That was my decision, being a bad guy, not hers. I had about lost faith in everything before I was even started.

Then, like Paul on the way to Damascus in the Bible story, my vision cleared up and the time came to make a right decision.

It was in an unlikely place, a Houston pool hall, and the TV set was on. Johnny Unitas was on the tube, doing one of those public-service spots. He was recruiting, and he was saying he was once a down-and-outer himself.

Boy, was he on my wavelength, talking my language! I half-listened to him at first, and then he said he had this one skill, and finally got a chance to use it, and made it big. To anybody listening who needed a skill to get a job, he said, why not give the Job Corps a try?

So, I laid down that pool cue, and picked up hope. That's for me, I told myself, and they took me. There was some money in it, $30 a month, and $50 to go in the bank, and they'd send some home to my mother. Did she ever need it!

It wasn't until then that it began to come to me what America was really all about, how there were things being done to really try to help people such as me find some way out. I was in a Job Corps Center in Oregon at first, and then went to a big one, the Parks Job Corps Center near Pleasanton, Calif., which had a big company running it, Litton Industries.

About this time, R. Sargent Shriver, the head of the Office of Economic Opportunity, was telling the centers to throw the troublemakers out. Now I was one of those guys who was always getting in fights—and I was headed out, no question about it. To be honest, I didn't care all that much.

But the center director there was a man named Dr. Stephen Uslan, a fine man. He kept saying I was the kind of material the center had been set up to deal with. It wouldn't solve anything, he said, just throwing George Foreman out. I had been thrown out of a lot of things by then, and it hadn't impressed or improved me much, was the way he put it. And then he said the words that really turned George Foreman around:

"If he likes to fight so much," he told his staff, "put him in the ring down in the rec hall and let him get it out of his system that way."

Now in the slum I came from, there wasn't too much talk about working for anything. People got money from being what was called "smart"—or from taking advantage of somebody.

But I began to find out what a long way it is from just an idea to a real, accomplished dream. Because as a boxer, I was awkward. If I could connect I could jolt them—but I needed a lot of honing.

Work is such a big four-letter word. It meant sweat. It meant getting banged around. It meant being more tired than I had ever been in my life. And sore in more places, too. But when I went into the Golden Gloves, I found it paid off. I won.

Then there were the Olympic trials in Toledo, Ohio. I made the 1968 Olympic team by a hair. Litton sent my coach, Doc Broadus, and one of its executives, a onetime Air Force colonel, Barney Oldfield, down to Mexico City with me.

What I didn't know then was that as early as June, 1968 (the Olympics were in October), Barney had written to several friends of his, sportswriters, people like that, telling them to inter-

WHY PLANT A GROUND COVER?

In many areas and situations, ground covers are more appropriate and more satisfactory than turf. They are able to grow and thrive in sun OR shade, and in poor soil.

On steep slopes where mowing is difficult, ground cover is much more effective and much less laborious to maintain than grass. Ground covers hold the soil as well as turf and the textures are far more interesting.

Small areas of grass are a continual chore to keep mown and trimmed but ground covers require almost no care. They are excellent protection and soil conditioners. They hold the fallen leaves from blowing away, thus helping to add annually to the humus content.

WHY CREEPING RED SEDUM?

One of Sedum's most valuable assets is its full time beauty. Lush foliage begins in early spring, and star-shaped wine red flowers delight the viewer from late June through September. The attractive semi-evergreen foliage lasts well into winter, maintaining its rich green and bronze color nearly all year round.

Besides being one of the loveliest of the ground covers, Sedum also rates high on the other requirements. It is hardy, grows well in sun or partial shade, in sandy soil, clay soil, or good soil.

Its thick foliage and root system hold the soil on slopes or banks. The neat 3-4" cover forms a dense perennial mat to bring green and wine red beauty to slopes, borders, rocky areas, anywhere beauty and durability are needed.

Each plant will easily and quickly spread to fill one sq. ft. Sedum spreads evenly, maintains its uniform smooth beauty at all stages of growth. Unlike some other ground covers, Sedum, also called "Dragon's Blood," stays where you put it — does not straggle out into places where it doesn't belong. Sedum is almost indestructible, enduring and persisting against heavy climatic and nutritional odds.

George Foreman: His Love for America

view me in Mexico City because, he said: "George Foreman will win the gold medal, and go on to be heavyweight champion of the world."

It meant a lot to me, finding out such things, and that other people were believing in me. And because I like kids, I found the ones who lived in slums as I had, and others, too, were beginning to hang around me. They wanted to talk to me and they were paying attention to what I said. The more I won, the more they tuned me in. What a difference it makes when you first have that feeling that people are looking up to you, and not down on you!

That night, after winning in Mexico City, I couldn't bear to take the gold medal from around my neck. It was my badge, my reminder. People had been telling me the truth: Work and get with it, and you can have it all.

The next big goal was the world championship. It was not easy. The road was bumpy, and had turns in it, lots of them. There were some places we fought in where we almost had to borrow money, or hock something, to get out of town. We had trouble getting opponents. Boxing writers were saying I fought Joe Namelesses and Bill Whozitses, and that I had to get more experience, when I couldn't get most of the ones I fought to stand up long enough to give me any. There was wood to split. And at 6:30 a.m., running those three-mile exercises when other people were still asleep. Then the gym, the bag—the little one and the big one—over and over.

I was hurting for money. I wanted to get married to Adrienne, a pretty girl I knew. A guy can't be smart enough to dodge everything. I signed some papers with some people, without paying much attention to what they were, just so I could get married.

Then the big chance came, and I signed for the fight with Joe Frazier for the championship in Jamaica. But right then, everything went sour in my mouth. For I found that in the fight business you pick up partners, people who know how to play you and your desires, and they have more to say about you than they should. When you have been living from day to day all your life, the implications of what you sign today don't look as big as they will tomorrow.

I got caught up in one of these things, not the first fighter to have it happen to him nor probably the last. But it upset me so, the only thing I could think of was quitting the ring. Then I remembered Barney Oldfield. I called him on the phone and told him I didn't want to fight Joe Frazier, even if I knew I could beat him. So many people had gotten their hands into my money, I didn't want to be another sad story in boxing for people to write about.

But Barney told me: "George, the only thing you can do is go knock Joe Frazier out, and then come back and show people you can take all this. If you don't go ahead with the fight, they'll all be writing you're scared or something."

Suddenly, it all cleared up for me. I was really fighting everybody but Joe Frazier, and he was the one to beat. "They" didn't mean anything. It was just the same old "they" to blame things on again, and I was beyond that. I had to be. What I was in was a business, and I had to treat it like a business, where contracts were contracts, and if I didn't have integrity about a contract, however bad it might be, what would I have left?

"I went down to the foot of the old training table, got down on my knees, and thanked my God."

It was off to Jamaica, even though my wife, Adrienne, was pregnant, and the baby was due. On January 6, there in Kingston, I heard that my baby girl, Michi Helene, had been born in far off Minneapolis. On January 10, I became 24 years old. On January 22, after a minute and a half of the second round and after he had been knocked down six times, Joe Frazier—the favorite of almost every boxing writer and odds-maker in the world—had lost his heavyweight crown. It was mine!

The first thing I did in my dressing room that night after the fight in Jamaica was close the door, with Doc Broadus and Barney Oldfield in there with me. I went down to the foot of the old training table, got down on my knees, and thanked my God—for everything, for everybody, and for the determination He gave me to see it through. Perhaps there are several who deserve as much as I do to be champion, and perhaps they, too, will have their chance. But none can feel any more fortunate than I do. fw view me in Mexico City because, he said: "George Foreman will win the gold medal, and go on to be heavyweight champion of the world."

It meant a lot to me, finding out such things, and that other people were believing in me. And because I like kids, I found the ones who lived in slums as I had, and others, too, were beginning to hang around me. They wanted to talk to me and they were paying attention to what I said. The more I won, the more they tuned me in. What a difference it makes when you first have that feeling that people are looking up to you, and not down on you!

That night, after winning in Mexico City, I couldn't bear to take the gold medal from around my neck. It was my badge, my reminder. People had been telling me the truth: Work and get with it, and you can have it all.

The next big goal was the world championship. It was not easy. The road was bumpy, and had turns in it, lots of them. There were some places we fought in where we almost had to borrow money, or hock something, to get out of town. We had trouble getting opponents. Boxing writers were saying I fought Joe Namelesses and Bill Whozitses, and that I had to get more experience, when I couldn't get most of the ones I fought to stand up long enough to give me any. There was wood to split. And at 6:30 a.m., running those three-mile exercises when other people were still asleep. Then the gym, the bag–the little one and the big one–over and over.

Smart Cooking

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares a barbecue that's a little different. "When we think of barbecue," says Marilyn, "we think of beef. But lamb is delicious grilled over an open fire. In this recipe, the whole leg of lamb is boned and marinated, to insure juicy slices with a just-right charcoal flavor."

Juicy Barbecued Lamb

MARILYN'S MENU

Tiny Curried-Shrimp Appetizers
Salted Cashews
Grilled Minted Leg of Lamb*
Orzo Salad*   Sliced Tomatoes
Grilled Pepper Pots   Corn on the Cob
Crusty Rolls   Butter or Margarine
Light Dry Red Wine
Sliced Fresh Peaches
Sour Cream   Brown Sugar
Coffee   Tea   Milk

*Recipe given

GRILLED MINTED LEG OF LAMB

1 cup dry white wine
¼ cup finely chopped fresh mint leaves or 2 teaspoons dried mint leaves
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
Butterflied leg of lamb*

1. Combine marinade ingredients in large shallow glass or ceramic container.

2. Place lamb in marinade, turning to coat both sides. Cover with plastic film; marinate in refrigerator for about 3-4 hours. Turn lamb once during marinating time.

3. Remove lamb from marinade. Grill about 4 inches from medium-hot coals for about 15 minutes per side for medium doneness.

4. Brush occasionally with marinade during grilling. To check for doneness, make a small cut in thickest part of meat.

5. Place grilled lamb on cutting board. Slice crosswise in ¼-inch-thick slices.

Makes 8 servings

*Select a 7-8-lb. leg of lamb. Have your butcher remove the bone and flatten the leg so that it's roughly the same thickness throughout and resembles a steak.

Backyard treat: Grilled Minted Leg of Lamb and Grilled Pepper Pots. Orzo Salad completes the menu. (Orzo is a rice-shaped pasta that's great with barbecues.)

ORZO SALAD

1¼ cups (8 ozs.) orzo or tiny shell-shaped pasta
Salt
3 qts. boiling water
⅓ cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1¼ teaspoons basil leaves, crushed
½ teaspoon oregano leaves
1 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives
⅓ cup chopped onion
1⅔ cups sliced celery
½ cup chopped parsley
Freshly ground black pepper
1 small cucumber, sliced
2 medium tomatoes, cut in wedges
Whole pimiento-stuffed green olives for garnish

1. Gradually add orzo and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain in colander. Rinse with cold water and drain again.

2. Blend oil, vinegar, Worcestershire, basil and oregano leaves in large bowl. Add orzo, sliced olives, onion, celery and parsley. Toss until combined. Cover with plastic film and refrigerate for several hours.

3. At serving time, season to taste with salt and several twists freshly ground black pepper.

4. Spoon salad into serving bowl, surround with cucumber and tomatoes. Garnish with a few whole olives.

Makes 6-8 servings

Smart Cooking

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares a barbecue that's a little different. "When we think of barbecue," says Marilyn, "we think of beef. But lamb is delicious grilled over an open fire. In this recipe, the whole leg of lamb is boned and marinated, to insure juicy slices with a just-right charcoal flavor."

Juicy Barbecued Lamb

MARILYN'S MENU

Tiny Curried-Shrimp Appetizers
Salted Cashews
Grilled Minted Leg of Lamb*
Orzo Salad*   Sliced Tomatoes
Grilled Pepper Pots   Corn on the Cob
Crusty Rolls   Butter or Margarine
Light Dry Red Wine
Sliced Fresh Peaches

*Recipe given

Backyard treat: Grilled Minted Leg of Lamb and Grilled Pepper Pots. Orzo Salad completes the menu. (Orzo is a rice-shaped pasta that's great with barbecues.)

GRILLED MINTED LEG OF LAMB

1 cup dry white wine
¼ cup finely chopped fresh mint leaves or 2 teaspoons dried mint leaves
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
Butterflied leg of lamb*

1. Combine marinade ingredients in large shallow glass or ceramic container.

2. Place lamb in marinade, turning to coat both sides. Cover with plastic film; marinate in refrigerator for about 3-4 hours. Turn lamb once during marinating time.

3. Remove lamb from marinade. Grill about 4 inches from medium-hot coals for about 15 minutes per side for medium doneness.

4. Brush occasionally with marinade during grilling. To check for doneness, make a small cut in thickest part of meat.

5. Place grilled lamb on cutting board. Slice crosswise in ¼-inch-thick slices.

Makes 8 servings

*Select a 7-8-lb. leg of lamb. Have your butcher remove the bone and flatten the leg so that it's roughly the same thickness throughout and resembles a steak.

ORZO SALAD

1¼ cups (8 ozs.) orzo or tiny shell-shaped pasta
Salt
3 qts. boiling water
⅓ cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1¼ teaspoons basil leaves, crushed
½ teaspoon oregano leaves
1 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives
⅓ cup chopped onion
1⅔ cups sliced celery
½ cup chopped parsley
Freshly ground black pepper
1 small cucumber, sliced
2 medium tomatoes, cut in wedges
Whole pimiento-stuffed green olives for garnish

1. Gradually add orzo and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain in colander. Rinse with cold water and drain again.

2. Blend oil, vinegar, Worcestershire, basil and oregano leaves in large bowl. Add orzo, sliced olives, onion, celery and parsley. Toss until combined. Cover with plastic film and refrigerate for several hours.

3. At serving time, season to taste with salt and several twists freshly ground black pepper.

4. Spoon salad into serving bowl, surround with cucumber and tomatoes. Garnish with a few whole olives.

Makes 6-8 servings

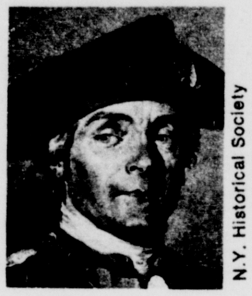
The True Story Behind "I Have Not Yet Begun to Fight"

The U.S. Flag Nobody Knows

By Don L. Spring

"He rammed her, entangling the yards and putting her guns muzzle to muzzle with those of the 'Bonhomme Richard.' The 'Bonhomme Richard' was mortally damaged."

John Paul Jones



N.Y. Historical Society

John Paul Jones certainly faced a crisis the night of September 23, 1779. He had skillfully placed his converted old East Indiaman flagship, the "Bonhomme Richard," alongside the "Serapis," a brand-new 50-gun British frigate, just off the moonlit cliffs of Yorkshire, England. When he gave the orders to fire, two of his 18-pound cannon exploded, incapacitating some of his gunners and terrorizing the rest. To make matters worse, one of his American-built frigates, the "Alliance," captained by a half-mad and insubordinate Frenchman named Peter Landais, appeared and began firing on the "Poor Richard"!

The manner in which Jones handled this crisis made him the hero of countless legends and ballads that have been repeated and sung to this day. It was also a mighty sea victory, won under Jones' own version of a brand-new flag—the Stars and Stripes. That colorful Early American flag Jones flew was to remain in obscurity for many years and has only recently been rediscovered. It is, in effect, the American flag that nobody knows.

Congress had adopted the Flag Resolution on June 14, 1777, in which it described the Stars and Stripes for the first time. The same day, it gave John Paul Jones command of the newly built "Ranger." As it turned out, no modern-day public relations man ever promoted a product better than Jones did the new flag. On February 14, 1778, he induced the admiral of the French fleet to exchange salutes with his vessel. This was the first formal recognition of the Stars and Stripes by a foreign power.

No sailors in the world excelled the Americans in the Revolutionary War, and John Paul Jones was himself excelled by none for bravery and resolution. He was in command of a small squadron that was headed by the "Bonhomme Richard," which he named to compliment Ben Franklin, then U.S. Ambassador to France, and in honor of one of "Poor Richard's" most popular maxims: "If he wishes to have any business faithfully and expeditiously performed, he must go on it himself." Jones and the "Bonhomme Richard" squadron had been cruising around the British coast capturing ships that, if free, would have otherwise lengthened the war, which at that time was in its fourth year.

The details of the battle are familiar to most students of naval history. In the darkness Jones maneuvered his ship very close to the "Serapis," under the command of veteran Capt. Richard Pearson, who hailed the "Bonhomme Richard," thinking that she was a merchant vessel: "What are you laden with?" In the true American humorous tradition, the reply came, "With round grape and double-headed shot!"

And so the battle began. . . .

After the first terrible broadside when his guns exploded, Jones realized that his only chance was to keep the "Serapis" in close, like a fighter in a clinch. He rammed her, entangling the yards and putting her guns muzzle to muzzle with those of the "Bonhomme Richard." The "Bonhomme Richard" was mortally damaged, her decks ripped and her rudder useless. The pumps were barely keeping up with the water that was surging into her pierced hull. Jones ordered his men to put out grappling hooks and stand by to board the "Serapis."

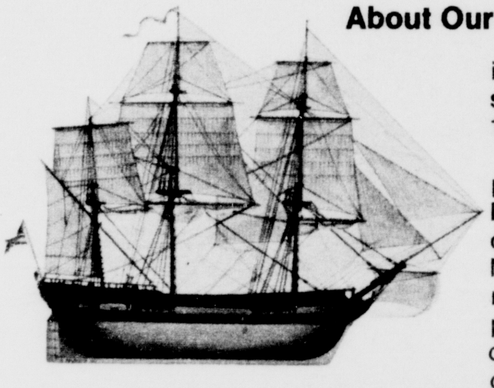
Captain Pearson was now in for a surprise. He shouted to Jones, "Do you ask for quarter?" There are some arguments about Jones' reply, but tradition says that he roared, "I have not yet begun to fight!" And, because Jones would not quit, Pearson had no choice but to surrender his sword and his ship.

When the two vessels were disentangled, it was seen that the "Bonhomme Richard's" damage was beyond repair. Jones made the "Serapis" his flagship and, two days after the battle, he "saw with inexpressible grief the last of the 'Bonhomme Richard.' "

With the "Serapis" barely seaworthy and strong English forces at his heels, Jones made for the Texel, an island off the Dutch coast. Upon arrival, the British ambassador demanded that the Dutch seize Jones and his crews as pirates, since they sailed under the flag of no recognized nation.

The careful and methodical Dutch sent an artist out to make a precise painting of Jones' flag. Although the charges of piracy evaporated, that obscure Dutch artist's rendition of the flag that Jones had carried to glory over the "Serapis" still exists as one of the earliest known representations of the Stars and Stripes as first displayed at sea.

About Our Cover



Our front cover was chosen from the International Historical Watercraft Collection by Melbourne Smith. While more than 500 detailed ship paintings have been rendered by this maritime artist during the past 20 years, 296 of his unpublished paintings were lost when the artist was shipwrecked on the French coast in 1959.

A colorful series of 21 yachts was published by American Heritage Press in a volume entitled "America's Cup Defenders." And the U.S. Naval Institute commissioned a series of 48 naval sailing ships to be published as framing prints. Many of his paintings, now in the hands of private collectors, commemorate family ties with old sailing ships.

Melbourne Smith spent much of his life as a professional sailing master. He is still an avid ocean racer, and is a maker of boat models and a knowledgeable boat builder. He is also a book designer.

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO TRY THIS NEW PIPE!

So different that it's patented by the
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
patent number 3267941

"MAGIC INCH"

U.S. Patent 3267941

This top grade Mediterranean briar incorporates a sensational invention that contradicts every idea you've ever had about pipe smoking. It completely eliminates breaking-in. Tars, sludge, bite, and bitterness never reach your mouth. When you switch to a Carey Pipe, you get cleaner, cooler, sweeter, tastier, moisture-free thoroughly enjoyable smoking. The coupon below will bring you my FREE TRIAL OFFER which gives you a CAREY PIPE to smoke on a test basis for a whole month.

Please send me another Carey Pipe for my brother. I have about every kind of pipe you can think of. When in the Service, I purchased pipes in France, Germany and Switzerland, but this is the best pipe I have today. There just couldn't be a better tasting, sweeter smoke than you get from the Carey Pipe.

L. S., Edwardsville, Illinois

You may be a pipe smoker with a rack full of pipes and still searching for the ideal smoke, or perhaps you would like to switch to a pipe to cut down on cigarettes or expensive cigars.

Not too long ago the Surgeon General shocked the nation with his nerve shattering report on smoking and health. A federal law was passed requiring every package of cigarettes sold in the United States to bear this message, "Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health."

AS A RESULT, Americans by the thousands switched to pipe smoking. Most of them were utterly disappointed because they just couldn't tolerate the tongue bite, the bitterness, the sludge, the slugs of foul tasting goo, and the stale after-taste that results from smoking an ORDINARY pipe.

Over 30 Years Ago

I suffered the same disappointments. I bought one pipe after another, always looking for the ideal pipe. I bought the best pipes money could buy, and I bought all the disappointing, so called improved pipes with fancy gadgets and gimmicks, but never found a single solitary pipe that would smoke hour after hour, day after day, without bitterness, bite or sludge.

It was then, with considerable doubt, I decided to work out something for myself. After months of experimenting and scores of disappointments, suddenly, almost by accident, I discovered how to harness four great natural laws to give me everything I wanted in a pipe. It didn't require any "breaking-in." From the first puff it smoked cool—it smoked mild. It smoked right down to the last bit of tobacco without bite. It never has to be "rested." Yet, it is utterly impossible for goo or sludge to reach your tongue, because my invention dissipates the goo as it forms.

The Carey Pipe may look like any ordinary pipe, but it's a lot different! In fact, there's nothing like it in the whole world. The Carey Pipe is made of the finest aged mediterranean briar—but, its big secret lies in the exclusive patented "MAGIC INCH," cleverly concealed in a bite proof nylon stem.

It's Not A Filter

The "Magic Inch" is not a filter that gets soggy and loaded with foul smelling goo. A soggy foul smelling filter transmits its stale foul odor into each successive puff of smoke, creating more problems than it solves.

It's Not A Trap

The "Magic Inch" is not a trap collecting moisture that gurgles with every draw. It is not a trap that must be cleaned after every smoke.

It's Almost Magic

Not my magic but NATURE'S OWN MAGIC. Warm winds pick up moisture by evaporation from the oceans, lakes, rivers, and streams, lift it high into the atmosphere where the cooler upper air squeezes it into drops of water that fall back to earth in its most perfect state of purity. Just as the colder upper air of the atmosphere causes rain, the cool air entering the "Magic Inch" chamber through the special louvres of the patented Carey stem, causes immediate condensation of the moisture in the smoke where it drops to the bottom of the chamber, is absorbed by the natural fiber sleeve of the "Magic Inch," and in turn, is evaporated into the outside air. No accumulation ever remains to form sludge or slugs of bitter tasting goo. The "Magic Inch" also mixes purifying oxygen with the smoke from the tobacco, in perfectly controlled proportions, cooling the smoke, eliminating all tongue bite, and creating MELLOWNESS, MILDNESS, and SWEETNESS that was never before enjoyed in pipe smoking.

When I first started making the Carey "Magic Inch" Pipe as a hobby and gave several of them to my pipe smoking friends, little did I know that their enthusiasm and persistant demands for more pipes for themselves and their friends would make my part-time hobby grow into the most unusual pipe business in the world.

Today, over one hundred and fifty thousand pipe smokers smoke Carey Pipes almost exclusively. They all got started by accepting my most unusual offer to test a Carey Pipe for 30 days, without any risk on their part whatsoever.

They were all granted the same option, an option which is yours also. After 30 days, if you agree that the Carey Pipe is the best smoke of your life, you may keep it; if you don't agree, whack it with a hammer and return the broken pieces to me. The trial has cost you nothing! How many businesses are that sure of their product?

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO TRY THIS NEW PIPE!

So different that it's patented by the
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
patent number 3267941

"MAGIC INCH"
U.S. Patent 3267941

This top grade Mediterranean briar incorporates a sensational invention that contradicts every idea you've ever had about pipe smoking. It completely eliminates breaking-in. Tars, sludge, bite, and bitterness never reach your mouth. When you switch to a Carey Pipe, you get cleaner, cooler, sweeter, tastier, moisture-free thoroughly enjoyable smoking. The coupon below will bring you my FREE TRIAL OFFER which gives you a CAREY PIPE to smoke on a test basis for a whole month.

Please send me another Carey Pipe for my brother. I have about every kind of pipe you can think of. When in the Service, I purchased pipes in France, Germany and Switzerland, but this is the best pipe I have today. There just couldn't be a better tasting, sweeter smoke than you get from the Carey Pipe.

L. S., Edwardsville, Illinois

You may be a pipe smoker with a rack full of pipes and still searching for the ideal smoke, or perhaps you would like to switch to a pipe to cut down on cigarettes or expensive cigars.

Not too long ago the Surgeon General shocked the nation with his nerve shattering report on smoking and health. A federal law was passed requiring every package of cigarettes sold in the United States to bear this message, "Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health."

AS A RESULT, Americans by the thousands switched to pipe smoking. Most of them were utterly disappointed because they just couldn't tolerate the tongue bite, the bitterness, the sludge, the slugs of foul tasting goo, and the stale after-taste that results from smoking an ORDINARY pipe.

Over 30 Years Ago

I suffered the same disappointments. I bought one pipe after another, always looking for the ideal pipe. I bought the best pipes money could buy, and I bought all the disappointing, so called improved pipes with fancy gadgets and gimmicks, but never found a single solitary pipe that would smoke hour after hour, day after day, without bitterness, bite or sludge.

It was then, with considerable doubt, I decided to work out something for myself. After months of experimenting and scores of disappointments, suddenly, almost by accident, I discovered how to harness four great natural laws to give me everything I wanted in a pipe. It didn't require any "breaking-in." From the first puff it smoked cool —it smoked mild. It smoked right down to the last bit of tobacco without bite. It never has to be "rested." Yet, it is utterly impossible for goo or sludge to reach your tongue, because my invention dissipates the goo as it forms.

The Carey Pipe may look like any ordinary pipe, but it's a lot different! In fact, there's nothing like it in the whole world. The Carey Pipe is made of the finest aged mediterranean briar—but, its big secret lies in the exclusive patented "MAGIC INCH," cleverly concealed in a bite proof nylon stem.

It's Not A Filter

The "Magic Inch" is not a filter that gets soggy and loaded with foul smelling goo. A soggy foul smelling filter transmits its stale foul odor into each successive puff of smoke, creating more problems than it solves.

It's Not A Trap

The "Magic Inch" is not a trap collecting moisture that gurgles with every draw. It is not a trap that must be cleaned after every smoke.

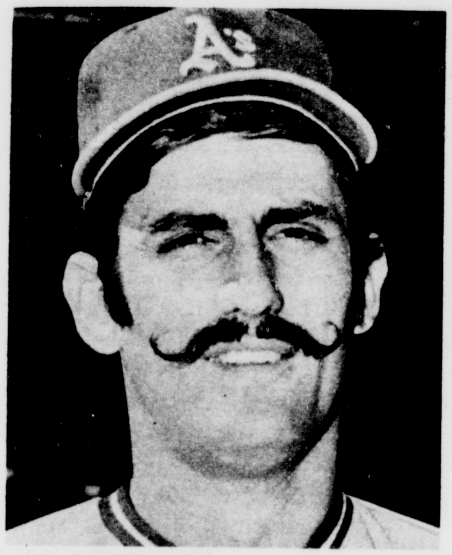
ROLLIE FINGERS:
His Absentmindedness Saved Reggie Jackson's Life



Reliefer Rollie Fingers of the world-champion Oakland A's is baseball's most absentminded player. He once went up to bat in an exhibition game—and forgot to bring the bat with him. Another time he caused gales of laughter in the Oakland Stadium by keeping his hat over his heart for the National Anthem after everybody else had taken their seats. He became frantic over his missing motorcycle once—forgetting that his wife Jill had borrowed it. . . . Fingers' forgetfulness, however, proved a lifesaving boon one day to teammate Reggie Jackson. Fingers and another player were supposed to pick up Jackson on the way to the ball park, but Rollie forgot, so Jackson had to take a cab. Near the park, another car collided with Fingers' car, crushing its back seat and rolling it over. Jackson would have been sitting in that seat. The impact would almost certainly have killed him. . . . Fingers is not absentminded on the mound. He showed this last year when he scored 21 saves as a relief pitcher and played a key role in Oakland's championship drive. And although Oakland is having its problems this year, Fingers' earned-run average is still one of the lowest in the majors. "One reason he seems to be absentminded is that he's always thinking about his job and forgets about other things," says his attractive wife, who's a sports columnist. . . . Fingers, whose handlebar moustache makes him a photographer's delight, is a native of Cucamonga—the California town Jack Benny jokes about. He pitched and played left field for the Upland High School baseball team and got a great deal of encouragement from the team's statistician—the girl who later became his wife. . . . Rollie's career almost ended in 1967—his second season in pro ball—when a line drive smashed into his face and knocked him unconscious. He was placed on the disabled list for a few months and only began to regain his skills in 1971. His brilliant pitching last year proved that he has recovered completely.

People and You

Do People Push You Around?

If you have the constant feeling that people are pushing you around, a change of attitude may ease your problem. You have to decide who is running your life, and you have to gain faith in your own ability. People who doubt they can accomplish anything live from day to day. "No use planning ahead. Something always comes up," they say. Other favorite expressions are, "I have a lot of bad luck," or "There's no use in trying to get anywhere in this life." Because they do not plan and have no faith in their luck or ability, they often feel they're being pushed around by others. This makes them tense and anxious about their daily lives. Or else they may give up and fatalistically accept whatever happens to them. "I can't do anything about it" is their reaction. The person who feels that his life is going to work out pretty much the way he wants has an active rather than a passive outlook. He plans ahead. He tries to make things work out. Even when he fails, he maintains an active attitude that makes him feel he is guiding his own life. People like this do not feel pushed around.

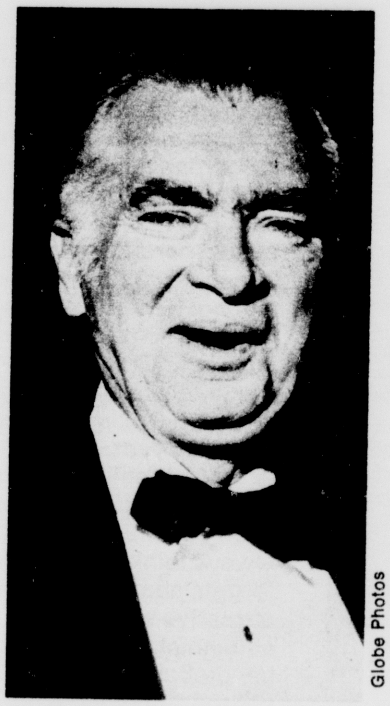
TV's Buddy Ebsen:

"I'm What You Call a Pussycat!"



Globe Photos

FAMILY WEEKLY: There's a big difference between the character of hillbilly Jed Clampett in "The Beverly Hillbillies" and detective Barnaby Jones in "Barnaby Jones." Which do you like better?

BUDDY: The lazy part of me likes Jed. But then there's that other part of me that wants to do new things in new situations. I was comfortable being Jed. And I didn't have to learn so many lines, because it was a half-hour show with six other people carrying the load too. Now I'm in practically every shot, and it's an hour show. But Barnaby is unlimited. He can go anywhere, do anything, meet anybody. I like that!

FW: Barnaby has an air of dignity about him. But so did the character of Jed Clampett. How did you accomplish that?

BUDDY: I knew that if Jed tried to be funny, the show would go right out the window. When I was asked to accept the role in the first place, I said, "I'll do it—but only under one condition."

FW: And that was . . . ?

BUDDY: That Jed always had control of the fifty million dollars! That way he had the authority, the dignity, the power to be supreme in his household.

FW: The strain of making a television series has been known to wear out men of 20. How old are you?

BUDDY: I just got a letter from the Government saying I'm eligible for Medicare.

FW: Do you think the public empathizes with your new personality?

BUDDY: "Lawrence of Arabia" was showing on TV the night of our first show and I thought we'd be wiped out. But we scored higher than both "Lawrence" and "Hec Ramsey," which is a well-received show. I think that's a good indication of how the public feels.

FW: You wrote a book, didn't you?

BUDDY: Yes, I did. Enjoyed doing it. About the catamaran race I won.

FW: What race was that?

BUDDY: The 1968 Trans-Pacific Multi-Hull Race from Los Angeles to Honolulu. I called the book "Polynesian Concept," which is the name of my 35-foot catamaran.

FW: What made you decide to write a book about the event?

BUDDY: A couple of weeks after I won, I was home in Newport Beach and I met a little old lady out walking her dog. She said, "Congratulations! I heard you won. Were you aboard?" Only my lightning-fast thinking and self-control kept me from hitting her in the mouth! That's when I decided to write the book, to set people straight.

FW: You have seven children. Do you feel any communication gap between you and them?

BUDDY: Not at all. Of course, the oldest ones are married now, but I've always gotten involved in the things my kids are interested in. For instance, for the last two summers Bonnie has played summer stock with my wife and me. I hope to launch her film career in an episode of "Barnaby Jones" next season.

FW: Do you consider yourself a strict father?

BUDDY: I think I'm what you call a pussycat. They can walk all over me. I'm not a screamer. If I did that they'd never believe me. But I do have to admit, when I tell them in a quiet, firm voice, they respect that.

FW: Did you always want to be in show business?

BUDDY: No. I wanted to be a doctor. But that was in 1927. The Florida boom had ended, and nobody had any money. I couldn't afford medical school. So I went to work at whatever I thought I could do—which was dancing a little bit. (My father was a dancing teacher.) I had $26.65 in my sock when I took off for New York. I jerked a lot of sodas before I ended up in the chorus of "Whoopee," starring Eddie Cantor. I went on to nightclubs and vaudeville—one-night stands. I was known as a song-and-dance man for a long time. Even when I came to Hollywood, I did musicals like "Broadway Melody of 1936" for MGM.

FW: How did you get out of the rut?

BUDDY: Not easily. But Disney finally put a coonskin cap on me for a role in "Davy Crockett." Then I sat tight for straight parts.

FW: You and your wife have been married since 1945. What do you think is the secret of a long and happy marriage?

BUDDY: I don't know. We're still trying to find out. But sometimes I think marriages would have a better chance if people fought it.

FW: Fought getting married?

BUDDY: Right. They should get married only as a last resort, when they are more miserable apart than together. If they get married just because they feel like it, there's little hope for survival.

THE OSMOND BROTHERS
"Peace and love to all people"

The Osmond Brothers and prayer: "During the concert seasons, the Osmonds maintain the same religious routines they follow when they are at home. They say a prayer before each meal. . . . Before leaving the hotel they say a prayer too. They ask for a blessing that they will all return safely. By saying it at the beginning of their day, the Osmonds feel they're better prepared to meet the day with a smile and a cheerful outlook! A prayer and a blessing is said also by the entire family before the boys go onstage for a concert. They ask that the show be a success, and not a disappointment to anyone who has gone to the trouble [to come]. They also pray that the show is done in the best spirit possible, because it's their way to spread peace and love to all people." From "Traveling With the Osmonds!" by Aggie Anunciacion (Tiger Beat, 95¢).

QUOTE: Sen. Harold E. Hughes (D-Iowa), of the Senate Armed Services Committee, says there has never been a better time to substantially reduce our troops overseas: "Right now, more than one U.S. soldier in every four is still stationed overseas. Yet while the Pentagon slashes at domestic troop levels, it plans to bring home only 4,000 of the 500,000 troops in areas excluding southeast Asia. Allegedly, these domestic base reductions are being made to save about $400 million per year. If that is the goal, then why don't we bring home and deactivate just one of our divisions in Europe and save $580 million per year?" UNQUOTE.

Do you grind your teeth? Don't take the matter lightly, because stress-induced teeth grinding and jaw clenching can lead to muscle spasms, wearing away of the teeth, and can even force teeth out of alignment. It's also the cause of severe facial pain, jaw clicking and limited jaw movement, which until recently puzzled doctors and dentists. A University of Illinois team found that teeth grinders can be treated with medication to help them relax and break the tension cycle.

One woman's viewpoint

What does a lady fight promoter think about people in the boxing game? Here's what 60-year-old Aileen Eaton says after 30 years of managing the boxing operation at Olympic Auditorium in Los Angeles: "Managers and fighters are reputed not to be the finest people, but I've found them to be nice—although there are some Damon Runyon-character types. Fighters are different from other athletes. All the good ones have the killer instinct once they're in the ring—except Muhammad Ali. I think he must be gentle, because he doesn't like to hurt anyone."

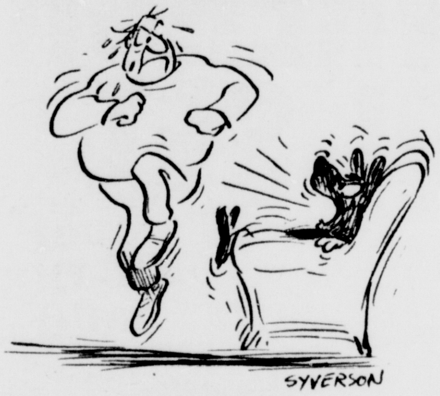
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



ON THE RUN

Running in place is recommended for those who are unable to get outside to exercise.—News item

Running in place is a splendid thing
To do in your living or bedroom,
As long as the floor is quite sturdily built
And you're sure you have plenty of headroom.

No fear of a dog at your heels, and no fear
Of neighbors persistently gawking.
No need to slow down for a car or a bike,
Thus forced to leave running for walking.

Oh, running in place I know well, all too well;
It seems that my life has been such.
For I've run and I've run and I've run and I've run
And never got anywhere much.

It was my cousin's birthday and she was going to be four. We told her to blow out the candles on her birthday cake, but to make a wish first. She blew out all the candles in one blow. Then we asked her what she wished for, and she said she wished that all the candles would go out.
